OPINION OF THE EUROPEAN CENTRAL BANK

of 15 June 2018

on mortgage amortisation requirements

(CON/2018/30)

Introduction and legal basis

On 19 April 2018, the European Central Bank (ECB) received a request from Finansinspektionen (the Swedish financial supervisory authority) for an opinion on a draft proposal for an amendment to existing mortgage amortisation requirements (hereinafter the 'draft proposal').

The ECB's competence to deliver an opinion is based on Articles 127(4) and 282(5) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union and the sixth indent of Article 2(1) of Council Decision 98/415/EC¹, as the draft proposal contains rules applicable to financial institutions insofar as they materially influence the stability of financial institutions and markets. In accordance with the first sentence of Article 17.5 of the Rules of Procedure of the European Central Bank, the Governing Council has adopted this opinion.

1. Purpose of the draft proposal

- 1.1 The overall purpose of the draft proposal is to counteract macroprudential and financial stability risks associated with excessive indebtedness, to further increase households' resilience to macroprudential disturbances and to harmonise the rules applicable to institutions providing mortgages for the domestic housing market in Sweden. In particular, under the draft proposal existing mortgage amortisation requirements applicable to credit institutions which operate under the Banking and Finance Business Act (BFA)² (i.e. banks, savings banks, cooperative banks and other credit institutions) and provide mortgages in the domestic housing market in Sweden will also apply to credit providers operating under the Mortgage Credit Business Act (MCA)³.
- 1.2 In 2016, Finansinspektionen introduced a progressive amortisation requirement based on a loan-to-value ratio⁴, and in March 2018 an additional amortisation requirement was introduced based on the debtor's debt-to-income ratio⁵ (hereinafter together the 'existing mortgage amortisation requirements').

- 1.3 Following the introduction of the first amortisation requirement in 2016, Directive 2014/17/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁶ (hereinafter the 'Mortgage Credit Directive'), was implemented in Sweden through the MCA. The MCA provides that creditors acting under the MCA must impose repayment requirements that are compatible with a sound amortisation culture and that counteract excessive household indebtedness⁷. The draft amendment will have the effect of aligning mortgage amortisation requirements applicable to creditors operating under the MCA with the existing amortisation requirements applicable to credit institutions operating under the BFA.
- 1.4 In addition, the draft amendment introduces an exemption from the mortgage amortisation requirements for amortisation-free mortgages which are granted for an undefined term and repaid only when the debtor sells the property due to old age, failing health or death (typically granted to elder citizens and referred to as "equity release credits"). The Mortgage Credit Directive specifically states that the Directive will not apply to equity release credit agreements⁸, therefore implying that creditors acting under the MCA may be permitted to offer equity release credits. In order to allow credit institutions operating under the BFA to operate on the same terms and on a level playing field, the draft proposal provides the option to all creditors to exclude equity release credits from amortisation requirements.
- 1.5 Finally, the procedure for the adoption of the draft proposal is the same as for the existing mortgage amortisation requirements⁹. This means that Finansinspektionen must obtain the Government's consent before the draft amendment enters into force¹⁰.

2. General observations

- 2.1 The ECB welcomes the core objectives of the draft proposal, namely to limit excessive household indebtedness and to counteract macroprudential and financial stability risks, as well as to further increase households' resilience in relation to macroprudential instabilities¹¹. The harmonisation of the applicability of existing mortgage amortisation requirements helps to reduce regulatory arbitrage as between credit institutions operating under the BFA and creditors operating under the MCA.

- 2.2 The ECB notes that equity release credits are exempted from amortisation requirements as the Mortgage Credit Directive permits creditors operating under the MCA to offer equity release credits. In this regard, the ECB suggests that the Swedish authorities thoroughly analyse the potential implications of this exemption for credit and property markets and regularly assess whether maintaining the exemption is justified in view of potential risks to financial stability, the safety and soundness of the banking system and distortions to competition, or whether mitigating actions might be required.
- 2.3 The ECB refrains from making any observations regarding the possible institutional implications for Finansinspektionen's operational independence as a macroprudential authority arising out of the requirement that Finansinspektionen must obtain the Government's consent before any regulations on amortisation requirements enter into force¹².

This opinion will be published on the ECB's website.
