Screening of foreign investments in the Union

Amendments adopted by the European Parliament on 8 May 2025 on the proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on the screening of foreign investments in the Union and repealing Regulation (EU) 2019/452 of the European Parliament and of the Council (COM(2024)0023 – C9-0011/2024 – 2024/0017(COD)) ⁽¹⁾

(1) Investments in the Union contribute to its growth by improving its competitiveness, creating jobs and economies of scale, and bringing in capital, technologies, innovation and expertise. (3) However, under international commitments made in the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), and the trade and investment agreements concluded with third countries, it is possible for the Union and Members States to restrict foreign direct investments (FDIs) on the grounds of security or public order, subject to certain requirements.	(3) However, Article 21(2) TEU states that the Union's policies and actions aim to safeguard its values, fundamental interests, security, independence, and integrity. Those principles and objectives underpin the Union's common commercial policy, as set out in Article 207 TFEU including in relation to foreign investment. Within that context, international commitments made in the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), and the trade and investment agreements concluded with third countries, allow the Union and Member States to restrict foreign direct investments (FDIs) on the grounds of security or public order, subject to certain requirements.

⁽¹⁾ The matter was referred back for interinstitutional negotiations to the committee responsible, pursuant to Rule 60(4), fourth subparagraph (A10-0061/2025).

(4) In accordance with Regulation (EU) 2019/452 of the European Parliament and of the Council () a framework has been set up for screening FDI into the Union by Member States. In particular, that Regulation has set out a cooperation mechanism enabling Member States and the Commission to exchange information on FDIs and raise concerns about risks to security or public order. That cooperation mechanism required the Member State where the FDI was planned or completed to give due consideration to the comments issued by other Member States and the opinion issued by the Commission in its screening decision.	(4) In accordance with Regulation (EU) 2019/452 of the European Parliament and of the Council () a framework has been set up for screening FDIs into the Union by Member States. 	(6a) Moreover, a new legislative instrument is necessary due to the evolving nature of investment flows. The integration of global economies, combined with war and geopolitical tensions, has led to the emergence of new risks that need to be addressed by the Union and the Member States. On 20 June 2023, the Commission presented a Communication to the European Parliament, the European Council, and the Council on the 'European Economic Security Strategy,' which identifies FDI screening as a tool to protect the Union against economic security risks. The strategy underscores the need to address risks associated with the resilience of supply chains, physical and cyber security of critical infrastructures, technology security and leakage, and the weaponisation of economic dependencies or economic coercion. Those economic security risks are also relevant in the context of the screening of foreign investments, as they could have a negative impact on fundamental societal interests such as prosperity, sovereignty, safety, and the operation of the social market economy, and thereby on Member States' and the Union's public order.

	(7a) Acquisitions through resolution tools under the respective resolution frameworks (for banks, central counterparties or insurance or reinsurance undertakings) should be excluded from the scope of this Regulation. In resolution, time is of the essence and decisions are often made literally overnight. The in-depth screening procedures provided for in this Regulation are not in line with the need for a timely response. In order to avoid financial stability risks, resolution transactions should therefore be excluded. Resolution authorities should take into account, to the extent possible, this Regulation when performing resolution actions with the involvement of a foreign investor, in particular when strategic assets are involved.

(8) A significant majority of Member States, but not all, have a legislative instrument in place that provides for a mechanism to screen FDIs. In many Member States, national laws also extend to screening intra-Union investments. Among the Member States, there are substantial differences as to the scope, thresholds and criteria used to assess whether an investment is likely to negatively affect security or public order. There are also differences in the screening processes. In certain Member States, the investment can be implemented before having received clearance with respect to the impact on security and public order. However, others require that the investment is only finalised after authorisation under the screening mechanism. Such divergences create a problem for the smooth functioning of the internal market. For example, they create an uneven playing field and increase compliance costs for investors seeking to notify transactions in more than one Member State . This Regulation helps in reducing divergences on key elements of the mechanisms implemented at national level. This is crucial to ensure predictability for investors on the applicable national regimes and their characteristics, thereby reducing the associated compliance costs. This is all the more relevant considering the level of integration of internal market, which may result in a single transaction impacting multiple Member States across the Union. (9) To ensure a consistent approach to foreign investment screening across the Union, all Member States should be required to screen foreign investments on the grounds of security or public order. Therefore, the core elements of national screening mechanisms should be harmonised. That minimum harmonisation includes the scope of investments to be screened, the screening procedure’s essential features, and the interaction between the national mechanism and the Union cooperation mechanism. In addition, Member States should also be able to extend the scope of their national screening mechanism to include other types of foreign investments, foreign investments in other sectors, additional Union targets or economic activities that the relevant Member State considers critical for its security or public order. When they do so, such screening should also comply with the provisions of this Regulation. It is essential to establish a harmonised and streamlined approach across Member States, which ensures that foreign investments which may have implications for security and public order are subject to consistent scrutiny and efficient decision-making. To that end, screening mechanisms should minimise administrative complexity, avoid unnecessary delays and take into consideration the limited resources of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) when applied to them. Furthermore, the Commission should act in a coordinating role to ensure greater security for the Union while minimising inefficiencies and fragmented approaches.

(12) Screening foreign investments should be carried out in accordance with this Regulation, taking into account all factual information available and adhering to the principle of proportionality and other principles enshrined in the Treaties. Moreover, the screening of foreign investments which are carried out through subsidiaries of the foreign investor established in the Union should in all cases comply with the requirements stemming from Union law, and in particular with the Treaty provisions on freedom of establishment and free movement of capital, as interpreted in the case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, consistently with the objective of preserving an open and inclusive internal market. Any restrictions to the freedom of establishment and free movement of capital in the Union, including the screening and measures arising from screening, such as mitigating measures and prohibitions should be based on a genuine and sufficiently serious threat to a fundamental interest of society, and should be appropriate and necessary as set out in the case law of the Court of Justice. At the same time, when assessing the justification and proportionality of a restriction, the specificities of investments within the Union operated through a subsidiary of a foreign investor may be taken into account when assessing any restrictions on freedom of establishment or to the free movement of capital, including where appropriate in any Commission opinion adopted pursuant to this Regulation. This should be done taking into account the integration of Member State schemes into a Union-wide cooperation mechanism.	(12) Screening foreign investments should be carried out in accordance with this Regulation, taking into account all factual information available and adhering to the principle of proportionality and other principles enshrined in the Treaties. Greenfield foreign investments should fall within the scope of this Regulation to the extent they are considered relevant by a Member State for the purpose of the screening of foreign investments because they create lasting and direct links between a foreign investor and such facilities or such undertakings. In addition, by setting up new facilities, a foreign investor can impact on security and public order, including when that risk concerns essential economic inputs. Member States are therefore encouraged to include greenfield foreign investments in the scope of transactions covered by their screening mechanisms, in particular when such investments occur in sectors relevant to their security or public order or when they present characteristics such as size or essential nature to be relevant to their security or public order. 	(28b) Within the allocation of responsibilities between Member States and the Commission provided for by this Regulation, national screening authorities face limitations in investigating foreign investment transactions beyond their geographical borders, which can have an impact on the effectiveness of their analysis. For example, this could be the case where customers of the target company are located in another Member State, while their views may be essential to assess the target's sensitivity to security or public order risks, such as the availability of alternative suppliers for the target's goods or services. Given its cross-border perspective, the Commission is well-placed to address those limitations and contribute to the assessment of the impact of foreign investment transactions on security and public order. To that end, it should be granted appropriate investigative powers to gather necessary information. The Commission should be able to request information from entities in another Member State when such information cannot be efficiently obtained through the cooperation mechanism. The Commission's power to request information should be based on a justified request from a Member State. However, when national authorities face legal or procedural constraints, such as short procedural timelines, the Commission should be able to act independently, provided that the host Member State has been notified. That power should be limited to information necessary to assess the impact of a transaction on more than one Member State, including adverse effects on Union programmes and projects.
