Recital K

First part: 'whereas the big data sector is growing by 40 % per year, seven times faster than the IT market; whereas the concentration of large datasets produced by new technologies offers crucial information for large corporations, triggering unprecedented shifts in the balance of power between citizens, governments and private actors;'

Second part: 'whereas such concentration of power in the hands of corporations might consolidate monopolies and abusive practices and have a detrimental effect on consumers' rights and fair market competition;'

Third part: 'whereas the interests of the individual and the protection of fundamental rights should be further scrutinized in the context of big data mergers;'

Recital O

First part: 'whereas data analysis and algorithms increasingly impact on the information made accessible to citizens;'

Second part: 'whereas such techniques, if misused, may endanger fundamental rights to information as well as media freedom and pluralism; whereas the system of public broadcasting in Member States is directly related to the democratic, social and cultural needs of each society and to the need to preserve the plurality of the media, as stated in the Protocol on the system of public broadcasting in the Member States to the Amsterdam Treaty (11997D/PRO/09);'

§ 4

First part: 'Stresses that individuals' poor knowledge and understanding about the nature of big data allows personal information to be used in unintended ways;'

Second part: 'notes that education and awareness about fundamental rights is of primary importance in the EU;'

Third part: 'urges the EU institutions and Member States to invest in digital literacy and awareness-raising about digital rights, privacy and data protection among citizens, including children; underlines that such education should address the understanding of the principles/logic of how algorithms and automated decision-making processes work and how to meaningfully interpret them; stresses, moreover, the need to educate with a view to fostering understanding on where and how data streams are collected (i.e. web scraping, combining streaming data with data from social networks and connected devices and aggregating that information into a new data stream);'

Tuesday 14 March 2017

§ 16

First part: 'Takes the view that the use of end-to-end encryption should also be encouraged'

Second part: 'and, where necessary, mandated'

Third part: 'in accordance with the principle of data protection by design; recommends that any future legislative framework to this end specifically prohibits encryption providers, communications service providers and all other organisations (at all levels of the supply chain) from allowing or facilitating "backdoors";'

§ 31

First part: 'Warns that, owing to the intrusiveness of the decisions and measures taken by law enforcement authorities — including by means of data processing and data analytics — into the lives and rights of citizens, maximum caution is required in order to prevent unlawful discrimination and the targeting of certain individuals or groups of people defined by reference to race, colour, ethnic or social origin, genetic features, language, religion or belief, political or any other opinion, property, birth, disability, age, gender, gender expression or identity, sexual orientation, residence status, health or membership of a national minority'

Second part: 'which is often the subject of ethnic profiling or more intense law enforcement policing, as well as individuals who happen to be defined by particular characteristics;'
