Remarks

The main objective of the pilot project will be to investigate and analyse the possibilities for a creation, under the current framework, of a European Diplomatic Academy. This pilot project will establish a robust evidence base to decide on options as regards the possibilities for a creation, under the current framework, of a European Diplomatic Academy providing training, including in support of preparation for possible entry into the EEAS and Union delegations, through a developed teaching of courses and subjects:

- A study of existing national, and where appropriate, international academies and their programmes with the aim of envisaging what a European Diplomatic Academy would be able to add to this landscape. This can also entail an analysis of existing academic institutions such as the European University Institute (EUI), the College of Europe and other structures such as the European Security and Defence College (ESDC) and the European School of Administration (EUSA). This study will also analyse the potential set-up and delivery model of such an academy as well as its cost.

- Several projects can be run in parallel to the study in order to test possible features of the European Diplomatic Academy in practice and evaluate their impact and inform the study, such as a European Diplomatic Academy pilot course / dry run consisting of a two-month residential pilot programme for a selected group of 60 recruits and trainee diplomats from Member States and Union institutions; and 'Erasmus for Diplomats' allowing some 60 young diplomats in their first years of service to spend up to two months in the Foreign Service of another Member State or in the EEAS, including a randomly selected Union delegation. This pilot course of 'Erasmus for Diplomats' can also explore the possibility for EEAS staff to spend up to two months at headquarters in Member States different from the one of their nationality. If these pilot courses are successful, they can lead to a one-year academic programme.

The pilot project will be able to finance the study, under the actual conditions, of the creation of such a European Diplomatic Academy, and the running of these two pilot courses as described above.

Extending the pilot project by one year will provide a more solid basis, thereby ensuring sustainability of the project. The aim of the second phase of the pilot project will be two-fold:

- Through an extension of the study, provide more analysis and options for the creation of a European Diplomatic Academy by providing a training needs analysis, and by looking in particular into target groups of a future academy, including the possibility of those interested in becoming Union diplomats in the future who are not diplomats of a Member State. The study should also analyse the preparation for possible entry into the EEAS and Union delegations.
- Organise a second pilot academic year (following on the one foreseen in the first phase of the pilot project), in order to incorporate its results, as of the dimension of the participation of diplomats of Member States in the future European Diplomatic Academy. Participants should, in principle, as during the first phase, be around 60 recruit and trainee diplomats from Member States and Union institutions.

With this second year, the two elements of the pilot project, i.e. the study and the pilot academic programme as mentioned above, should deliver the necessary robust evidence base and analysis concerning the legal and administrative set-up, delivery model, governing bodies and budgetary requirements for a future European Diplomatic Academy. The outcomes of the analysis should refer also to the possible locations for the European Diplomatic Academy, which could be situated in different existing academic and diplomatic training institutions in the Union, highly specialized in Union external action, in order to gain from their academic and practical experience in the field.

Legal basis
