Proposal for a

DIRECTIVE OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL

laying down minimum rules to prevent and counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, and replacing Council Directive 2002/90/EC and Council Framework Decision 2002/946 JHA

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

1. CONTEXT OF THE PROPOSAL

• Reasons for and objectives of the proposal

Migrant smuggling is a criminal activity that disrespects human life and strips people of their dignity in the pursuit of profit, violating fundamental rights as well as undermining the migration management objectives of the EU.

Fighting and preventing migrant smuggling is one of the priorities of the European Union and crucial to addressing irregular migration in a comprehensive way. Criminal networks take advantage of people's despair and use land, sea, and air routes to facilitate irregular migration, putting people's lives at risk and seeking in every way to maximise their profits.

In her State of the Union address on 13 September 2023, President von der Leyen called for strengthening of all the tools at disposal of the EU to effectively counter migrant smuggling, by updating the current, more than 20-year-old legislative framework. She also called for strengthening the governance on migrant smuggling and increasing the role of EU agencies, in particular of Europol. She also emphasised the need to work with partners to tackle this global challenge, and this is why the Commission is organising an International Conference, creating a Global Alliance with a Call to Action to fight migrant smuggling.

Migrant smuggling to and within the EU is reaching new heights, fuelled by increasing demand due to emerging and deepening crises, most notably economic recessions, environmental emergencies caused by climate change, as well as conflicts and demographic pressure in many third countries. Migrant smuggling drives the increase of irregular arrivals to the EU: in 2022, around 331 000 irregular entries were detected at the EU external borders, the highest level since 2016, representing a 66% increase compared to the previous year¹. In 2023, until the end of September, approximately 281 000 irregular border crossings were detected at the external borders of the EU, representing an 18% increase compared to the same period in 2022. This coincides with an increase in the smuggling activities, evidenced by a new record with over 15 000 migrant smugglers reported by Member States to Frontex in 2022². Taking into account the increase in irregular arrivals in 2023 and the various worldwide crises in a range of countries of origin and transit, consistently high and potentially increased migratory flows to Europe³ and related smuggling criminal activities can be expected.

It is estimated that more than 90% of the irregular migrants who reach the EU make use of the services of smugglers⁴, mostly organised in criminal groups. Moreover, smuggling networks make substantial profits from their criminal activities, with estimates ranging between EUR 4.7 – 6 billion worldwide annually⁵. Providing a strong and firm response to smugglers' activities is therefore of primary importance to reducing irregular migration. It is estimated that the activities of ruthless migrant smugglers, especially at sea, resulted in a staggering death toll of over 28 000 people⁶ since 2014.

Around half of the migrant smuggling networks are also involved in other crimes, such as trafficking in human beings, drugs and firearms smuggling, while also facilitating unauthorised movements within the EU. Law enforcement and judicial authorities are faced with multiple and constantly evolving challenges: the rapidly changing and adapting modi operandi of smugglers; the increased use of threats and violence vis-à-vis the migrants as well as law enforcement authorities⁷; the difficulties to locate and arrest smugglers who hide in countries outside the EU; the use of a broad variety of means of transport, including unseaworthy, less detectable vessels (such as fishing boats and makeshift metal boats), road vehicles in which migrants are dangerously concealed, as well as commercial and charter flights increasingly used to bring migrants to countries close to or bordering the EU, from where migrants then seek to irregularly enter the EU⁸; the use of digital tools at all stages of the process, with online advertising of smuggling services, routes and prices as well as for forging documents; the use of crypto-currencies, digital money or other unofficial forms of payment (e.g. hawala)⁹.

Tackling migrant smuggling is essential to dismantling organised crime networks that can cause human rights violations and death, and to countering the increase in irregular migration to the EU. A comprehensive and sustainable approach to migration requires a combination of robust and efficient actions complementing mutually beneficial partnerships with countries of origin and transit, addressing the root causes of migration and in particular irregular migration, and at the same time fighting organised crime including migrant smuggling and trafficking in human beings. The New Pact on Migration and Asylum¹⁰ puts preventing and countering migrant smuggling at the centre of its comprehensive approach to migration.

The existing EU legal and operational framework on migrant smuggling needs to be modernised and reinforced to enhance the tools at the disposal of the European Union to prevent and respond to this continuously evolving crime, including in the context of the legal obligations on the Union and its Member States under international law under the United Nations Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air.

This proposal for a Directive is part of a set of measures that operationalise the call of President von der Leyen and aim to modernise and strengthen the existing legal framework and provide the Union with rules which are fit for purpose. It updates and modernises the existing EU criminal law rules of the “Facilitators Package”, composed of Directive 2002/90/EC establishing a common definition of the offence of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit, and residence¹¹, and Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA on the strengthening of the penal framework to prevent the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit, and residence¹².

This proposal is accompanied by a Commission proposal for a Regulation¹³, which enhances police cooperation as well as the powers of Europol in the area of migrant smuggling and trafficking in human beings notably by codifying the establishment of the European Centre Against Migrant Smuggling within the Europol and reinforcing its related powers. The proposal enhances the strategic and operational tasks of Europol on fighting migrant smuggling to steer and support the Centre’s activities and to identify and implement operational priorities and actions. It establishes a governance framework, which includes Member States' entities responsible for migrant smuggling, the Commission, and other EU agencies. It strengthens inter-agency cooperation with Frontex and Eurojust and reinforces cooperation between Europol and third countries.

This package is presented on the day of the International Conference launching a “Global Alliance to counter migrant smuggling”. With this Conference, the Commission is creating a framework for strong political cooperation with international partners to jointly counter migrant smuggling globally.

These three initiatives complement the existing initiatives in the area of countering migrant smuggling, implementing the renewed EU action plan against smuggling (2021-2025)¹⁴ by modernising the existing EU legal framework to sanction migrant smugglers acting on the migratory routes, and setting out a renewed legal, operational and international cooperation framework against migrant smuggling for the years to come.

Together, these proposals aim to modernise the legal framework to fight the smuggling of migrants, to ensure that we have the necessary legal and operational tools to respond to the new modus operandi of smugglers, as set out in the Commission work programme 2024 announced on 17 October 2023.

Objectives of the proposal

The current EU legal framework on facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence in the EU was adopted in 2002 under provisions pre-dating the Treaty of Lisbon. The general objective of this proposal for a Directive is to bring about a modern EU criminal law instrument that clearly defines and effectively sanctions the offence of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the EU, in line with the provisions of Article 83 of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union and the United Nations Protocol against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air.

This proposal for a Directive serves the following specific objectives:

- Ensuring an effective investigation, prosecution and sanctioning of organised criminal networks responsible for migrant smuggling

The 2017 REFIT evaluation of the current Facilitators Package, and the subsequent monitoring of its implementation, pointed to the challenges linked to a broad definition on what constitutes a crime of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence. Namely, it pointed to the fact that it has not been effective in creating clarity and legal certainty about the distinction between facilitation of irregular migration and humanitarian assistance, due to the broad definition of the offence and the absence of exemptions. This proposal brings clarity on which offences should be criminalised. These include facilitation conducted for financial or material benefit or the promise thereof; facilitation that is highly likely to cause serious harm to a person even though conducted without financial or material benefit; and in cases of public instigation of third-country nationals, for instance through the internet, to enter, transit across or stay irregularly in the European Union. The proposal also clarifies that the purpose of the Directive is not to criminalise third-country nationals for the fact of being smuggled, assistance provided to family members, or humanitarian assistance or the support of basic human needs provided to third-country nationals in compliance with legal obligations.

Furthermore, the refined definition also provides that the offence of facilitation can take place within the territory of any Member State, facilitating judicial cooperation between Member States.

– More harmonised penalties that take account of the seriousness of the offence

Since the adoption of the Facilitators Package in 2002, criminal networks involved in migrant smuggling have increasingly resorted to violence towards migrants and law enforcement authorities, endangering lives. The proposal introduces the definition of aggravated criminal offences (e.g., offence committed as part of an organised criminal group, causing serious harm or endangering life or health, causing death) to which there are corresponding higher level of criminal penalties. The minimum level of maximum penalties in the proposed Directive are higher than those provided for by the current Facilitators Package (which envisaged a maximum level of imprisonment of at least 8 years) and have been determined taking into account the overall regime of the penalties introduced by EU criminal law instruments. The main offence of facilitation would be punishable by a maximum level of imprisonment of at least 3 years, while aggravated offences (e.g. organised crime, use of serious violence) for at least 10 years and the most serious offences (causing death) 15 years.

– Improving the jurisdictional reach

The people who are organising and conducting migrant smuggling activities often reside outside the EU and are therefore outside the reach of the jurisdiction of the Member States. To increase the possibilities of sanctioning high-value targets who are organising smuggling activities and to avoid a situation where no State is able to exercise jurisdiction over serious and tragic smuggling cases happening for instance in international waters, the proposed Directive expands the jurisdiction of the Member States to cases in which the facilitation of unauthorised entry into the EU fails and third-country nationals lose their lives: this is, for instance, the case in which unseaworthy boats sink in international waters, therefore before reaching the territorial waters of a Member State or a third country. The proposed Directive also expands jurisdiction over offences committed on board of ships or aircrafts registered in a Member State or flying its flag, and offences committed by legal persons doing business but not necessarily established in the EU.

– Reinforcing Member States resources to tackle and prevent migrant smuggling

To ensure that Member States effectively counter migrant smuggling, the proposed Directive requires Member States to make sure that the relevant law enforcement and judicial authorities are adequately resourced, sufficiently trained and specialised to ensure effective prevention, investigation and prosecution of offenders. In addition, Member States should also work on the prevention of migrant smuggling, through information and awareness-raising campaigns, research and education programmes.

– Improving data collection and reporting

Lack of robust, comprehensive and comparable data on migrant smuggling offences and criminal justice responses at national and European level has been identified in the 2017 evaluation¹⁵ as a key element hindering the assessment of the effects of the Facilitators Package in the Member States; furthermore, it prevents national policy makers and practitioners from monitoring and measuring the effectiveness of their measures. To address this shortcoming and ensure better monitoring, the proposal requires Member States to collect and report statistical data on an annual basis. This would contribute to a better understanding of the nature and scale of migrant smuggling, the detection of cases and the responses of the criminal justice systems of the Member States, supporting evidence-based policy making.

- Consistency with existing policy provisions in the policy area

This proposal is consistent with the New Pact on Migration and Asylum, which provides for a strong European response to migrant smuggling inside and outside the EU as an essential part of the comprehensive approach to migration. It implements the renewed EU action plan against smuggling (2021-2025)¹⁶, by updating and modernising the existing EU legal framework to sanction migrant smugglers acting on the migratory routes. The proposal is consistent and coherent with the EU Action Plans presented by the Commission on the Central Mediterranean, the Eastern Mediterranean, the Western Mediterranean and Atlantic, and the Western Balkans routes, as well as with the Toolbox addressing the use of commercial means of transport to facilitate irregular migration to the EU¹⁷ and the proposal for a Regulation on measures against transport operators that facilitate or engage in trafficking in persons or smuggling of migrants in relation to illegal entry into the territory of the European Union¹⁸. It is also in line with commitments of comprehensive partnerships on migration undertaken at international level.

This proposal is also consistent with the UN Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime to which the European Union is party. The UN Protocol includes financial or other material benefit as a constituent element of the crime and provides that third-country nationals are not to become liable to criminal prosecution under the Protocol for having been subject to the offence.

The proposal supports the objectives of the EU Security Union Strategy¹⁹, the EU strategies to tackle Organised Crime 2021-2025²⁰ and on Combating Trafficking in Human Beings 2021-2025²¹, as well as the revised EU Maritime Security Strategy²².

The proposal is consistent with the Commission's 2020 Guidance on the implementation of EU rules on definition and prevention of the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence²³, which asserts that humanitarian assistance mandated by law (for example in the framework of search and rescue operations) cannot and must not be criminalised, that criminalisation of any non-state actors that carry out search and rescue operations at sea, complying with the relevant legal framework, amounts to a breach of international law and is therefore not permitted by EU law and that, where applicable, an assessment of whether an act falls within the concept of 'humanitarian assistance' – a concept that cannot be construed in a manner that would allow an act mandated by law to be criminalised – should be carried out on a case-by-case basis, taking into account all the relevant circumstances.

- Consistency with other Union policies

The proposal for a Directive is in line with the policy aims pursued by the Union, and in particular with:

2. LEGAL BASIS, SUBSIDIARITY AND PROPORTIONALITY

• Legal basis

The legal basis for this proposal is Article 83(2) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union (TFEU), which sets out the EU's competence to establish minimum rules if the approximation of criminal laws and regulations of the Member States proves essential to ensure the effective implementation of a Union policy in an area which has been subject to harmonisation measures. The area of common immigration policy, notably the conditions of entry and residence, illegal immigration and unauthorised residence, and the management of the external borders of the EU, has already been subject to harmonisation by virtue of the Union acquis in the area of Title V TFEU on Freedom, Security and Justice, Chapter 2 policies on border checks, asylum and immigration, and it is essential to ensure its effective implementation through the approximation of criminal laws and regulations of the Member States.

• Subsidiarity

Migrant smuggling is a cross-border crime directly affecting the Union, its external borders and often more than one Member State at the time. Member States acting alone cannot successfully address this cross-border crime successfully. Further approximation in the definition of the offence, the levels of sanctions and the applicable preventive measures in the Member States can ensure more effective action in detecting, investigating and prosecuting migrant smuggling and preventing forms of “forum shopping” by criminals taking advantage of systems where penalties are less severe.

To increase the deterrent effect of the sanctions in the Union, the proposal introduces aggravated offences, to which there are corresponding higher penalties, as well as aggravating circumstances, for instance in case of recidivism, if the offence is committed by a public official or by a person carrying a firearm. At the moment, according to the information at the Commission's disposal, maximum level of criminal penalties for facilitation of unauthorised entry and transit in the Member States range from up to one year in Belgium and Spain to up to 10 years in Bulgaria, Cyprus, Ireland and Slovenia. Criminal penalties for facilitation of residence in the Member States range from up to one year in Austria, Belgium, Czechia, Estonia and Spain to up to 15 years in Cyprus for facilitation of residence. Fifteen Member States²⁸ since 2015 have found it relevant to amend their national legislation (amendments are currently pending in three Member States²⁹) with the changes including stricter penalties³⁰, criminalisation of smuggling³¹ attempt and the exemption of humanitarian assistance of unauthorised transit³².

In accordance with the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality as set out in Article 5(3) of the Treaty on European Union, the objectives of the proposal cannot be sufficiently achieved by Member States and can thus be better achieved at the Union level. Due to the transnational dimension of migrant smuggling, and considering already existing EU legislation, action at EU level is expected to be more effective and efficient and to bring a tangible added value compared to action taken by Member States individually. EU intervention would create added value by further approximating criminal law of Member States and contributing to ensuring a common playing field between Member States.

- Proportionality

In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in Article 5(4) of the Treaty on European Union, the proposed Directive is limited to what is necessary to reinforce the EU framework on preventing and countering migrant smuggling and does not go beyond what is necessary to achieve the policy objectives at stake.

In order to specifically address serious forms of migrant smuggling, for instance those that result in serious harm or loss of life, which are currently not explicitly mentioned in the Facilitators Package, the proposal for a Directive is introducing the definition of aggravated criminal offences, as well as a set of aggravating and mitigating circumstances, which ensure the proportionality of the criminal penalties, in line with the principle of proportionality of criminal penalties as enshrined in Article 49(3) of the Charter.

- Choice of the instrument

In accordance with Article 83(2) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, the approximation of criminal laws and regulations of the Member States that is essential to ensure the effective implementation of a Union policy in an area which has been subject to harmonisation measures, can only be achieved by means of a Directive of the European Parliament and the Council adopted in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure.

3. RESULTS OF EX-POST EVALUATIONS, STAKEHOLDER CONSULTATIONS AND IMPACT ASSESSMENTS

- Ex-post evaluations/fitness checks of existing legislation

An evaluation of the Facilitators Package was carried out in the framework of the Commission's Regulatory Fitness and Performance Programme (REFIT) in 2017. It aimed at assessing whether the Facilitators Package was fit-for-purpose. To this effect, the effectiveness, efficiency, relevance, coherence and EU added value of the existing provisions were evaluated. The evaluation showed that all Member States transposed the Facilitators Package and amended their legislation accordingly. The adoption of the Facilitators Package clarified the distinction between the offences of migrant smuggling and trafficking in human beings and allowed for further approximation of the definition of the offence with all Member States introducing sanctions for the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence.

The evaluation findings pointed to a serious lack of reliable and comparable data on migrant smuggling offences and criminal justice responses at national and European level, affecting almost all evaluation criteria. Due to the limited availability of data, it is not possible to assess how and to what extent increases in detection and prosecution of facilitators, or the enhanced cooperation between Member States, are directly linked to the implementation of the Facilitators Package. Collecting and analysing reliable and timely submitted statistical data on crime and criminal justice is indispensable for developing evidence-based policy at EU level.

Available data and stakeholders' views highlighted both critical and satisfactory elements in relation to the effectiveness of the Facilitators Package in reaching its objectives. For example, while the deterrent effect of this legislation was questioned against the background of increasing migrant smuggling to the EU, the approximation of the penal framework was assessed more positively.

Differences were noted also across the different categories of stakeholders, who expressed diverse and sometimes contradicting views on different aspects of the Facilitators Package. Most of the individuals and organisations consulted were strongly in favour of a modification of the existing definition of the offence. Despite the fact that the current Article 1(2) of the Facilitation Directive leaves the choice to the Member States to exempt from criminal sanctions the facilitation of unauthorised entry and transit when it is conducted on humanitarian grounds, this provision was criticised for its optional character, entailing a lack of clarity and legal certainty. Concerns were raised by the representatives of civil society about the perceived risks of criminalisation of assistance provided by civil society organisations or individuals assisting and/or working with irregular migrants.

These perceptions and criticisms concerned both humanitarian assistance provided within the territory of a Member State as well as at the borders or on the high seas, despite the different legal frameworks that apply to such conducts. The analysis of the implementation of the Facilitators Package revealed the existence of varied approaches to what constitutes a crime across Member States: whereas in certain Member States the practice of the authorities is to focus on cases of facilitation when committed with a lucrative intent or by organised criminal groups, in others, due to the broad definition of the offence, people providing services to irregular migrants in the context of their professional activities or providing assistance for selfless reasons have also been prosecuted.

- Stakeholder consultations

The Commission had a series of targeted consultations with a wide range of stakeholders on the implementation of the Facilitators Package. These consultations included Member States law enforcement and judicial authorities, relevant EU Agencies (Eurojust, Europol, the European Border and Coast Guard Agency, the Fundamental Rights Agency) and civil society representatives who were consulted in the framework of the preparation of the evaluation of the Facilitators Package in 2017, in the preparation of the Commission Guidance on the implementation of EU rules on definition and prevention of the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence in 2020, in the preparation of the renewed EU action plan against smuggling (2021-2025) and in the course of 2023 as part of the monitoring and mapping of the implementation of the Facilitators Package in the Member States.

In general, stakeholders positively assessed the approximation of the criminal framework in the Member States. Divergent views were expressed by different categories of stakeholders on the definition of the offence and the optional character of exempting actions conducted on humanitarian grounds. Representatives of civil society organisations highlighted that a wide definition of the offence leads to a lack of clarity and legal certainty as well as to risks of criminalisation of humanitarian assistance by civil society organisations or individuals assisting and/or working with irregular migrants, whereas Member States did not refer to a need to narrow the definition of the offence or to introduce a mandatory exemption from criminalisation. However, due to the varied national approaches to the crime of facilitation that the effectiveness of common EU action, and in order to focus on offences committed with a lucrative intent in particular by organised criminal groups, it is necessary to clearly define the offence of facilitation. Consultation of Europol and Eurojust also pointed to the same approach because it would facilitate operational cooperation and response.

In the preparation of this proposal, the Commission consulted the Member States as well as Eurojust, Europol and the European Border and Coast Guard Agency on the main gaps in the EU legal and operational framework and on the possible response to those.

- Impact assessment

The proposal is exceptionally presented without an accompanying impact assessment. This proposal nevertheless builds on the evidence gathered through the REFIT evaluation of the Facilitators Package conducted in 2017, the public consultation on the renewed EU action plan against migrant smuggling (2021-2025), the information and evidence provided by Europol, Eurojust and Frontex, as well as on the engagement with the Member States and civil society stakeholders in the framework of monitoring the implementation of the current legal framework. The information and evidence gathered from these consultations pointed to shortcomings concerning a serious lack of reliable and comparable data on migrant smuggling offences and criminal justice responses at national and European level, the need to further align the definition of the offence and to more clearly define the criminal offence under EU legislation, in particular with regard to the element of financial gain, the optional character of the exemption from criminal sanctions of conduct aimed at providing humanitarian assistance, the perceived risks of criminalisation and the deterrent effect of the existing legislation.

- Regulatory fitness and simplification

In compliance with the Commission's Regulatory Fitness and Performance Programme (REFIT), all initiatives aimed at revising existing EU legislation should seek to simplify and deliver stated policy objectives more efficiently, i.e. by reducing unnecessary regulatory costs and the administrative burden on Member States. The proposed Directive aims at improving the Member States' capability to counter migrant smuggling efficiently, notably in relation to threats and trends that have emerged and evolved over the past two decades since the entry into force of the Facilitators Package.

The proposal will approximate the legal landscape addressing the criminalisation and sanctioning of migrant smuggling across the Member States. The new rules are expected to establish more legal certainty regarding criminalised conducts and to adapt criminal penalties to the seriousness of the offences.

- Fundamental rights

This proposal respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by Articles 2 and 6 of the Treaty on European Union and enshrined in the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union ('Charter').

Several fundamental rights and freedoms enshrined in the Charter are relevant in the context of countering migrant smuggling. These include the rights to respect for human dignity (Article 1), the right to life and physical integrity (Articles 2 and 3), the prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment (Article 4), the right to personal liberty (Article 6 of), the respect for private and family life (Article 7), the right to protection of personal data (Article 8), the right to property (Article 17), the right to asylum (Article 18), the rights of the child (Article 24), the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial (Article 47), the presumption of innocence and right of defence (Article 48), the principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties (Article 49), and the right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same offence (Article 50).

This proposal for a Directive, through the inclusion of aggravated criminal offences, aggravating and mitigating circumstances, the regime of sanctions on legal persons and the requirement of preventive measures, would increase the effectiveness of tackling the crime of migrant smuggling and ensuring a proportionate response. This also increases the protection of all relevant fundamental rights of the third-country nationals concerned.

The provisions introducing new offences or sanctions or amending the definition of the crime were thoroughly analysed in the light of the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial, the presumption of innocence and the right of defence, the principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties, and the right not to be tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same criminal offence. They were also analysed from the perspective of the respect of the freedom of assembly and of association and the right to family life.

This Directive will have to be transposed into national law respecting fundamental rights. In particular, Member States should ensure that the imposition of penalties respects the principles of the Charter, including the privilege against self-incrimination, the right to remain silent and the prohibition of being tried or punished twice in criminal proceedings for the same offence. Member States should also ensure that the procedural rights of suspected or accused persons in criminal proceedings are respected, as enshrined in the six EU Procedural Rights Directives, i.e. Directives 2010/64/EU³³, 2012/13/EU³⁴, 2013/48/EU³⁵, (EU) 2016/343³⁶, (EU) 2016/800³⁷ and (EU) 2016/1919³⁸ of the European Parliament and of the Council.

4. BUDGETARY IMPLICATIONS

This proposal has budgetary implications for the Union, notably additional human resources needed for the European Commission (4 FTEs) to ensure support to the Member States in the transposition and correct implementation of the legislative package that includes this Directive and the proposal for a Regulation on enhancing police cooperation in relation to the prevention, detection and investigation of migrant smuggling and trafficking in human beings, and on enhancing Europol's support to preventing and combating such crimes.

The annex to the Legislative Financial Statement accompanying this proposal and the proposal for a Regulation further details and justifies these needs.

5. OTHER ELEMENTS

- Implementation plans and monitoring, evaluation and reporting arrangements

In accordance with this proposal for a Directive, Member States are required to bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with it by one year after its entry into force at the latest and to communicate to the Commission the text of those provisions. The corresponding national provisions need to explicitly refer to this Directive.

- Explanatory documents (for directives)

No explanatory documents on the transposition are considered necessary.

- Detailed explanation of the specific provisions of the proposal

Article 1 – Subject matter: this provision sets out the scope of the proposed Directive, notably that it establishes minimum rules concerning the definition of criminal offences and sanctions on the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay of third-country nationals in the Union, as well as measures to better prevent and counter it.

Article 2 – Definitions: this provision contains definitions of the main terms used in the Directive, namely ‘third-country national’, ‘unaccompanied minor’ and ‘legal person’.

Article 3 – Criminal offences: this provision defines that intentionally assisting a third-country national to enter, transit across or stay within the territory of any Member State constitutes a criminal offence when there is an actual or promised financial or material benefit, or where the offence is highly likely to cause serious harm to a person. Publicly instigating third-country nationals, for instance through the internet, to enter, transit or stay in the Union irregularly is also considered to be an offence. The proposal also highlights in recitals that the purpose of the Directive is not to criminalise third-country nationals for the fact of being smuggled. Moreover, the recitals also clarify that it is not the purpose of this Directive to criminalise, on the one hand, assistance provided to family members and, on the other hand, humanitarian assistance or the support of basic human needs provided to third-country nationals in compliance with legal obligations.

Article 4 – Aggravated criminal offences: this provision defines the criminal offences related to more serious conducts concerning the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, e.g. where the offence is committed within the framework of a criminal organisation, causes serious harm to, or endangers the life of the third-country nationals concerned, is committed using serious violence, or the smuggled migrants are particularly vulnerable, including unaccompanied minors. Facilitation that causes the death of one or more third-country nationals is also an aggravated criminal offence.

Article 5 - Incitement, aiding and abetting, and attempt: this provision requires Member States to criminalise forms of aiding and abetting, inciting and attempting the offences referred to in this Directive.

Article 6 – Penalties for natural persons: this provision establishes minimum rules on the penalties for the offences and the aggravated offences defined in this Directive. Member States should ensure that these are punishable by effective, proportionate and dissuasive criminal penalties. The proposed level of penalties reflects the seriousness of the offences: the main criminal offence of facilitation should be punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of at least three years; aggravated offences should be punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of at least ten years; the most serious aggravated offences, notably those that cause death of third-country nationals, should be punishable by a maximum term of imprisonment of at least fifteen years. The proposed article also establishes the additional sanctions or measures that could be imposed to convicted natural persons.

Article 7 – Liability of legal persons: this provision contains obligations to ensure the liability of legal persons for offences referred to in this Directive where such offences have been committed for their benefit. The provision also provides that Member States ensure that legal persons can be held accountable for lack of supervision and control that has made possible the commission of a criminal offence for the benefit of the legal person. Moreover, the liability of the legal person should not exclude criminal proceedings against natural persons.

Article 8 – Sanctions for legal persons: this provision sets out the sanctions applicable to legal persons involved in the criminal offences covered by this proposal. Such sanctions must be proportionate to the seriousness of the offence. Imposed fines should range from 3% of the total worldwide turnover for the basic criminal offence, to 5% for aggravated offences, to 6% for the aggravated criminal offence causing death.

Article 9 – Aggravating circumstances: this provision sets out the aggravating circumstances to be considered by the judicial authorities when imposing sanctions in relation to the offences defined in this Directive.

Article 10 – Mitigating circumstances: this provision sets out the mitigating circumstances to be considered by the judicial authorities when imposing sanctions in relation to the offences defined in this Directive.

Article 11 – Limitation periods for criminal offences: this provision lays down the limitation periods to allow the competent authorities to investigate, prosecute and adjudicate the criminal offences covered by this proposal, as well as the execution of relevant sanctions, for a sufficient time. This proposal sets the minimum length of the limitation periods between seven (with a derogation to five) to fifteen years, depending on the seriousness of the offence.

Article 12 – Jurisdiction: this provision requires Member States to establish jurisdiction for the criminal offences defined in this proposal. Each Member State should establish its jurisdiction over offences committed partially or entirely in its territory, or committed by a national or habitual resident, or committed on a ship or aircraft registered in its territory, or for the benefit of a legal person established or operating on its territory. The provision also establishes that Member States should establish jurisdiction over attempts when it resulted in the death of the third-country nationals concerned.

Article 13 – Prevention: this provision requires Member States to take preventive actions to reduce the commission of the offences defined in this Directive, for instance through information and awareness raising campaigns and education programmes.

Article 14 – Resources: this provision aims at ensuring that national authorities which detect, investigate, prosecute and adjudicate on facilitation criminal offences have an adequate number of qualified staff and sufficient financial, technical and technological resources necessary to perform their tasks effectively.

Article 15 – Training: this provision requires Member States to provide specialised training for competent authorities and their staff and to ensure that there are adequate resources for this.

Article 16 – Investigative tools: this provision aims at ensuring that investigative tools which are provided for in national law for organised crime or other serious crime cases can also be used in cases of facilitation of irregular migration.

Article 17: Data collection and statistics: this provision addresses the need to systematically collect information on efforts to counter the facilitation of irregular migration and to provide statistical data on this crime for developing evidence-based policy at EU level. It requires Member States to collect, publish and send every year the relevant statistical data to the Commission.

Article 18: Replacement of Council Directive 2002/90/EC and Council Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA: this provision replaces the current provisions in the area of the criminalisation of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in relation to Member States bound by this Directive.

Article 19 – Transposition: this provision sets out the conditions of transposition, notably that Member States have to transpose the Directive into the national legal order within one year after the entry into force.

Proposal for a

laying down minimum rules to prevent and counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, and replacing Council Directive 2002/90/EC and Council Framework Decision 2002/946 JHA

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND THE COUNCIL OF THE EUROPEAN UNION,
Having regard to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and in particular Article 83(2) thereof,

Having regard to the proposal from the European Commission,

After transmission of the draft legislative act to the national parliaments,

Having regard to the opinion of the European Economic and Social Committee¹,

Having regard to the opinion of the Committee of the Regions²,

Acting in accordance with the ordinary legislative procedure,

Whereas:

- (1) The facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union are criminal activities that put human life in danger and disrespect the dignity of people for the purpose of obtaining high profits, undermining fundamental rights. These criminal activities contribute to irregular migration, undermining the migration management objectives of the Union. The commission of such criminal activities is driven by increasing demand and the high profits obtained by criminal organisations. Preventing and countering those offences remains a priority for the Union.
- (2) Directive 2002/90/EC³ and Council Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA⁴ (the ‘Facilitators’ Package’) constitute the Union legal framework to counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay of third-country nationals. It establishes a common definition of the offences of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence, and sets up the penal framework for the sanctioning of such offences. To address evolving trends, and to further enhance the effectiveness of the Union framework to prevent and counter these offences, it is necessary to update the existing legal framework.
- (3) The European Council Conclusions of 9 February 2023 affirmed the need to reinforce Union action to prevent irregular migration and loss of life, notably by intensifying cooperation with countries of origin and transit, and by ensuring stronger cooperation between Member States and with Europol, Frontex and Eurojust. The renewed Action Plan against migrant smuggling (2021-2025) sets out the policy response to migrant smuggling, as an essential part of the comprehensive approach to migration set out in the New Pact on Migration and Asylum. It sets out actions in four priority areas: reinforcing cooperation with partner countries and international organisations; sanctioning migrant smugglers and preventing the exploitation of migrants; reinforcing cooperation and supporting the work of law enforcement and judicial authorities; and increasing the knowledge base.

⁴ Council Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA of 28 November 2002 on the strengthening of the penal framework to prevent the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and residence (OJ L 328, 5.12.2002, p. 1., ELI: http://data.europa.eu/eli/dec_framw/2002/946/oj).

- (4) The facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay is a transnational phenomenon, and measures adopted at Union and national levels should recognise its international dimension. Union and national actions should therefore take into account the international commitments of the Union and its Member States, including in relation to the Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants by Land, Sea and Air, supplementing the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime, the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea, the International Convention on maritime Search and Rescue, the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, as well as the work of the United Nations Office against Drugs and Crime.
- (5) Taking account of the evolution of the activities aimed to facilitate unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, as well as the legal obligations of the Union and the Member States under international law, the definition of the criminal offences should be further approximated in all Member States so that it covers the relevant conducts more comprehensively.
- (6) In accordance with the principles of legality and proportionality of criminal law, and in order to address criminal activities that put human life in danger and disrespect the dignity of people for the purpose of obtaining profits, it is necessary to provide a precise and detailed definition of the criminal offences that counter these criminal behaviours. Assistance of unauthorised entry, transit or stay in the Union should constitute a criminal offence when there is a link with an actual or a promised financial or material benefit. This conduct should also be criminalised provided that this is highly likely to cause serious harm to the third-country nationals who were subject to the criminal offence or to any other person, even though there is no financial or material benefit or no promise of such benefit. It is necessary to establish a criminal offence in order to discourage the modus operandi of persons who publicly instigate, for instance through the internet, third-country nationals to enter, transit or stay in the Union without authorisation. Providing objective information or advice to third-country nationals on the conditions for the legal entry and stay in the Union, and on international protection, should not be understood as public instigation.
- (7) It is appropriate to provide for criminal liability where there is a link to a financial or material benefit, or where migrants are highly likely to be subjected to serious harm. These elements will usually not be fulfilled when it comes to assistance among family members or the provision of humanitarian assistance or the support of basic human needs. Third-country nationals should not become criminally liable for having been the subject to such criminal offences. Moreover, it is not the purpose of this Directive to criminalise, on the one hand, assistance provided to family members and, on the other hand, humanitarian assistance or the support of basic human needs provided to third-country nationals in compliance with legal obligations.

- (8) The impact of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay extends beyond the Member State of unauthorised entry. Minimum rules concerning the definition of the criminal offences should encompass conducts taking place in the territory of any Member State, to allow Member States other than those of unauthorised entry to act on such offences, provided that the Member States concerned establish jurisdiction over these offences.
- (9) There is a need to distinguish between the criminal offence of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union and the aggravated criminal offences that create higher harm to individuals and to society. The levels of penalties should reflect the higher social concern regarding more serious and harmful conducts, therefore aggravated offences should be sanctioned by more severe criminal penalties.
- (10) Member States should apply this Directive in accordance and in full compliance with the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees as amended by the Protocol of New York of 1967, obligations related to access to international protection, in particular the principle of non-refoulement, and fundamental rights.
- (11) Penalties for the criminal offences should be effective, dissuasive and proportionate. To this end, minimum levels for the maximum term of imprisonment should be set for natural persons. Accessory measures are often effective and, therefore, should be also available in criminal proceedings. Considering the possible risk to public policy and public security that they may pose, third-country nationals who committed the offences defined in this Directive should be subject to return in accordance with Directive 2008/115/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council⁵ or in accordance with national law where Member States have made use of Article 2(2), point (b), of that Directive, either after having served the prison sentence in a Member State or in view of serving the prison sentence, or part of it, in a third country, without prejudice to more favourable provisions applicable by virtue of Union or national law; furthermore, without prejudice to more favourable provisions applicable by virtue of Union or national law, those third-country nationals should be prohibited to re-enter the territory of the Member States for an appropriate period of time to be determined on a case-by-case basis, and that can reach 10 years in the most serious cases. This should not affect the discretion of judges or courts in criminal proceedings to impose appropriate sanctions in the individual cases.
- (12) The assessment of the seriousness of the offence should also extend to attempts to commit the offence that do not result in unauthorised entry in the Union. Attempts that cause the death of one or more third-country nationals should be sanctioned with more severe penalties than other types of attempts. Setting minimum rules on the maximum level of penalties at Union level for such attempts is justified and proportionate in view of the transnational dimension of the offence, and the fact that an attempt to commit the offence resulting in the death of third-country nationals bears the same gravity as a committed offence resulting in death.
- (13) Where national law provides for it, legal persons should be held criminally liable for the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union. Member States whose national law does not provide for the criminal liability of legal persons should ensure that their administrative sanctioning systems provide for effective, dissuasive and proportionate sanction types and levels, as laid down in this Directive in order to achieve its objectives. They should be accompanied by accessory measures. The financial situation of legal persons should be considered to ensure the dissuasiveness of the sanction imposed with criminal and non-criminal fines taking into account worldwide turnover of the legal persons.

- (14) Effectiveness of sanctions imposed in practice should be fostered through providing for aggravating circumstances that reflect the severity of the criminal offence. Graver circumstances should include situations conducive to other unlawful activities, such as exploitation, including sexual exploitation, instrumentalisation, dispossession of identity documents, and involvement in illegal employment.
- (15) The approximation and effectiveness of sanction levels imposed in practice should also be fostered with common mitigating circumstances that reflect the contribution provided by natural or legal persons that perpetrated a criminal offence referred to in this Directive through cooperation with the competent national authorities in the investigation or detection of such offence.
- (16) Member States should lay down rules concerning limitation periods in order to enable them to counter the criminal offences referred to in this Directive effectively, without prejudice to national rules that do not set limitation periods for investigation, prosecution and enforcement.
- (17) To counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, it is of outmost importance to ensure the effective seizure of the proceedings of the crime, as well as of the instrumentalities that are used to commit the criminal offences, including for instance boats, engines and other boat components and vehicles. For this purpose, full use should be made of existing instruments on the freezing and confiscation of proceeds and instrumentalities of crime, such as Directive 2014/42/EU of the European Parliament and of the Council⁶.
- (18) Considering the cross-border nature of the criminal offences referred to in this Directive, the mobility of perpetrators of illegal conducts and the possibility of cross-border investigations, it is necessary to lay down rules on the establishment of jurisdiction by Member States in order to counter such conduct effectively. The unauthorised transit or stay taking place in whole or in part in the territory of a Member State should allow a Member State different from the Member State of first unauthorised entry to establish jurisdiction. The gravity and the cross-border nature of the offences referred to in this Directive require that jurisdiction be established not only on natural persons who are nationals of the Member State concerned, but also on third-country nationals habitually residing in its territory. Jurisdiction over legal persons should be established when these are established in the Member State concerned or in respect of any business carried out in whole or in part in its territory. For the same reasons, it is necessary that a Member State establishes jurisdiction over criminal offences committed on board of ships and aircrafts registered in the Member State or flying its flag. Member States, including those other than that of first unauthorised entry, should establish jurisdiction in relation to criminal offences referred to in this Directive when this results in the entry, transit or stay of the third-country nationals subject to the offence in the concerned Member State.

- (19) Where assistance is provided for a third-country national to reach the territory of a Member State, the concerned Member States may also be able to establish their jurisdiction with regard to attempts, even if the third-country national does not enter their territory. Member States should at least establish their jurisdiction with regard to the attempt of an offence that caused the death of a third-country national..
- (20) Where a criminal offence falls within jurisdiction of more than one Member State, the Member States concerned should cooperate to determine which Member State is best placed to prosecute. Where the competent authorities of the Member States concerned decide, following cooperation or direct consultations under Council Framework Decision 2009/948/JHA⁷, to centralise criminal proceedings in a single Member State through the transfer of criminal proceedings, the Regulation (EU) .../... [proposed Regulation on the transfer of proceedings in criminal matters]⁸ should be used for such a transfer. For this purpose, the relevant criteria of Article 5 of that Regulation should be duly taken into account. The priority and weight of such criteria should be based on the facts and merits of each individual case.
- (21) To counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, both criminal justice and preventive mechanisms should be used. The prevention of the criminal offences referred to in this Directive should mitigate the need for criminal justice response and should have wider benefits in crime reduction. Such measures should aim at raising public awareness, and include information campaigns, research and education programmes. These should be carried out in cooperation with other Member States, relevant Union agencies and third countries.
- (22) Lack of resources and enforcement powers for national authorities which detect, investigate, prosecute or adjudicate the criminal offences referred to in this Directive creates obstacles for the effective prevention and punishment thereof. In particular, a shortage of resources may prevent authorities from taking action or limit their enforcement actions, allowing offenders to escape liability or to receive punishment that does not correspond to the gravity of the criminal offence. Minimum criteria concerning resources and enforcement powers should therefore be established.
- (23) The effective functioning of the enforcement chain depends on a range of specialist skills. The complexity of the challenges posed by the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, and the nature of such criminal offences require a multidisciplinary approach, a high level of legal knowledge, technical expertise and financial support as well as a high level of training and specialisation within all relevant competent authorities. Member States should provide training appropriate to the function of those who detect, investigate, prosecute or adjudicate criminal offences concerning the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union.
- (24) To ensure successful enforcement, Member States should make available effective investigative tools for the criminal offences referred to in this Directive, such as those included in their national law for combating organised crime or other serious crimes, including for instance the interception of communications, covert surveillance including electronic surveillance, monitoring of bank accounts and other financial investigation tools. These tools should be applied in line with the principle of proportionality and in full respect of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union. In accordance with national law, the nature and gravity of the criminal offences under investigation should justify the use of these investigative tools. The right to the protection of personal data should be respected.

- (25) Online content constituting or facilitating criminal offences referred to in this Directive, notably providing assistance to or publicly instigating unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the EU through the internet, will be subject to measures pursuant to Regulation (EU) 2022/2065 of the European Parliament and of the Council⁹ as regards illegal content.
- (26) To effectively tackle the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, it is necessary that competent authorities in the Member States collect accurate, consistent and comparable data on the scale of and trends in the criminal offences referred to in this Directive, the efforts to combat them and their results. Member States should collect and report to the Commission relevant statistical data on such offences. The Commission should regularly assess and publish the results based on data transmitted by the Member States. Member States should also regularly collect and disseminate statistical data and information on the application of this Directive to allow for the monitoring of its implementation. Statistical data and information should be comparable between the Member States and collected on the basis of common minimum standards.
- (27) Since the objective of this Directive, namely to lay down minimum rules to prevent and counter the facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay in the Union, cannot be sufficiently achieved by the Member States and can therefore, by reason of the scale and effect of the action, be better achieved at Union level, the Union may adopt measures in accordance with the principle of subsidiarity as set out in Article 5 of the Treaty on European Union. In accordance with the principle of proportionality, as set out in that Article, this Directive does not go beyond what is necessary to achieve that objective.
- (28) This Directive respects the fundamental rights and observes the principles recognised by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, in particular the respect and protection of human dignity, the right to the integrity of the person, the prohibition of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, the right to liberty and security, the rights of the child, the freedom of association, the right to an effective remedy and to a fair trial, the principles of legality and proportionality of criminal offences and penalties, and the prohibition of ne bis in idem.
- (29) This Directive aims to amend and expand the provisions of Directive 2002/90/EC and Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA. Since the amendments to be made are of substantial nature, Directive 2002/90/EC and Framework Decision 2002/946/JHA should, in the interests of clarity, be replaced in their entirety in relation to the Member States bound by this Directive.

- (30) This Directive is without prejudice to the application of Directive 2004/38/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁰ and the EU-UK Withdrawal Agreement¹¹.
- (31) Ireland is taking part in this Directive, in accordance with Article 5(1) of Protocol No 19 on the Schengen acquis integrated into the framework of the European Union, annexed to the Treaty on European Union and to the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union, and Article 6(2) of Council Decision 2002/192/EC¹².

Given that this Directive builds upon the Schengen acquis, Denmark should, in accordance with Article 4 of that Protocol, decide within a period of six months after the Council has decided on this Directive whether it will implement it in its national law.

HAVE ADOPTED THIS DIRECTIVE:

Article 1

Subject matter

This Directive establishes minimum rules concerning the definition of criminal offences and sanctions in the area of facilitation of unauthorised entry, transit and stay of third-country nationals, as well as measures to prevent and counter the commission of such criminal offences.

Article 2

Definitions

For the purposes of this Directive, the following definitions apply:

1. 'third-country national' means any person who is not a citizen of the Union within the meaning of Article 20(1) of the Treaty on the Functioning of the European Union and who is not a person enjoying the right of free movement under Union law as defined in Article 2, point 5, of Regulation (EU) 2016/399 of the European Parliament and of the Council¹⁹;
