10. Order of business

The next item was the order of business.

The President announced that the final draft agenda for the November I and II 2001 sittings had been distributed (PE 310.363 /PDOJ) and that a number of changes had been proposed (Rule 111):

(a) Sittings of 12 to 15 November 2001

— Monday 12 and Tuesday 13

— No change.

Mr Meijer asked for confirmation that his report (A5-0364/2001) (Item 16 of the PDOJ) was on the agenda (the President confirmed this).

— Wednesday 14

— the Council had announced that it was also willing, like the Commission, (Item 106 of the PDOJ) to make a statement on the international situation, provided that the item was not held before 15.00.

The President proposed, under these conditions, to move this item in the agenda to Wednesday afternoon and established that there was no opposition to this proposal.

— the PSE and ELDR Groups proposed that the Fiori report (A5-0391/2001) (Item 64) be held over until the Brussels sittings of 28 and 29 November.

The following spoke on this request: Mrs Thors, on behalf of the ELDR Group, on the reasons for this request (the President replied that the Conference of Presidents had decided to put this report on the agenda at the same time as the Caudron reports (A5-0376 and 0355/2001) (Items 30 and 31), but that, if there was insufficient time, the vote would be held over to the next part-session), Dell'Alba, Poettering, on behalf of the PPE-DE Group, Barón Crespo, on the PSE Group's reasons for this request, and Lannoye, on behalf of the Verts/ALE Group.

Parliament approved the request by EV (161 for, 126 against, 3 abstentions).

— the PSE Group asked for the oral questions on criminal sanctions and Community law originally on the agenda for Wednesday 28 November in joint debate to be brought forward.

The following spoke:

— Watson, chairman of the LIBE Committee, who announced that his committee would adopt that evening a text which could serve as a basis for a motion for a resolution and asked whether it would be possible to debate this issue with the Council that week; he suggested however that a motion for a recommendation to the Council would be more appropriate pursuant to Article 39 of the Treaty and Rule 107.

— Barón Crespo who stated that, under these conditions, he was willing to withdraw his group's request and support Mr Watson's proposal.
The President established that there was no opposition to this proposal.

— Thursday 15

— at the President's request, in view of the heavy voting schedule for lunchtime, the start of voting time was brought forward to 11.30.

Topical and urgent debate:

— Item 2 'Human rights':

— the Verts/ALE Group asked for the sub-item 'Turkey' to be added under this item.

Parliament rejected this request by EV (101 for, 167 against, 3 abstentions).

— Item 4:

— the Verts/ALE Group asked for a new sub-item 'Trade in small arms' to be added.

Parliament approved the request (150 for, 120 against, 1 abstention), by EV.

— Item 3 'Effects of hurricane Michelle' in Nicaragua and Cuba:

— the GUE/NGL Group asked for a new sub-item 'Floods in Algeria' to be added.

Mr Barón Crespo moved an oral amendment to the title of item 3 to add the words 'and Honduras' after the words 'Nicaragua and Cuba'.

Parliament agreed to these two requests.

(b) Sittings of 28 and 29 November 2001

— the deadlines for the Council and Commission statements on the preparations for the Laeken European Council of 14/15 December 2001 had been set as follows:

— motions for resolutions: Thursday 22 November at 12.00,

— amendments and joint motions for resolutions: Tuesday 27 November at 9.00.

Request for urgent procedure (Rule 112):

— from the Council on the following motion for a resolution:

— proposal for a regulation aiming to promote the conversion of vessels and of fishermen that were, up to 1999, dependent on the fishing agreement with Morocco (C5-0407/2001 — 2001/0163(CNS))

Reason for urgency

The Council had to adopt the regulation at the Council of Fisheries Ministers of 27 November 2001.

— from the Commission on:

— a proposal for a European Parliament and Council decision on the European Community contribution to the 'global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria' (C5-0520/2001 — 2001/0251(COD))

Reason for urgency

The proposal adopted by the Commission on 23 October 2001 allocated € 120 million for the global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria and provided a legal basis for a further € 60 million from the 2001 budget. At the October I 2001 part-session Parliament adopted a resolution calling urgently for this contribution.

— three proposals for amending Council decisions on macro-financial aid — to the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (C5-0486/2001 — 2001/0213(CNS))

— to Bosnia-Herzegovnia (C5-0558/2001 — 2001/0250(CNS))

— to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (C5-0559/2001 — 2001/0258(CNS))

Monday 12 November 2001

Parliament would be asked to vote on these request for urgent procdure at the start of the following day's sitting (if the request for the three proposals on macro-financial aid were approved, these items would be added to the agenda for the sitting on Wednesday 28 November in Brussels, in a joint debate with the Lagendijk report on the European Agency for Reconstruction (A5-0386/2001) (Item 100).

— Tannock referred to the six Algerian nationals, allegedly associated with terrorist activities, who had just been arrested by the French authorities in possession of maps marking out Strasbourg Cathedral and Parliament buildings; he asked the President if she had any information on specific threats and if any particular security measures had been taken in particular for access to Parliament (the President replied that as far as she knew the plans were only of the Cathedral and the Christmas market);

— Balfe, quaestor, announced on the one hand that he had no more information on that issue and hoped on the other hand that the Bureau would look into security matters, in particular as regards access to visitors; he added that as soon as he had carried out investigations he would inform the House;

— Wurtz, on behalf of the GUE/NGL Group, thanked the President for her words of solidarity towards Algeria and asked the Union first of all to make the necessary resources available to help the Algerians and then to learn from this tragedy to define priorities for future cooperation; he opposed moreover the fact that the bureau of his group which had been meeting in Ankara had not been authorised by the Turkish authorities to meet Mrs Leïla Zana, winner of the Sakharov prize;

— Purvis regretted that several Members had recently been detained at Brussels airport for eight hours by the Belgian authorities; he asked the President to make representations with these authorities to ensure that the principle of free movement was respected;

— Santini noted that Italian soldiers had been sent the previous day to join the American and Allied forces in Afghanistan and expressed his disappointment at the fact that the Afghanistan war did not figure heavily on the agenda; he asked Mr Solana, High Representative for the CFSP, to make a statement before Parliament on the military operations and the European Union's humanitarian response to the current crisis;

— Alyssandrakis opposed the bill currently being examined in Britain which would allow the unlimited detention of terrorist suspects; he considered that this was an attack on individual freedoms;

— MacCormick supported the previous speaker's remarks;

— Lynne expressed concern at what would happen to her report now that the lunchtime votes on Thursday had been brought forward and felt it was wrong to have the debate and the vote on Thursday evening (the President replied that the report could not have been debated on Thursday morning even if voting time had been kept at the original time).

1. Tobacco control (procedure without debate)

B5-0701/2001

European Parliament resolution on the follow-up to Parliament's opinion on the European Union's position in view of the third round of negotiations for a WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control

The European Parliament,

– having regard to its resolution of 18 December 1997 on the Commission communication to the Council and the European Parliament on the present and proposed Community role in combating tobacco consumption (COM(1996) 609 – C4-0014/1997) ([1]),

– having regard to European Parliament and Council Directive 2001/37/EC of 5 June 2001 on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States concerning the manufacture, presentation and sale of tobacco products ([2]),

– having regard to the Commission proposal for a European Parliament and Council directive on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States relating to the advertising and sponsorship of tobacco products ([3]),

– having regard to the intention announced by the President of the Commission, endorsed by Parliament on 4 July 2001, to move towards alternative support for EU farmers currently subsidised for growing tobacco,

– having regard to the first and second round of negotiations for a WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control,

– having regard to Rule 70 of the Rules of Procedure,

A. whereas tobacco is a major health determinant and tobacco-related diseases are responsible each year for around four million deaths worldwide,

B. whereas this figure is expected to rise to 10 million deaths per year by 2030, with 70 % of them occurring in developing countries,

C. whereas people are beginning to smoke occasionally or regularly at an increasingly younger age, irrespective of gender and customs,

D. having regard to the evidence that there is a correlation between price and consumption of tobacco, particularly among young people, and to the need to remove tobacco products from the Retail Price Index to avoid Member State reluctance to affect inflation rates,

E. having regard to the sound scientific data concerning the risks associated with passive smoking,

F. whereas tobacco consumption is increasing globally, especially in low- and middle-income countries and among women and young girls,

G. whereas tobacco control measures should therefore be of a horizontal nature and be agreed at international level, taking as a basis a high level of public health protection,

1. Supports the objective of a Framework Convention on Tobacco Control set by the World Health Assembly in its resolution of 24 May 1999;

([1]) OJ C 14, 19.1.1998, p. 197.
([2]) OJ L 194, 18.7.2001, p. 26.
([3]) OJ C 270 E, 25.9.2001, p. 97.

Tuesday 13 November 2001

2. Welcomes the progress made in the first and second round of negotiations on the Framework Convention;

3. Believes that a substantive legal instrument agreed at international level, as the Framework Convention is intended to be, constitutes an important means to address tobacco-related problems and, consequently, to promote public health;

4. Broadly agrees with the guiding principles, the general obligations and the measures proposed for the Framework Convention, and considers that there is a need to prioritise the measures according to the impact which they have on public health and the environment;

5. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to support a provision explicitly stating that the Convention and tobacco regulations generally should apply to all tobacco products, including cigarettes, smokeless tobacco, roll-your-own, cigars, kreteks, 'bidis', and the like;

6. Considers that the elimination of all forms of illicit trade in tobacco products, including smuggling and counterfeiting, is an essential component of tobacco control and calls on the Commission and the Member States to push for concrete measures in this field to be included in the proposed Convention;

7. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to support provisions in Section I.5 of the proposed Convention for preventing and combating illicit trade in tobacco products, and furthermore, to come forward with proposals that criminal laws be enacted against counterfeiting where they do not currently exist and that the provisions for the destruction of all contraband and counterfeit cigarettes be extended to also cover destruction of the equipment and machinery used to produce counterfeit products;

8. Welcomes the proposal that, with a view to combating smuggling, each unit packet or package of tobacco products should carry the statement 'Sales only allowed in [the country where the product is to be placed on the market]';

9. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to support a prohibition of sales of tobacco products to persons under the age of 18;

10. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to support a provision in the Convention that would, consistent with the health warnings on packages, require manufacturers to include clear and conspicuous health warnings in tobacco advertisements;

11. Supports the proposal that standards for the regulation of the contents of tobacco products, including standards for testing and measuring, designing, manufacturing and processing such products, be developed and harmonised under the auspices of the World Health Organization;

12. Believes that Community financial support for the implementation of the Convention in the developing countries, including finding alternative agricultural activities and opening markets for replacement crops, should be considered in due course;

13. Notes that the EC delegation will have a key role to play in the negotiations and believes that, while taking as a basis the Community 'acquis', the Community must also be open to considering and supporting proposals for tobacco control measures going beyond existing EU legislation;

14. Urges, therefore, the Commission and the Member States to strongly support those delegations that are pushing for the conclusion, within the anticipated time limits, of an effective Convention which provides the appropriate framework for concrete measures to substantially reduce tobacco consumption;

15. Calls for the European Parliament member present to be more fully informed of the progress of negotiations by being better integrated into the EC delegation, and in particular by being able to attend the EU coordination meetings;

16. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Commission, the Council, the governments and parliaments of the Member States and the secretariat of the WHO Framework Convention on Tobacco Control.

Proposal for a European Parliament and Council directive concerning the processing of personal data and the protection of privacy in the electronic communications sector (COM(2000) 385 — C5-0439/2000 — 2000/0189(COD))

The proposal was amended as follows:

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION [1]	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	Amendment 1 Recital 1a (new)
	(1a) Articles 7 and 8 of the European Union Charter of Fundamental Rights, proclaimed in Nice on 7 December 2000, seek to guarantee respect for private life and communications, including personal data.
	Amendment 2 Recital 5a (new)
	(5a) Information that is part of a broadcasting service provided over a public communications network is intended for a potentially unlimited audience and does not constitute a communication within the meaning of this Directive. However, if it is possible to identify the individual subscriber or user receiving such information, for example with video-on-demand services, the information conveyed is covered within the meaning of a communication for the purposes of this Directive.
	Amendment 3 Recital 8
(8) The Member States, providers and users concerned, together with the competent Community bodies, should cooperate in introducing and developing the relevant technologies where this is necessary to apply the guarantees provided for by this Directive and taking particular account of the objectives of minimising the processing of personal data and of using anonymous or pseudonymous data where possible.	(8) The Member States, providers and users concerned, together with the competent Community bodies, should ensure that the processing of personal data is limited to a minimum and that anonymous or pseudonymous data are used wherever possible, and should cooperate in introducing and developing the relevant technologies where this is necessary to apply the guarantees provided for by this Directive.

Amendment 4

Recital 10

(10) Like Directive 95/46/EC, this Directive does not address issues of protection of fundamental rights and freedoms related to activities which are not governed by Community law. It is for Member States to take such measures as are necessary for the protection of public security, defence, State security (including the economic well-being of the State when the activities relate to State security matters) and the enforcement of criminal law. This Directive does not affect the ability of Member States to carry out lawful interception of electronic communications if necessary for any of these purposes.	(10) Like Directive 95/46/EC, this Directive addresses issues of protection of fundamental rights and freedoms, related to activities which are governed by Community law. In taking measures for the protection of public security, defence and State security (including the economic well-being of the State when the activities relate to State security matters) and for the enforcement of criminal law, and in carrying out lawful interception of electronic communications if necessary for any of these purposes, Member States should act on the basis of a specific law which is comprehensible to the general public, and the measures should be entirely exceptional, authorised by the judicial or other competent authorities on a case-by-case basis and for a limited duration, appropriate, proportionate and necessary within a democratic society. Under the European Convention on Human Rights and pursuant to rulings issued by the European Court of Human Rights, any form of wide-scale general or exploratory electronic surveillance is prohibited.

(13) Service providers should take appropriate measures to safeguard the security of their services, if necessary in conjunction with the provider of the network, and inform subscribers of any special risks of a breach of the security of the network. Such risks may especially occur for electronic communications services over an open network such as the Internet. It is particularly important for subscribers and users of such services to be fully informed by their service provider of the existing security risks which are outside the scope of possible remedies by the service provider. Service providers who offer publicly available electronic communications services over the Internet should inform users and subscribers of measures they can take to protect the security of their communications for instance by using specific types of software or encryption technologies. Security is appraised in the light of Article 17 of Directive 95/46/EC. Such risks may especially occur for electronic communications services over an open network such as the Internet or mobile telephony. It is particularly important for subscribers and users of such services to be fully informed by their service provider of the existing security risks which are outside the scope of possible remedies by the service provider. Service providers should be obliged to notify subscribers about the type of traffic data being processed and their right to refuse such processing. Service providers who offer publicly available electronic communications services over the Internet should inform users and subscribers of measures they can take to protect the security of their communications for instance by using specific types of software or encryption technologies. Security is appraised in the light of Article 17 of Directive 95/46/EC. The requirement to inform subscribers of particular security risks should not discharge a service provider from the obligation to take, at his own cost, appropriate and immediate measures to remedy any new, unforeseen security risks and restore the normal security level of the service. The provision of information about security risks to the subscriber should be free of charge except for any nominal costs which the subscriber may incur while receiving or collecting the information, for instance by downloading an electronic mail message.

Recital 14

(14) Measures should be taken to prevent unauthorised access to communications in order to protect the confidentiality of communications, including both the contents and any data related to such communications, by means of public communications networks and publicly available electronic communications services. National legislation in some Member States only prohibits intentional unauthorised access to communications.	(14) Measures should be taken to prevent unauthorised access to communications in order to protect the confidentiality of communications, including both the contents and any data related to such communications, by means of public communications networks and publicly available electronic communications services. These measures should include the facilitation of proven cryptography and anonymisation or pseudonymisation tools.

Recital 15

(15) The data relating to subscribers processed within electronic communications networks to establish connections and to transmit information contain information on the private life of natural persons who have a right to respect for their correspondence. The legitimate interests of legal persons should also be protected. Such data may only be stored to the extent that is necessary for the provision of the service for the purpose of billing and for interconnection payments, and for a limited time. Any further processing of such data which the provider of the publicly available electronic communications services may want to perform for the marketing of its own electronic communications services or for the provision of value added services, may only be allowed if the subscriber has agreed to this on the basis of accurate and full information given by the provider of the publicly available electronic communications services about the types of further processing it intends to perform and about the subscriber's right not to give or to withdraw his consent to such processing. Traffic data used for marketing of own communications services or for the provision of value added services should also be erased or made anonymous after the provision of the service. Service providers should always keep subscribers informed of the types of data they are processing and the purposes and duration for which this is done. Service providers should always keep subscribers informed of the types of data they are processing and the purposes and duration for which this is done. Value added services may for instance consist of advice on least expensive tariff packages, route guidance, traffic information, weather forecasts and tourist information.

Amendment 8

Recital 15a (new)

	(15a) For the purposes of this Directive consent of a user or subscriber, regardless of whether the latter is a natural or a legal person, should have the same meaning as the data subject's consent as defined and otherwise determined within Directive 95/46/EC.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 9

Recital 15b (new)

	(15b) The prohibition of storage of communications and the related traffic data by persons other than the users without the users' consent is not intended to prohibit any automatic, intermediate and transient storage of this information in so far as this takes place for the sole purpose of carrying out the transmission in the electronic communications network and provided that the information is not stored for any period longer than is necessary for the transmission and for traffic management purposes, and that during the period of storage confidentiality remains guaranteed. Where necessary for making more efficient the onward transmission of any publicly accessible information to other recipients of the service upon their request, this Directive should not prevent further storage of such information, provided that this information would in any case be accessible to the public without restriction and that any data referring to the individual subscribers or users requesting such information are erased.

Recital 15c (new)

	(15c) Confidentiality of communications should also be ensured in the course of lawful business practice. Where necessary and legally authorised, communications can be recorded for the purpose of providing evidence of a commercial transaction. Directive 95/46/EC applies to such processing. Parties to the communications should be informed prior to the recording about the recording, its purpose and the duration of its storage. The recorded communication should be erased as soon as possible and in any case at the latest by the end of the period during which the transaction can be lawfully challenged.

Recital 16

(16) The introduction of itemised bills has improved the possibilities for the subscriber to check the accuracy of the fees charged by the service provider but, at the same time, it may jeopardise the privacy of the users of publicly available electronic communications services. Therefore, in order to preserve the privacy of the user, Member States should encourage the development of electronic communication service options such as alternative payment facilities which allow anonymous or strictly private access to publicly available electronic communications services, for example calling cards and facilities for payment by credit card. TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Recital 17a (new)

	(17a) Whether the consent to be obtained for the processing of personal data with a view to providing a particular value added service should be that of the user or of the subscriber, will depend on the data to be processed and on the type of service to be provided and on whether it is technically, procedurally and contractually possible to distinguish the individual using an electronic communications service from the legal or natural person having subscribed to it

Amendment 13

Recital 18

(18) It is necessary, as regards calling line identification, to protect the right of the calling party to withhold the presentation of the identification of the line from which the call is being made and the right of the called party to reject calls from unidentified links. There is justification for overriding the elimination of calling line identification presentation in specific cases. Certain subscribers, in particular helplines and similar organisations, have an interest in guaranteeing the anonymity of their callers. It is necessary, as regards connected line identification, to protect the right and the legitimate interest of the called party to withhold the presentation of the identification of the line to which the calling party is actually connected, in particular in the case of forwarded calls. The providers of publicly available electronic communications services should inform their subscribers of the existence of calling and connected line identification in the network and of all services which are offered on the basis of calling and connected line identification as well as the privacy options which are available. This will allow the subscribers to make an informed choice about the privacy facilities they may want to use. The privacy options which are offered on a per-line basis do not necessarily have to be available as an automatic network service but may be obtainable through a simple request to the provider of the publicly available electronic communications service. Amendment 14

Recital 18a (new)

	(18a) Where the provider of an electronic communications service or of a value added service subcontracts the processing of personal data necessary for the provision of these services to another entity, this subcontracting and subsequent data processing should be in full compliance with the requirements regarding controllers and processors of personal data as set out in Directive 95/46/EC.

Amendment 15

Recital 18b (new)

	(18b) Where the provision of a value added service requires traffic or location data to be forwarded from an electronic communications service provider to a provider of value added services, the subscribers or users to whom the data are related should also be fully informed of this forwarding before giving their consent for the processing of the data.

Amendment 16

Recital 20

(20) Directories of subscribers to electronic communications services are widely distributed and publicly available. The right to privacy of natural persons and the legitimate interest of legal persons require that subscribers are able to determine whether their personal data are published in a directory and, if so, which. Providers of public directories should inform the subscribers included in such directories of the purposes of the directory and of any particular usage which may be made of electronic versions of public directories especially through search functions embedded in the software, such as reverse search functions enabling users of the directory to discover the name and address of the subscriber on the basis of a telephone number only.	(20) Directories of subscribers to electronic communications services are widely distributed and publicly available. Amendment 17

	(20a) The obligation to inform subscribers of the purpose(s) of public directories in which their personal data are to be included should be imposed on the party collecting the data for such inclusion. Where the data may be transmitted to one or more third parties, the subscriber should be informed of this possibility and of the recipient or the categories of possible recipients. Any transmission should be subject to the condition that the data may not be used for purposes other than those for which they were collected. If the party collecting the data from the subscriber or any third party to whom the data have been transmitted wishes to use the data for an additional purpose, the renewed consent of the subscriber should be obtained either by the party which initially collected the data or by the third party to whom the data have been transmitted.

Amendment 18

Article 1, paragraph 3

3. This Directive shall not apply to activities which fall outside the scope of the EC Treaty, such as those covered by Titles V and VI of the Treaty on European Union, and in any case to activities concerning public security, defence, State security (including the economic well-being of the State when the activities relate to State security matters) and the activities of the State in areas of criminal law.	3. Tuesday 13 November 2001

— having regard to the communication from the Commission to the Council, the European Parliament, the Economic and Social Committee and the Committee of the Regions on certain legal aspects relating to cinematographic and other audiovisual works (COM(2001) 534),

— having regard to the numerous statistics and other data supplied by Eurostat, the European Audiovisual Observatory, Media Salles and the Research and Information Centre on Cinema, Audiovisual Media and Multimedia (Cerica),

— having regard to Rule 163 of its Rules of Procedure,

— having regard to the report of the Committee on Culture, Youth, Education, the Media and Sport (A5-0351/2001),

A. whereas the market share of European films in cinemas within the EU has reached an all-time low, averaging 22,5 % in 2000 as against 73,7 % for films from the USA, whereas in the mid-1960s the European share was still around 60 %,

B. whereas the situation in most candidate countries is even more serious and their relative economic weakness makes them even more vulnerable to massive imports of American films,

C. whereas, on average, in the year 2000 European films secured only 26 % of their box office takings from sources outside their country of origin,

D. whereas the European Union's trade deficit for 1999 with regard to audiovisual programmes in relation to North America was € 6 829 million,

E. whereas however, in absolute terms, Europe produces more films than the USA,

F. whereas one in four European films intended for showing in cinemas is not distributed commercially to them,

G. whereas therefore European films have benefited little from the revival in cinema-going since the early 1990s in terms of numbers of cinema-goers, box office takings and numbers of cinema screens in the EU,

H. whereas European cinema festivals (whose programming is for the most part European) are an important means of promoting European films,

I. whereas there is a danger that our citizens will completely cease to be aware of the cinematic traditions of their own country and continent because they now have little or no contact with it,

J. whereas the existing Community instruments and the support measures of the Member States and regions have not been sufficiently able to curb this adverse trend,

K. whereas the European Union's MEDIA Programme, despite the appropriateness of its methods, does not have enough funding to attain its ambition with regard to creating a sustainable and competitive audiovisual industry, its budget being only € 400 million spread over five years,

L. whereas the i2i initiative of the Commission and the EIB Group, which was launched following the Lisbon European Council in March 2000, could do much to enhance the industry's competitiveness and to develop European content, although here too the inadequate budget, namely € 500 million spread over three years, will limit its impact,

M. whereas there are many reasons for the poor circulation of European films, which is therefore not merely due to a distribution and exploitation problem,

N. whereas some broadcasters make a significant contribution to the production, financing and circulation of European works,

O. whereas the failure of European television stations to broadcast non-national European productions is partly to blame for the drastic decline in their distribution,

P. whereas the distribution of non-national European productions contributes to mutual understanding of the individual European cultures,

Q. whereas the European film industry, unlike the film industry in the USA, often lacks funding for development, marketing and promotion, and the importance of these aspects is often underestimated,

R. whereas the rise of multiplex cinemas has contributed to the growing uniformity of the films shown and few European films survive competition with heavily promoted Hollywood films within this circuit, while the smaller, 'independent' cinema circuit, which has remained faithful to its tradition of showing more European works, often lacks amenities for audiences and technical quality,

S. whereas new digital distribution and projection techniques (e-Cinema) will create new opportunities for the distribution of European films because they will make film distribution simpler and cheaper, and whereas this will spectacularly increase the scope for supplying several language versions,

T. whereas, however, e-Cinema is still in its infancy and not only requires further research but will initially also entail major investment in projection equipment,

U. whereas virtually all European films owe their existence to public funds and other government incentives,

V. whereas the audiovisual industry is very future-oriented and is a major potential source of employment, as confirmed by a study performed for the Commission in 1997, which states that the turnover of the audiovisual industry could rise by 70 % by 2005, which could represent a growth of 350 000 new jobs,

W. whereas film is a vector of contemporary culture which can potentially reach a large audience and thus does much to preserve and promote cultural diversity,

X. whereas the restoration, promotion and circulation of the European cinematic heritage have a major part to play both in the economic exploitation of European culture and identity and in fostering their appreciation,

Y. whereas the European internal market is extremely fragmented as regards the circulation of films, although its population of 376 million, and after enlargement, of more than 480 million, makes it the largest market in the world,

Z. whereas a strong European film industry presupposes strong national and regional film industries,

AA. whereas, next to the nurturing of good directors, the development of a film star system could be one of the keys to an internationally more attractive cinema,

AB. whereas in Europe the creative and commercial talent and the resources are available to build a sustainable industry, and the European film industry can only survive in the digital age if it is geared to the future and takes the initiative,

AC. whereas there are too few complete and reliable statistics about the situation in the candidate countries, which impedes a thorough analysis,

AD. whereas the revision of the 'Television Without Frontiers' directive is planned for 2002,

Tuesday 13 November 2001

1. Calls on the Commission and the Council urgently to adopt an ambitious, efficient and integrated multiannual plan to make the European film industry competitive and increase the choice of films; calls to this end for the funds made available for the film industry within the appropriations for the audiovisual industry in the Community budget to be increased; considers that this plan should take into account the diversity of national circumstances and take measures to complement national and regional policies;

2. Welcomes the recent initiatives taken by the Commission in favour of the film sector, more particularly the adoption of the Commission communication on certain legal aspects relating to cinematographic and other audiovisual works, which can be considered as an important element within the abovementioned multiannual plan, and calls on the Commission and the Council to implement the actions provided for in the Communication's timetable, as well as the specific measures that follow on from them, as soon as possible;

3. Calls on the Commission to pursue a consistent Community policy on the film industry, particularly as regards its cultural/industrial incentive policy, on the one hand, and its approach to State aid to the industry under its competition policy, which should take into account the specific nature of the sector, on the other, with the aim both of improving the European audiovisual industry's competitiveness and of safeguarding cultural diversity;

4. Calls on the Commission, the European Investment Bank and the European Investment Fund, in implementing the i2i initiative, which was launched following the Lisbon European Council in March 2000, to devote particular attention to:

(a) the financing of transnational distribution structures for European films,

(b) the infrastructure requirements of smaller, independent cinemas which show many European films,

(c) the structural needs of European SMEs which produce independent films and are generally undercapitalised,

(d) structural needs of European cinema festivals whose programming is essentially European;

5. Calls on the Commission, in implementing MEDIA Plus, to aim for administrative and financial management systems which are efficient and as appropriate as possible to the patterns and constraints that invariably characterise the industry, and, for the same purpose, to provide for the creation of a specific executive European agency for cinema and audiovisual matters;

6. Draws attention to the major importance of the Europa Cinemas network of cinemas, and the interesting work that is being done by the European Coordination of Film Festivals, which are supported by the MEDIA programme, for the distribution and promotion of European films, and considers that these networks should be further expanded;

7. Draws the attention of the Commission, the Council, the Member States, their regions and the candidate countries to the pressing need to create and foster European film stars of international standing and notes in particular the importance of the 'Shooting Stars' initiative of the organisation European Film Promotion, supported by MEDIA, which very much deserves to be expanded;

8. Calls on the Commission, when revising the 'Television Without Frontiers' directive, to draw up provisions which must take into account, in addition to issues strictly connected with radio and television broadcasting, regulation of the new broadcasting media and to investigate inter alia the desirability and feasibility of:

(a) introducing a framework for television broadcasters to devote a minimum proportion of their transmission time to promoting European films,

(b) introducing a framework for a minimum transmission of non-national, European works,

(c) introducing a framework for television broadcasters to invest a share of their annual turnover in the European film industry (either through global contributions to national/regional film funds or through individual coproductions and cofinancing), an approach which is being applied successfully in certain Member States;

9. Recognises the major contribution of some European broadcasters to the cultural and economic development of the European cinema;

10. Calls on the Commission, within the sixth Framework Programme of Research and Technological Development, to devote attention to research relating to digital film distribution and projection techniques (e-Cinema);

11. Welcomes initiatives such as the setting-up of the European Digital Cinema Forum and experimental projects such as the Cyber Cinema in Babelsberg, and calls on the Commission and the Council to remain alert to developments in the field of e-Cinema;

12. Recommends in particular that efforts be made in Europe to encourage use of new technologies for new forms of distribution ('cyber cinema');

13. Calls on the Commission, via the European Audiovisual Observatory, to commission a thorough analysis of European cinema audiences and their views on American and European films;

14. Urges the Commission, the Member States, their regions, and the candidate countries to encourage consultation between the various parties involved in a film (in the fields of creation, production, financing, marketing, promotion, distribution, exploitation, etc.), from the development stage of the project;

15. Calls on the Member States, when using money from the European Structural Funds, to invest inter alia in the modernisation and expansion of cinemas, including art cinemas, in economically disadvantaged regions, with the aim of highlighting the European film heritage and European films in general at regional and local level;

16. Urges the Member States, their regions, and the candidate countries, in their educational curricula, particularly for primary and secondary schools, to devote sufficient attention to developing the visual faculty, so that young people learn to adopt a more critical approach to material in the visual media and are more open to a wide diversity of film cultures; calls further on the Commission to draw up a programme for visual education;

17. Draws the attention of the Member States to the fact that art cinemas can play an important part in developing the visual faculty, both at school and by means of extracurricular activities; notes in this connection the educational function which a Pan-European Children's Network, to broadcast quality children's films in the various Member States and the candidate countries, could have;

18. Calls on the Commission to promote the restoration and protection of the European film heritage inter alia by means of incentives to digitalise and classify those works;

19. Calls on the Commission, together with the Member States and all parties concerned, in the interests of cinema education, to promote the establishment of a catalogue of old films that are representative of Europe's heritage to make this available to European schools;

20. Calls on the Member States to encourage and practice the legal registration of cinema and audiovisual works and introduce a register open to the public;

21. Calls on the European Union to provide a budget heading for the restoration of film works which are of great social and artistic significance and represent a valuable heritage for the European Union;

22. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to promote the setting-up of a European Cinematic Heritage Foundation whose purposes should in particular include organising a cinematic heritage network and establishing links between those concerned by this (setting-up of databases, organisation of seminars of international standing, etc.), training in the professional skills of film conservation and restoration, promotion of key European films and circulation of catalogues (compilation of thematic catalogues and broadcasting on television channels, creation of DVD collections of films which form part of the European heritage, cultivating awareness of the European cinematic heritage, particularly at schools, etc.);

Tuesday 13 November 2001

23. Urges the Member States and candidate countries, if they are not already doing so, to organise a monitoring system for box office takings within their territory in order to keep track more effectively of developments on national and international markets;

24. Draws the attention of the Member States, their regions and the candidate countries to the positive effects which appropriate fiscal incentives can have on competitiveness and employment in the film industry, and recommends that they consider introducing such measures;

25. Calls on the Member States, their regions and the candidate countries to ensure that the support schemes which they operate within their own territory for the film sector comprise as few obstacles as possible which prevent or hamper European coproductions;

26. Calls on the Commission to perform a feasibility study of the possibility of 'interconnecting' the existing automatic support funds of the Member States and regions, including a simulation of the compensation which would need to be paid to the Member States for the financial loss;

27. Calls on the Commission to perform a feasibility study of the possibility of setting up a European Promotion Fund to improve the opportunities for marketing European films with a transnational dimension and sufficiently large potential audiences, and in this context to investigate the possibility of formal cooperation with the European Film Academy;

28. Considers that the European Film Awards could assume a higher profile and gain in prestige and thus be a vital instrument for the purpose of promoting European films among the general public if they:

(a) received more political support from the European Union and the Member States,

(b) were presented on television channels accessible to all, for example on European public broadcasting networks, as a major event,

(c) received more attention from the media, both print and audiovisual;

29. Urges the Member States and candiate countries to establish national film academies, where these do not yet exist, or to support them, with a remit to enhance the prestige and profile of national and (indirectly) European films in the eyes of the general public, particularly by awarding national film prizes and selecting entries for major international film prizes, such as the European Film Awards and the American Academy Awards;

30. Calls on the Member States and candidate countries to encourage the promotion of European films among the general public, including in less obvious fields, and thus to help bring about a general change of mentality on the part of the public;

31. Calls on the Commission to ensure that, in the current round of WTO negotiations, existing measures relating to the audiovisual content industry remain in force and the right is preserved to extend these measures to new services in order to attain the policy objectives of the EU and the Member States, which have remained unchanged since the Uruguay Round in 1994;

32. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to encourage European airlines to show films produced in Europe during flights;

33. Calls on the Commission, further to its planned communication on certain legal aspects relating to cinematographic and other audiovisual works, to investigate to what extent introducing specific regulations on the film industry could help the candidate countries to develop their national film industries better and encourage the distribution of European films within their territory;

34. Calls on the Commission to investigate whether and to what extent the incorporation in the Treaty of a separate specific provision or protocol concerning the film and audiovisual industry and the cultural sector in general could take account of the specific nature of the industry;

35. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States and of the candidate countries.

11. Protection of animals during transport

A5-0347/2001

European Parliament resolution on the Commission report on the experience acquired by Member States since the implementation of Council Directive 95/29/EC amending Directive 91/628/EEC concerning the protection of animals during transport (COM(2000) 809 − C5-0189/2001 − 2001/2085(COS))

The European Parliament,

− having regard to the report of the Commission to the Council and the European Parliament (COM(2000) 809 − C5-0189/2001),

− having regard to Directive 91/628/EEC of 19 November 1991 on the protection of animals during transport ([1]), as last amended by Directive 95/29/EC ([2]),

− having regard to Rule 47 (1) of its Rules of Procedure,

− having regard to the report of the Committee on Agriculture and Rural Development and the opinion of the Committee on the Environment, Public Health and Consumer Policy (A5-0347/2001),

A. whereas the transport of live animals over long distances and inadequate rules and inspections have contributed to a sudden and dramatic spread of infectious animal diseases such as swine fever and foot-and-mouth disease,

B. whereas the compulsory use of staging points on long-distance journeys has also been a contributory factor,

C. whereas EU legislation is partly to blame for the closure of many smaller slaughterhouses, especially in sparsely populated areas and whereas this has encouraged the long-distance transport of animals for slaughter,

D. whereas the Directives concerning animal welfare for the long-distance transport of live animals are repeatedly infringed, and whereas application of Member States' monitoring policies is clearly inadequate in structural terms and the penalties policy applied does not have sufficient effect,

E. whereas, partly on the basis of the Commission report on the experience acquired with the transport directive, it is clear that existing EU legislation has been transposed into national law by all Member States but that compliance therewith is far from adequate,

F. whereas in the case of road transport, differences in statutory travelling and resting periods for animals and statutory driving and rest periods for drivers have not been conducive to compliance with the legislation,

G. whereas the Council and the Commission have an obligation under the Protocol on animal welfare annexed to the EC Treaty to take animal welfare into account when formulating and implementing the common transport policy and in particular when laying down certain requirements relating to vehicles used for the transport of animals,

H. whereas serious abuses repeatedly occur in the case of exports of live animals intended for slaughter in countries outside the European Union,

([2]) OJ L 148, 30.6.1995, p. 52.
([3]) OJ C 273, 28.9.2001, p. 1.

Tuesday 13 November 2001

I. whereas in the case of imports of live animals, the welfare of such animals must be ensured in accordance with European rules and the introduction of diseases must be prevented,

J. whereas there are major differences between Member States' policies on the holding of livestock markets and the use of livestock collection centres and auctions, and whereas such differences pose a threat to the free internal market,

I. Calls on the Council and the Commission to present proposals as soon as possible for amending existing rules on the transport of animals (cattle, sheep, goats, horses and pigs) and, at all events, to incorporate the following amendments and implement measures concerning inspections:

1. In the case of cattle, horses, goats, sheep and pigs not intended for specific breeding and/or sporting purposes, transport should be limited to a maximum of eight hours' duration, or a distance of 500 km; in the case of transport operations exceeding four hours' duration, or a distance of 250 km:

— animals should have the use of a lying area and have access to fresh water;

— the means of transport should have mechanical ventilation (irrespective of engine type), and the temperature inside the means of transport must not fall below 5° C or exceed 30° C;

2. For areas where there are no, or hardly any, slaughterhouses within a radius of 500 km, the Commission may, on the basis of specific geographical circumstances, grant temporary dispensation as regards the duration specified in paragraph 1 and the conditions in which transport takes place; the duration specified in paragraph 1 may not, however, be increased by more than 50 %;

3. Where animals of the species referred to in paragraph 1 are intended for breeding and sporting purposes (and are registered as such), travelling time of more than eight hours, or a distance of more than 500 km, is permitted, subject to a maximum travelling time of 48 hours and the granting of prior authorisation, provided that existing standards are adapted so that all animals have access to adequate lying areas with clean litter and have individual access to sufficient fresh water and feed; in addition, the means of transport should have mechanical ventilation (irrespective of engine type);

4. The Council and the Commission have a duty to pay full regard to the welfare of animals during transport, which is a legal obligation under the Treaty Protocol on Animal Welfare agreed at Amsterdam, and to bring forward a report on how this duty is being fulfilled;

5. The Commission are to consult the Scientific Steering Committee in order to obtain the advice of scientific experts on the duration of animal transport;

6. In the case of small islands and the associated transport by sea, the Commission should present further proposals on the transport of animals in accordance with the requirement concerning the quality of transport in the European Union; however, where animals transported by sea between small islands and a reasonably nearby point on the mainland, or vice versa, are unloaded from the road vehicle and transported on board ship in straw-bedded pens with adequate drinking water, space and ventilation available, such sea transport must not be included in the journey time calculations;

7. The number of Food and Veterinary Office (FVO) inspections to verify implementation of the rules by Member States is to be increased substantially, and the FVO is to appoint at least 15 inspectors by 1 January 2002;

8. Member States are to present a report every 12 months to the Commission on the inspections that have been carried out, indicating in particular the frequency of the inspections, the nature of the shortcomings and infringements found and the penalties applied by the competent authorities;

9. The FVO is to present a detailed inspection report to the Commission and the European Parliament every year;

10. Directive 91/628/EEC (as amended by Directive 95/29/EC) is not being adequately enforced; points out that Member States are required to enforce European legislation properly; draws attention to the fact that it is the Commission's task to ensure that the Member States comply with their obligations; calls for compliance with the Directive and checks on its application;

11. Progress must be made with regard to the Treaty infringement proceedings against Member States that have not yet complied with EU rules on the transport of animals or have not done so fully; the Commission should report every year to the Council and the European Parliament and also send the reports to the parliaments of the Member States; the reports should also cover the way in which EU rules concerning the protection of animals during transport are complied with;

12. The Commission should, in addition to monitoring compliance with the Directives, draw up a policy plan indicating clearly how coordination and communication amongst Member States and between Member States and the Commission can be improved;

13. The Member States should each produce within six months a management and control plan detailing the steps they intend to take to ensure effective enforcement of Directive 91/628/EEC (as amended by Directive 95/29/EC) in respect of journeys which start in, pass through or finish in their territory;

14. Member States should strengthen their policies on penalties in respect of infringements by introducing deterrent fines and, in the case of repeated infringements, suspending authorisation for the transport of animals; the Commission should present a proposal aimed at harmonising the policy on penalties in the European Union as far as possible;

15. Member States should:

— impose much more stringent penalties on transporters who contravene Directive 91/628/EEC (as amended by Directive 95/29/EC);

— require drivers to carry on the vehicle a copy of their, or their firm's, authorisation;

— suspend or withdraw a transporter's authorisation in the event of serious or repeated infringements of the Directive;

16. The Commission should present proposals by 1 January 2002 for a harmonised European model certificate for registered transporters and at the same time present a proposal for harmonising the route plans required for long-distance transport according to a European model;

17. The Commission is to examine ways of promoting small, local abattoirs and mobile slaughterhouses in order to ensure that journey time to slaughter is minimised;

18. So as to limit the long-distance transport of live animals, the Commission should present a policy plan by 1 January 2003, indicating how regionalisation of the production chain can be achieved;

19. The Commission should examine the quality of the transport of animals and to present specific proposals for improving various aspects thereof, taking also into consideration aspects that are not mentioned in the evaluation report; specific proposals should be forwarded for harmonising travelling/driving and resting/rest periods for animals and drivers for ensuring that cleaning and disinfecting facilities are available after transport, for defining fitness for transport in the case of animals, for defining space and temperature requirements during transport and for introducing truck certification and driver certification;

20. The Commission should ensure that any driver and staff of a livestock road vehicle holds a certificate of professional competence recognised by one of the Member States confirming that he has completed a training course for drivers of vehicles intended for the carriage of livestock, in conformity with Community rules on the minimum level of training for road transport drivers;

Tuesday 13 November 2001

21. The Commission should end, as soon as possible, the payment of export refunds in respect of live animals for slaughter and seek the establishment of binding international guidelines governing the treatment of live animals during long-distance transport;

22. When live animals are imported, not only are veterinary checks on the animals to be carried out at the EU border, but also checks to verify that the means of transport used comply with European loading and welfare standards; if the livestock is not to be slaughtered within 24 hours, it is to be placed in quarantine at destination for 30 days, during which time no livestock is to be removed;

23. In the case of imports of live animals, compliance with Community loading and welfare standards and rules on the duration of the transport of live animals should be proven at the EU border; if infringements are noted, or if compliance with the above standards and rules cannot be proven, it should not be possible to import the live animals concerned into the European Union;

24. The Council should establish as a matter of urgency a common position on the Commission's proposal to improve the construction and design of livestock vehicles (COM(1997) 336), bearing in mind that considerable efforts have already been made in this field by individual Member States;

25. The Commission should ensure that transporters from non-member countries operate with drivers holding the appropriate EU licence to transport livestock and, if the driver does not hold such a licence, that the cargo is handed over to a licence holder;

26. The Member States should reject route plans which provide incomplete information or which show that the provisions of Directive 91/628/EEC (as amended by Directive 95/29/EC) on journey times, resting periods and watering and feeding are going to be contravened during the intended journey;

27. Member States of origin to carry out inspections and other controls should ensure that livestock vehicles do not leave their territory when they:

(i) are overcrowded,

(ii) are carrying unfit animals, or

(iii) do not comply with the additional standards laid down by Council Regulation (EC) No 411/98 [1] for journeys exceeding eight hours;

28. Member States of transit or destination should adopt effective systems at places through which animals regularly pass in the course of long journeys for checking that animals are being transported in accordance with the route plan and the requirements of Directive 91/628/EEC (as amended by Directive 95/29/EC);

29. Member States of transit or destination should inform the Member State of origin of any serious deficiencies which they find regarding route plans, vehicle standards or the health and welfare of the animals with the purpose of enabling the Member State of origin to take steps to prevent future occurrences of such deficiencies;

II. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the parliaments of the Member States.

European Parliament resolution on the Commission communication 'Services of General Interest in Europe' (COM(2000) 580 — C5-0399/2001 — 2001/2157(COS))

The European Parliament,

— having regard to the Commission communication (COM(2000) 580 — C5-0399/2001),

A. whereas general interest services are to be seen as part of the European Social Model,

B. whereas the policy of liberalising various services of general interest may have both positive and negative effects on members of the public/users, and whereas therefore this policy requires a precise and comparative evaluation of the quality of the services provided before embarking upon further liberalisation,

C. whereas, under Article 16 of the EC Treaty, general interest services in Europe occupy an important place in the Community and play an essential role in promoting social and territorial cohesion,

D. whereas, pursuant to Article 36 of the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union, the Union recognises and respects access to services of general economic interest as provided for in national laws and practices, in accordance with the Treaty establishing the European Community, in order to promote the social and territorial cohesion of the Union,

E. whereas, having regard to the principle of subsidiarity, pursuant to Article 5(2) of the EC Treaty, it will, in certain conditions strictly laid down by Community provisions, be for the Member States and their local authorities to decide which services are of general economic interest and the appropriate method of management,

F. whereas the development of the single market has led to more intense competition between public and private undertakings, and it is therefore important and right for competition rules to be applied fairly and effectively,

G. whereas the judgments of the Court of Justice in the cases of Corbeau of 9 May 1993 and the municipality of Almelo of 17 April 1994 state the conditions subject to which certain exclusive rights assigned to a service of general interest may be exempted from competition rules,

H. whereas, pursuant to Article 295 of the EC Treaty, the EU must be neutral with regard to systems of property ownership,

I. whereas public undertakings and undertakings which have been granted special or exclusive rights, pursuant to Article 86(1) of the EC Treaty, or entrusted with services of general economic interest, pursuant to Article 86(2) of the EC Treaty, are an important economic factor in the Community and the Member States,

J. whereas the introduction of the European single currency and increasing globalisation will mean in future that competition law in the EU must be applied uniformly to prevent or remove cross-border distortions of competition,

K. whereas defining and structuring general interest services remains in principle the responsibility of the appropriate level of authority while at the same time complying with the law on state aid applied on a uniform basis, guaranteed through verification by the Commission under the supervision of the European Court of Justice,

L. whereas development of general interest services on the basis of the social market economy model must be a key element of European economic, financial and social policy,

M. whereas compliance with the provision of services of general interest in the countries applying for accession, and the process of their development, is an important aspect that must be taken into consideration in the course of accession negotiations,

N. whereas compliance with the specific situation in rural areas (socially disadvantaged regions, remote locations, etc) must be given special consideration,

I. The concept of general interest services in the EU

1. Notes the Commission's communication on general interest services and agrees with the statement therein that what 'is to be regarded as a service of general interest and how it should be operated are issues that are first and foremost decided locally'; notes also that European citizens should receive high-quality services at affordable prices and, where justified by the social situation, free of charge;

2. Calls on the Commission to perform without delay a precise and comparative evaluation of the real impact of the policy of liberalisation of services of general interest before embarking upon further liberalisation;

3. Approves the option chosen by the Commission, which regards the Cardiff process as a framework for regular evaluation of the functioning of services of general economic interest within the single market;

4. Points out that services of general economic interest must ensure equality of access, security of supply, continuity, high quality and democratic accountability;

5. Supports the common aim of the Heads of State and Government and the Commission to ensure that the application of competition law in connection with general interest services results in greater predictability and increased legal certainty;

6. Calls on the Laeken European Council to support vis-à-vis the Commission its proposal for a framework directive on the objectives and organisational arrangements of services of general interest based on Article 95 of the EC Treaty; this directive should create a legal framework which guarantees the availability of services of general interest to the public, particularly pursuant to Article 16 of the EC Treaty;

7. Expects, therefore, the Commission to define in the framework directive the common principles on which services of general interest are based at an appropriate tier of subsidiarity, to specify and define the common principles of democratic and transparent regulation, to ensure active involvement of citizens and users in the process of definition, evaluation and contract appraisal and to institutionalise a common pluralist appraisal procedure;

8. Calls on the Commission to ensure consistency between the principles set out in its framework directive and the provisions governing specific industries already adopted;

9. Notes that, after an initial phase of implementing the internal market, by opening up national networks to competition, a phase which has not yet been completed, the Union is now entering a second phase in which the expansion of cross-border trade and the emergence of pan-European operators and networks makes it necessary to define powers and responsibilities at European Union level for services of general interest;

10. Is aware that the Lisbon European Council set the EU the goal of becoming the world's most dynamic economic area and notes that this presupposes rewarding all economic operators for innovation and ideas;

11. Points out that effective state control over subsidies, provided that it is tailored to the requirements and characteristics of services of general interest, is reasonable and necessary;

12. Notes that the European Union is entitled to control abusive practices only to determine whether there is a serious breach of fair competition, which is guaranteed to Union citizens, throughout EU territory with a cross-border impact at the same time;

13. Stresses the importance of non-profit organisations, as organisations springing from civil society (working with volunteers, non-commercial, form of organisation which is responsive to citizens, no owners), as a third pillar in addition to the market and the State, and points to their importance for citizens' ability to organise self-help;

14. Emphasises further that the decisive factor is not who performs the general interest services but that quality is improved, accountability, affordability and sustainable development are maintained, and efficiency, security of provision and continuity are used as criteria for the award of contracts; welcomes the Commission's announcement that it will not lay down any preconditions as to whether general interest services are to be provided by public or private undertakings;

15. Notes that the European Treaties serve both aims, as they commit both the EU and the Member States to a policy of fair competition, and they also emphasise the need to guarantee access to general interest services;

16. Notes that general interest services in general should be taken to mean services that are important for people's daily lives, including therefore transport, postal services, telecommunications, education, hospitals, social services, drains, refuse collection and water and energy supply, particularly electricity;

17. Assumes that the Commission's competition policy will comply with Article 151 of the EC Treaty, and that the European Union will do its utmost to make allowance for the cultural interests of the Member States and take the particularities of the cultural sector, and its diversity, into account, with due regard for the principle of subsidiarity;

18. Points out that, pursuant to Article 16 of the EC Treaty, the Community and the Member States have an obligation to define the tasks of services of general economic interest as well as the way they are carried out, and therefore must impose obligations to provide certain services on the service providers, whether public or private, on terms enabling them to carry out their tasks;

19. Stresses the importance of reliable conditions for the provision of general interest services (high quality, wide availability, optimum price, social balance and lasting security of provision);

20. Emphasises that a good many general interest services can be provided on the basis of fair competition, and stresses that private and public undertakings must, as a matter of principle, be treated equally in that connection;

Tuesday 13 November 2001

21. Considers that the co-responsibility of private and public operators for services of general interest will also have to be clarified within the framework of work on the social responsibility of businesses, which is on the European social agenda agreed at Nice;

22. Notes that general interest services can be provided most beneficially for the citizens if they are publicly and clearly defined and there are economic-efficiency criteria to be complied with; considers that where these services involve economic activities, as many providers as possible must, as a matter of principle, be given the opportunity to carry out these tasks competitively through a public invitation to tender;

23. Notes that if the public authorities in the Member States impose service obligations on undertakings and grant financial compensation from public funds for imposing these obligations, this does not constitute aid, as long as the compensation does not go beyond what is needed to even out the burden imposed by the public authorities;

24. Welcomes the fact that the Commission advocates a very comprehensive range of general interest services and in achieving this aim recognises the principle of subsidiarity and the Member States' freedom, subject to certain conditions, to define and control general interest services;

25. Points out that local authorities must remain free to choose the method of managing the services of general interest for which they are responsible pursuant to the provisions of their respective Member States, and that such discretion includes the right to use direct management or to delegate the management of those services; stresses, however, that where a local authority decides to delegate the management of the services of general interest for which it is responsible, it must be required to use systematic competitive tendering, in accordance with Community law; stresses also that the entities which manage services of general interest under a direct management arrangement should not be in a position to take over external markets, outside their territorial area of activity, but this must not prevent inter-communality;

26. Welcomes the Commission's statement that services of general economic, social and regional interest should be provided in the EU even when the market does not provide sufficient incentives;

27. Shares the Commission's view that to fulfil public service obligations, special or exclusive rights may be granted without infringing competition law, and special funding mechanisms for the additional obligations may be devised;

28. Agrees with the Commission that so-called 'non-economic activities', mainly prerogatives of the State and its local authorities, such as internal and external security, the administration of justice and the conduct of foreign relations, are not subject to EU competition rules;

29. Supports the Commission in its view that services in connection with national education, public health and compulsory basic social security schemes, activities that are a matter of government, such as air traffic control authorities or bodies responsible for preventing pollution at sea, and those provided by non-profit organisations, in particular social, charitable and cultural institutions, should be excluded from the application of competition and internal market rules;

30. Emphasises that apart from the issue of competitive neutrality in the provision of general interest services, important aspects of the provision of these services must be, in particular, whether they are economically, socially and environmentally beneficial for citizens, users and tax-payers, their quality, financing — including the transparency thereof — reliability and monitoring;

31. Assumes that in further consultations the Commission will use examples, guidelines, and communications, together with proposals for regulations on exemptions, to provide further clarification of the controversial questions with regard to legal clarity and the areas of application of European competition law;

32. Considers that, within the framework of the WTO negotiations, the Commission should seek clarification of certain provisions of the General Agreement on Trade in Services (GATS) in order to make it clear that WTO rules do not affect the right of Member States to regulate services of general interest and to adopt measures in this field;

II. Need for action at European level

33. Endorses the Commission's views with regard to the principles of neutrality, freedom of definition and proportionality and emphasises that by virtue thereof the Member States are free to determine the tasks and management of general interest services and that it is the Commission's task to ensure that the rules on the single market and competition are observed;

34. Supports the Nice European Council's calls for the rules on the single market and competition to be applied in such a way that general interest services are able to carry out their tasks economically and with legal certainty;

35. Considers it necessary, in view of the successes and problems to date in liberalising important service areas under the single market programme, to perform a better assessment of the impact on social and regional cohesion before deciding whether it would be appropriate to proceed further with the liberalisation which has been introduced in the areas of transport, electricity, gas and postal services;

36. Takes the view that progressive liberalisation of services sectors in the European Union must go hand in hand with maintenance of universal service;

37. Notes that public and private undertakings should always be given equivalent access to the provision of services of general interest where that is not specifically excluded by Member State regulations; stresses the importance of competition and economic-efficiency testing, particularly by way of benchmarking, for optimum service provision;

38. Points out that respect for the choice of and criteria applying to services of general interest requires more democratic governance, i.e. legislation adopted under the codecision procedure, applied by the Commission subject to scrutiny by the European Parliament;

39. Stresses, in the context of the subsidiarity principle, that Member States, regional and local authorities are free to define and choose the service provision they want;

40. Calls on the Commission, to ensure greater legal clarity, to make clear in which cases intra — Community trade is not affected (local application) and to improve the transparency of the decision-making process through a graduated examination process, and calls on the Commission to decide more rapidly on standard cases and simple complaints in the interests of transparency and greater legal certainty;

41. Welcomes warmly the fact that the Commission in recent months has issued regulations clarifying and further developing its former guidelines and has thus clarified the situation with regard to aid for SMEs, the 'de minimis' rule and aid for training and environmental protection, and emphasises that aids to private and public undertakings are admissible only under strict conditions;

42. Calls on the Commission to clarify how a distinction is to be made between economic and non-economic activities and what is meant by 'transparency monitoring' in conceptual terms in relation to 'proportionality testing' in operational terms; stresses that the competition rules do not in any circumstances apply to non-economic activities;

43. Hopes that the Commission will coordinate a regular and pluralist evaluation of the way in which the tasks of general interest service provision are fulfilled, particularly with regard to the contribution to the social and territorial cohesion of the Union, quality of services, accessibility on a equal footing and a balanced and transparent pricing system;

44. Considers it vital to devise pluralist assessment procedures involving all parties; suggests that the European Parliament should organise the debate within the various existing forums (Economic and Social Committee, Committee of the Regions, consultative bodies, associations involved in services of general interest initiatives and consumer associations); calls for this process to result in consultation before any decisions are taken;

45. Asks the Commission to produce a report assessing the present state and the requirements of SGIs in the candidate countries;

II. Need for action at Member State level

46. Considers that the Member States and their subsidiary levels (regions, provinces and local authorities) should in future have greater freedom to draw up their own definitions of general interest services within the terms of the EU competition rules;

47. Affirms the EU's competence in relation to competition policy, which, in view of the challenges of the single currency, the European single market, globalisation of the economy and technological development has assumed all the greater importance, but considers necessary a broad political debate on the limits of competition policy when it collides with other core policy areas of the EU or on national, regional or local level;

48. Takes the view that it is necessary for the Commission to exercise supplementary control over abuses;

49. Takes the view that in a parliamentary democracy the structures and a cost/benefit analysis of modes of service provision must be presented transparently and clearly to citizens and taxpayers together with competitive alternatives, including the long-term implications for the quality of life of citizens;

50. Takes the view that there is a fundamental problem with generalised subsidies to all providers of services in the general interest, as this prevents the services provided from being presented correctly, in line with demand and need;

51. Considers therefore that it is legally possible and politically sensible that the additional cost of services which are to be offered to the public on particularly favourable terms can be offset if necessary from tax revenue but that the transparency of such financing must be guaranteed;

52. Considers that the EU transparency directive which was adopted in 2000 and is soon to be implemented is the appropriate instrument to assist public understanding of the problem of generalised subsidies in undertakings which perform services in the free market as well as in the public service and thus to create more clarity and honesty with regard to the use of tax revenues and other aid;

53. Endorses the Commission's position to the extent that awarding contracts to private-sector third parties even in areas of enterprise which have not yet been liberalised is subject to the principle of an invitation to tender being issued beforehand by the public sector;

54. Takes the view that wherever services of general interest can be provided competitively, access should always be open to public and private undertakings on equal terms; draws attention in that connection to the local-economy subsidiarity principle;

55. Considers it basically incompatible with the principle of competitive neutrality for public undertakings to be exempted from turnover tax in areas where both private and public undertakings operate, e.g. the supply of water, gas, electricity, thermal energy or refuse disposal, and takes the view that unilateral preferential tax treatment of public undertakings is not compatible with EU law and therefore there should be a principle that public and private undertakings are treated equally with regard to tax legislation;

56. Recalls that in line with the Copenhagen criteria the candidate countries too may not deliberately favour their industries and should take advantage of the transitional provisions to reform the status of the enterprises concerned, reconstruct efficient and fair services of general interest and develop the capacity to withstand the general pressure of competition;

57. Stresses that the basic obligation on the public authorities to issue fair and correct invitations to tender pursuant to European and Member States' laws can be an effective instrument to prevent distortions of competition, at the same time allowing the state to define and monitor conditions with regard to quality, availability and environmental compatibility;

58. Takes the view that the abolition of state monopolies should not lead to the establishment of private monopolies;

59. Takes the view that with regard to the right to define general interest services, both the Member States and subsidiary levels must have sufficient rights of democratic participation and powers to ensure an optimum supply for the public even in competitive circumstances, in particular with regard to description of services, procedure for invitations to tender and control of service provision;

IV. With regard to particular sectoral cases

60. Stresses that the EU's internal market policy has basically led to better quality, lower prices and better availability at a high level of technology, as is demonstrably the case, for example, in telecommunications;

61. Regrets that the Commission and the Member States were incapable of anticipating and managing the award of UMTS licences as a service of general interest;

62. Notes that the Commission has clearly set out in its proposal for a directive amending the directive on the internal market in electricity and gas that the Member States have complete legal freedom to determine important services in the general interest and that this includes, for example, protecting socially weaker customers from unjustifiable exclusion from provision, transparency of contract conditions for consumers, reasonably-priced and transparent settlement mechanisms, supply to remote areas at reasonable prices to promote social and territorial cohesion, regard for environmental protection and maintaining and developing infrastructure;

63. Calls for the Member States to be obliged to use the transparent award procedure laid down by the Commission for new provision capacities, when this need develops as a result of supply and demand with a view to guaranteeing security of supply;

64. Calls on the Commission to submit expert opinions and proposals with regard to waste management to ensure that waste is disposed of safely and recycled ecologically even without obligations for tendering and permits by establishing a market economy framework;

65. Calls on the Member States to consider, in conjunction with local and regional authorities, whether the opening up of water supply and waste-water services to private enterprise would contribute to an improvement in the functioning of these services;

66. Takes the view that benchmarking, economic-efficiency testing, cooperation and efficiently structured undertakings should also be sought in water management, and that a good many specific measures providing limited openings to the market short of full liberalisation will impact favourably on security of supply, price structures and the protection of ground water and the environment;

67. Takes the view that despite the special circumstances, water supply and waste-water services need to be operated on the basis of economic criteria, and calls on the Member States to stimulate this and to investigate — where applicable — whether the privatisations carried out so far have contributed to adequate improvements in the functioning of the water services concerned;

68. Stresses the need for public banks which contribute to the provision of services of general interest by making accounts available to all, providing a comprehensive range of financial services to the community, facilitating loans for small businesses and promoting a wide range of other public-spirited activities;

69. Takes the view that the transparency directive must be implemented in the area of public banks as well, so that the public obligation and actual costs of carrying out this public obligation can be more clearly delimited, assessed from the point of view of competition and if necessary financially compensated;

Tuesday 13 November 2001

70. Takes the view that the Commission communication on services of general interest in Europe does not give sufficient recognition to the significance of independent welfare associations and independent agencies which offer a range of services in some Member States on the basis of solidarity, ethics, religion, charity or cultural diversity;

71. Therefore stresses the need to grant a block exemption for social and cultural facilities which are important for the community to allow citizens in future to take advantage of such facilities under special conditions and at competitive prices, and thus it must be permissible also for public funding to be provided openly and transparently for that purpose so long as competition is not massively distorted;

72. Calls for non-commercial activities, e.g. of a social, cultural or charitable nature, like sovereign activities in general to be exempted from control of subsidies and in principle from the application of EU competition law and for relevant guidelines to be developed;

73. Considers that a list of criteria should be drawn up with regard to the Commission's definitions of economic and non-economic activities, when decisions must be made in doubtful cases;

74. Takes the view that public broadcasting institutions under the public service obligations are not covered by the European Treaties' competition rules;

75. Considers that, in the context of services in the general interest, a specific approach should be taken to audiovisual services — irrespective of the type of audiovisual broadcast, whether public service television, private television, video streaming, etc. — and culture in order to achieve objectives such as the protection of fundamental rights and democratic principles, pluralism, access for all to culture and technological progress, the right of reply, cultural and linguistic diversity and the protection of users and, in particular, of minors;

76. Looks favourably on the conclusions of the Lille Colloquy of 19/20 July 2000 on the public service function of broadcasting, and calls on the Commission to cooperate with the Member States with a view to considering possible ways of applying the principles of Protocol 32 to the Treaty of Amsterdam;

77. Confirms that within a Community framework to regulate services of general interest and ensure their capacity to achieve their objectives, the Member States have a duty, in accordance with the abovementioned Protocol, to define the tasks of public service broadcasting organisations and to specify their financial structure;

78. Calls on the Commission, the Council and the Member States to create legal certainty for public service broadcasting and the cultural industries in the implementation of the right of competition;

79. Calls on the Commission, the Council and the Member States to coordinate their efforts to guarantee users and operators of audiovisual services and the media, by means of a clear and predictable regulatory framework, fair and non-discriminatory access to infrastructures and contents;

80. Affirms the need, in connection with media markets and audiovisual content, for an objective definition of a dominant position which takes account of the rapid development of these markets and of the accompanying dangers of denying access;

81. Stresses the need to maintain services of general interest, even where providers are operating in a liberalised market on the basis of general authorisations rather than individual licences alone;

82. Considers that the assessment of general interest in the field of audiovisual and cultural content should be subject, at European level, to a high-level, thorough and regular political debate;

83. Stresses that opening the markets in former state monopoly areas, which is favoured by all the EU institutions including the Commission, the Council and the European Parliament, should in principle satisfy the model of fair and socially-responsible competition which serves the interests of citizens and takes account of their changing needs;

84. Is convinced that the model of the social market economy is the European model of the future and the most likely to prove itself strong and sustainable in international competition;

85. Takes the view that an amendment of Article 16 of the Treaty is not necessary to achieve greater legal certainty and clarity in the area of general interest service provision and in this connection endorses the conclusion of the Nice summit that the area of general interest services should not be closely defined; stresses that in such a dynamic area as general interest services, over-regulation would result in robbing operators of opportunities and development possibilities which would primarily benefit citizens and taxpayers;

MINUTES

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SITTING

IN THE CHAIR: Mr PROVAN

Vice-President

1. Opening of sitting

The sitting opened at 09.00.

2. Approval of Minutes of previous sitting

Mrs Ainardi had informed the Chair that she had been present the previous day but that her name was not on the attendance register.

The following spoke:

— Fernández Martin referred to the votes on the various requests for urgent procedure (Item 4) and pointed out that he had in fact voted in favour of the first request (Fishing agreement with Morocco) although his name was not on the voting list; as regards the second request (fight against HIV and other illnesses), the House had approved the request and decided to add the item to the agenda for that week; however, in the Minutes for that sitting it was stated that the item was added to the agenda of 28 November; he reminded the House, on behalf of the DEVE Committee, that there were several versions of the proposal for a decision, which was only available in a single language; as these versions contained differences, he asked that the Commission indicate which was the correct text and ensure it was made available as soon as possible in all languages (the President replied that, as the texts were not available, it had been decided to hold this item over until the 28 November sitting);

— Harbour referred to his repeated calls (for latest reference see Minutes of 25.10.2001, before Item 8) for details of Parliament's staff reforms and announced that he had finally received a letter from the President, but that the letter did not contain any information on the proposed reforms; he called on the President to ask the Bureau and the President of Parliament to give the House a document comparing the staff reforms proposed by the President of Parliament with the reforms proposed by the Commission; he also called for an early debate in the House with Commission Vice-President Kinnock (the President replied that he would forward the speaker's requests to the parties concerned; he noted, on the one hand, that Parliament and the Commission were still in the process of discussing the issue and, on the other hand, that the Bureau and Conference of Presidents were pretty well unanimous on the position of Parliament which, at the end of the day, was sovereign in the matter).

The Minutes of the previous sitting were approved.

Proposal for a European Parliament and Council regulation on action by Member States concerning public service requirements and the award of public service contracts in passenger transport by rail, road and inland waterway (COM(2000) 7 – C5-0326/2000 – 2000/0212(COD))

The proposal was amended as follows:

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION [1]	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
Recital 1
(1) The development of the highest possible standards of public service in the provision of passenger transport by road, rail and inland waterway is one of the primary Community objectives under the Common Transport Policy.	(1) The development of the highest possible standards of public service in the provision of passenger transport by road, rail and inland waterway is, in the context of boosting the use of sustainable forms of transport, one of the primary Community objectives under the Common Transport Policy.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 3

Recital 4a (new)

	(4a) Procedures will be based on the principle of neutrality with regard to the rules governing property ownership under Article 295 of the Treaty, the principle of freedom to define services of general interest under Article 16 of the Treaty, and the principle of proportionality under Article 5 of the Treaty.

Amendment 132

Recital 4b (new)

	(4b) The competent authorities should integrate environmental factors in the assessment of adequate quality for public passenger transport services, determination of selection criteria and allocation of public contracts. This should particularly include the rational use of energy and local, national and international environmental protection standards and norms, especially emission norms concerning air pollutants, noise and greenhouse gases.

Amendment 21

Recital 4c (new)

	(4c) Moreover, one fundamental aim of the Regulation is to achieve a substantial shift from individual motorised modes of land transport towards more sustainable modes of land transport.

Amendment 4

Recital 5

(5) Many Member States have introduced legislation providing for the award of fixed-duration exclusive rights and public service contracts, in at least part of their public transport market, on the basis of open, transparent and fair award procedures. In the light of those developments, the application of Community rules on the freedom of establishment, and the application of Community public procurement rules, significant progress has been made towards Community/EEA-wide market access in public transport. As result, trade between Member States has substantially developed and several public transport operators are now providing services in more than one Member State. As a result, trade between Member States has substantially developed and several public transport operators are now providing services in more than one Member State.

Recital 9a (new)

	(9a) Passenger transport markets which are already deregulated and in which there are no exclusive rights should be allowed to maintain their characteristics and way of functioning.

Recital 13

(13) Studies and experience show that competitive tendering for public service contracts is an effective way of achieving the benefits of competition in terms of cost, efficiency and innovation without obstructing the performance of the specific tasks assigned to the operators in the general public interest.	(13) Studies and experience show that competitive tendering for public service contracts can in many cases be an effective way of achieving the benefits of competition in terms of cost, efficiency and innovation without obstructing the performance of the specific tasks assigned to the operators in the general public interest.

Amendment 8

Recital 14a (new)

	(14a) The tendering rules laid down in Directives 92/50/EEC and 93/38/EEC do not apply to public service concessions.

Amendment 9

Recital 15

(15) Tendering of public service contracts should not be compulsory where safety standards in the provision of rail services or the coordination of a metro or light rail network would be endangered. Interested parties should nevertheless have the opportunity to comment on plans to award contracts in this way, in time for their views to be taken into account. Where rail contracts awarded in this way are fully integrated with bus services, it should be possible for the bus services to be included in the same contract.	(15) Tendering of public service contracts should not be compulsory where safety standards in the provision of rail services or cost-effective operation might be endangered or, in the case of a metro or light rail network, due to the specific technical features of those services, it is impossible to tender single lines or groups of lines without undermining safety. Interested parties should nevertheless have the opportunity to comment on plans to award contracts in this way, in time for their views to be taken into account.

It is not inappropriate for this grant to be made without tendering, provided that it is for a strictly limited period only and is not renewable.	provide services on one or more particular routes that are not eligible for financial compensation, where this is at the operator's request. It is not inappropriate for this grant to be made without tendering and for the grant to be renewable, provided that the route or routes are not included in a contract of public service obligation.
	(18a) Direct operation by the authority concerned, by means of a company of its own, has in many cases proved its worth in terms of winning the competitive battle against the car, meeting environmental and urban planning objectives, the expansion of metro or light rail networks, the option of introducing free public transport, the ability to respond rapidly and flexibly to constantly changing requirements of public representatives democratically elected for the area concerned, and counteracting the high public costs of planning, tendering and scrutiny. The right of local authorities to opt for the permanent continuance of such companies alongside other kinds of companies therefore deserves particular attention.
	Amendment 13 Recital 19
(19) It should be possible for authorities to compensate operators for the cost of complying with minimum criteria for public transport operation, provided that this compensation can be fairly calculated and is not at such a high level that it detracts from the pressure on operators to focus primarily on the requirements of passengers.	(19) It should be possible for authorities to compensate operators for the cost of complying with minimum criteria for public transport operation and for the costs or income losses arising from activities that boost the use of public transport, provided that this compensation can be fairly calculated and is not at such a high level that it detracts from the pressure on operators to focus primarily on the requirements of passengers.
	Amendment 14 Recital 20
(20) The provisions of this Regulation applicable to operators should also apply in those cases where public transport services are provided by a public administration which does not have a legal personality distinct from that of the public administration that is acting as the competent authority. Any other arrangement, by not applying these provisions to cases where the State acts in an entrepreneurial capacity, would not ensure the non-discriminatory application of Community law.	(20) The provisions of this Regulation applicable to operators should also apply in those cases where public transport services are provided by a public administration which does not have a legal personality distinct from that of the public administration that is acting as the competent authority. In application of the subsidiarity principle, however, the competent authority's right to arrange to provide transport services itself or with its own companies without a tendering procedure should continue to be upheld. This will take account of the case-law of the European Court of Justice in its judgments of 18 November 1999 (C-107/98) [1] and 10 November 1998 (C-360/96) [2].

Recital 21

(21) Studies and experience show that where services are provided under public service contracts whose duration is limited to five years, the performance of the specific tasks assigned to the operators need not be obstructed. To minimise the distortion of competition while protecting the quality of services, public service contracts should normally, therefore, be limited to this duration. However, longer periods may be necessary where the operator has to invest in infrastructure, railway rolling-stock or other vehicles that are tied to specific, geographically defined transport services and that have long payback periods.	(21) Public service contracts of short duration can create problems in terms of the continuity of provision, investment and staffing. To minimise the distortion of competition while protecting the quality of services, public service contracts should be limited to no more than eight years for bus services and at most 15 years for rail services. This will give the competent authorities the flexibility required for adapting contract periods to local circumstances. In order to ensure that, upon expiry of the public service contract, the outgoing operator does not incur any losses on investments in assets required by the terms of that contract, the incoming operator should be required to compensate him to the value of any outstanding paybacks.

Recital 23

(23) Where it is appropriate for competent authorities, in pursuing the general interest, to protect employees in situations where the conclusion of a public service contract may lead to a change of operator, they should have the power to require operators to apply the relevant provisions of Council Directive 77/187/EEC of 14 February 1977 on the approximation of the laws of the Member States relating to the safeguarding of employees' rights in the event of transfers of undertakings, businesses or parts of businesses [1].	(23) Where the conclusion of a public service contract may lead to a change of operator, the operator should be required to offer staff previously engaged in providing the services at least the same rights as those they enjoyed before the selected operator took over the business.

Amendment 17

Recital 23a (new)

	(23a) The provisions of this Regulation must ensure that small businesses can continue to secure market shares in local transport services.

Amendment 18

Recital 24

(24) It is necessary that the procedures introduced according to this Regulation are transparent and that appeals procedures against decisions of the competent authorities are in place. Authorities should also keep records of their decisions for a period of 10 years, in line with the limitation period laid down in Article 15 of Council Regulation (EC) No 659/1999 on State aid procedures.	(24) It is necessary that the procedures introduced according to this Regulation are transparent and that procedures for appealing against decisions of the competent authorities are in place. Authorities should also keep records of their decisions for at least five years after the expiry of the contract, in line with the limitation period laid down in Article 15 of Council Regulation (EC) No 659/1999 on State aid procedures.

Recital 25

(25) Regulation (EEC) No 1191/69 provides that operating costs and revenues, overheads, assets and liabilities relating to the fulfilment of public service requirements need to be accounted for separately. This requirement should be retained, in a modernised form, in particular to ensure that authorities obtain value for money from public expenditure and that payments made by way of compensation are not misused to distort competition.	(25) Regulation (EEC) No 1191/69 provides that operating costs and revenues, overheads, assets and liabilities relating to the fulfilment of public service requirements need to be accounted for separately. This should not prevent or prohibit the use of funds for the provision of local public transport services, when such funds have been gained in fully liberalised markets. The requirement on separate accounting should be retained, in a modernised form, in particular to ensure that authorities obtain value for money from public expenditure and that payments made by way of compensation are not used to finance services other than those contractually agreed.

Recital 30

(30) As a result of the Community's international obligations, access to the public transport markets of the Member States has, in some circumstances, been granted to certain third-country operators; this Regulation does not restrict this access.	(30) As a result of the Community's international obligations, access to the public transport markets of the Member States has, in some circumstances, been granted to certain third-country operators; this Regulation does not restrict this access, provided that such operators comply with the obligations applicable in the Member State concerned in respect of staff, equipment and business operation.

Amendment 22

Article −1 (new)

Amendment 42

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph −1 (new)

	Advances in biotechnological and post-genomic research will entail ethical and social implications. These issues can be resolved only by a joint effort. National solutions are not possible in a Europe of open frontiers.

Amendment 43

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1

'Post-genomic' research based on analysis of the human genome and genomes of model (animal, plant and microbial) organisms, will culminate in numerous applications in various sectors, and notably in the development of new diagnostic tools and new treatments capable of helping to combat diseases that are not at present under control, offering major potential markets.	Progress in the field of genomics and biotechnology may yield numerous new applications both in medicine and in the fields of environmental protection and agriculture, as a result of which hitherto unsolved problems can be overcome.

Amendment 44

Annex 1, Section 1, Chapter 1.1.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1a (new)

	Europe also needs to be able to play a leading role in research on these issues, which now arise at world level, as well as a coherent contribution to the international debate on them, based on the most precise and complete knowledge.

Amendment 45

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1, paragraph 1b (new)

	Genomic research coordinated at European level, particularly in the agriculture and agrifoodstuffs sectors, should focus on those areas where it can achieve the greatest impact, should be able to unleash all existing potential in close cooperation with national initiatives, provide as much information as possible for scientists and the general public and should be flexible in duration, but with firm and realistic objectives.

Amendment 46

Annex I, Chapter 1.1.1, Justification of the effort and added European value, paragraph 3

Objective

Research linked to cancer, cardiovascular diseases, diabetes, degenerative diseases of the nervous system (such as Alzheimer's disease, Parkinson's disease, Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, and so forth), and rare diseases

Amendment 70

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Objective, paragraph 2

Amendment 72

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1 (new)

Justification of the effort and European added value

European medical research, however, should not focus exclusively on the human genome. 'Non-genomic' research also requires joint efforts first and foremost because research on the human genome will not solve every health problem over the next 20 years. Furthermore, European databases on various diseases could open up prospects for gigantic progress in 'traditional research', since they could be used to document the occurrence and geographical location of cases and prognoses and developments. Databases of this type could likewise document trends as regards disease figures, potential causes of diseases, and factors affording some measure of protection against them.

Amendment 73

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraphs 2-4 (new)

	In these medical fields, the objective of this priority theme will be to develop improved patient-oriented strategies for the prevention and management of disease and for living and ageing healthily. The research will therefore concentrate on translating the new knowledge being created by genomics and other fields of basic research into applications that improve clinical practice and public health.
	For cancer, the priority theme will sponsor a patient-oriented European Initiative on Cancer Research, containing three interlinked components:
	— establishing a European Centre for the Exploitation of Research on Cancer, preferably by developing existing structures and networks, with the purpose of developing evidence-based guidelines for good clinical practice and improved public health strategies by accelerating the translation of existing research results into applications,
	— supporting clinical research, particularly public-interest clinical trials, aimed at validating new and improved interventions,
	— supporting translationary research aimed at pulling basic knowledge through to applications in clinical practice and public health.
	The European Initiative on Cancer Research requires € 400 million in order to have a reasonable visibility and impact in relation to cancer research in Europe as a whole.

Amendment 74

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 5 (new)

	A European Research Area should also be promoted with regard to cancer research, and therefore the networks dealing with cancer that are already in existence should be supported, particularly those made up of national centres of excellence and expertise in the field of cancer research and treatment, and the criteria for identifying these centres should be clearly defined.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 75

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 6 (new)

Given its nature, research into the field of rare diseases is often considered not economically viable due to the sometimes very limited number of persons in each country affected by specific rare diseases. For this reason, coordination of efforts carried out at national level through the promotion of European cooperation is fundamental

Amendment 76

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1 b, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 10 (new)

Childhood diseases are a field in which European cooperation is vital for the study of pathogenetic mechanisms underlying pediatric serious diseases as well as identification of new instruments for their prevention and therapy. Serious diseases in children are — fortunately — very rare. Information on the few cases that do exist should be shared to enable effective treatments to be developed.

Amendment 77

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 1 (new)

Actions envisaged

Research linked to cancer, cardiovascular diseases, diabetes and diabetes-related diseases, degenerative diseases of the nervous system (including Alzheimer's Disease, Parkinson's Disease and experimental treatments now under investigation for new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease), psychiatric diseases, cardiovascular diseases, viral hepatitis C, allergies and metabolism diseases including diabetes and rare diseases.

- Job-related skin diseases,
- Control of disease-related conditions, for example, the advancement of knowledge in the field of palliative medicine and care.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 78

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 2 (new)

A priority approach will be pursued with regard to combating serious diseases in developing countries such as Aids, malaria and tuberculosis. The European Union will take priority action in this connection, and contribute to coordination at international level. In the case of Aids and tuberculosis, this entails the development of vaccines and medicines appropriate to conditions in third world countries; in the case of malaria, it entails the continuing of research into, and testing of, a malaria vaccine. To that end, a structure will be set up if necessary on the basis of Articles 171 and 181 of the Treaty.

Amendment 79

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 3 (new)

Studying human development, the brain and diseases relating to the ageing process;

Amendment 80

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 4 (new)

Developing better therapies for children.

Amendment 81

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 5 (new)

Epidemiology and preventive action on health techniques:

- epidemiological data, tools and models for understanding, analysing and predicting the influence of environmental and dietetic factors on various populations and on health.
- preventive health policies,
- preventive action to influence environmental factors or control environmental risks,
- preventive medicine.

Amendment 82

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 6 (new)

Combating resistance to drugs and antibiotics in particular; research in this field must deal with points related to animal feed as well as hygiene habits (or the lack of hygiene), drug prescription practices, and the ways in which medicines are customarily taken;

Amendment 83

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions Envisaged, paragraph 7, (new)

Research on alternative or non-conventional medicines with the following aims: understanding the 'mechanism of action' of non-conventional therapies; evaluating the cost benefit and effectiveness; understanding the effect of non-conventional therapies in farm livestock as regarding on public health and animal welfare.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 84

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions Envisaged, paragraph 8 (new)

	Research on medical use of cannabis.

Amendment 85

ANNEX 1, Chapter 1.1.1.2, Actions envisaged, paragraph 9 and 10 (new)

	Research into ethically acceptable alternatives to technologies which are controversial within the Community and Member States, e.g. alternatives to experiments on animals and to embryo stem cell research and artificial insemination methods that could prevent the production of supernumerary embryos.
	A broad approach will be pursued with regard to combating the three poverty-linked infectious diseases (Aids, malaria and tuberculosis) which have priority in terms of disease control at EU and international level.

Amendment 86

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Objective, paragraph 1

The activities carried out in this area, pursuant to the conclusions of the Lisbon European Council and the objectives of the e-Europe initiative, are intended to stimulate the development in Europe of technologies and applications at the heart of the creation of the Information Society in order to increase the competitiveness of European industry and allow European citizens in all EU regions the possibility of benefiting fully from the development of the knowledge-based society.	The activities carried out in this area, pursuant to the conclusions of the Lisbon European Council and the objectives of the e-Europe initiative, are intended to stimulate the development in Europe of technologies and applications at the heart of the creation of the Information Society in order to increase the competitiveness of European industry and allow European citizens in all regions of the EU and candidate countries the possibility of benefiting fully from the development of the knowledge-based society.

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Objective, paragraphs 1a to 1c (new)

	The research effort in FP6 will concentrate on the future generation of IST that will reinforce the e-Europe objectives of bringing IST applications and services to everyone, every home, every school and to all businesses. It will enable the development of the next generation Internet that will be more user-centred. A new generation of IST is emerging that will enable all citizens and businesses to benefit from IST services. Involving a radical shift from the current 'PC based' systems and from the 'keyboard, mouse and screen', the aim is to render technology almost invisible and make its use natural and effortless.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	This requires a massive research effort to embed electronic components and devices in everyday objects and to build networking and computing technologies that have enough bandwidth and performance for interconnecting such components everywhere and at any time. In addition, interfaces are required that use our natural senses (touch, smell, speech and gesture) for easy and effective interaction with knowledge-based applications and services.
	This approach, which is strongly supported by industry and the research community, represents a clear opportunity for Europe to build on its technological and industrial strengths in areas such as mobile communications, consumer electronics and embedded software. 3G mobile and current wireless systems are a major step towards this next generation as they enable anywhere access to Internet services from a non-PC platform and for the normal 'man on the street'. Wearable mobile devices that incorporate interfaces making use of our 'natural' senses such as speech are currently under development. They constitute a further step towards this so-called vision of 'ambient intelligence' in which the users (people) are at the centre of IST development.

Amendment 88

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1a (new)

	Europe is well positioned to lead and shape the future development not only of technologies but also of their impact on our life and work. European industry has to some extent missed the PC era but has secured a lead in other areas, especially the mobile sector, that must be maintained.

Amendment 89

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1b (new)

	The future competitiveness of all European industry and the living standards of Europe's citizens depend largely on future efforts in IST research in order to prepare the upcoming generation of products, processes and services. Europe's direct competitors, the USA and Japan, are currently deploying massive effort in this field both at the private and public level. Hence, Europe can not afford to lose the unique opportunities offered by the next generation of IST, either in social or economic terms.

Amendment 90

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 5, second sentence

Amendment 91

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Actions Envisaged, paragraph −1 (new)

	Building innovative applications and solving complex problems
	A strong applied and application-specific research effort is needed to address in an integrated way the socio-economic challenges. Research will aim at:
	— solving 'trust and confidence' problems in the areas of security, privacy, property and individual rights and dependability. Improving trust in the knowledge society is a key requirement for its development.
	— addressing the societal challenges such as health, inclusion, transport, environment and cultural heritage as well as business challenges such as support to new value chain management, mobile commerce (allowing for a concrete step forward towards 3G functionality) and ework tools and processes.
	— developing the tools and applications of knowledge and computing GRIDs for complex problem solving in science, industry and businesses. These are key elements of the Next Generation Internet and will enable the harnessing of computing and storage resources across Europe and will bring them to the desktop of any researcher, engineer or end user.
	— stimulating further independent research activities on biomedical (in particular non-thermal) effects due to exposure to electromagnetic fields, also in the context of new applications of electromagnetic fields due to emerging technologies. Possible causal relationships between exposure to electromagnetic fields and cancer development and/or neurological disorders and symptoms need to be investigated.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 108

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Actions Envisaged, action 4, paragraph 1a (new)

	As the European Parliament resolution of 5 September 2001 on the Echelon network showed, the countries of the Union should develop computer technology (means of transmission, encryption and decryption) independent of the industries of third countries (the USA above all), not only in order to protect European industries, but also and in particular with a view to respect for the privacy of EU citizens.

Amendment 109

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.2, Actions envisaged, action 4a (new)

	Future and emerging technologies and the information society
	An exploratory activity in future and emergent technologies will support basic research which, in the long run, will bring visionary ideas to the borders of current knowledge. This will be achieved through two activities:
	— support for research into open and wide-ranging areas that may result in discoveries that lead to state-of-the-art technologies;
	— funding for projects focused on a small number of highly interdisciplinary objectives such as the interface between organic chemistry and computers;
	— quantum computing;

Amendment 111

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.3, Objective, paragraph 1

The activities carried out in this area are intended to help Europe achieve a critical mass of capacities needed to develop and exploit, especially for greater eco-efficiency, leading-edge technologies for the knowledge- and intelligence-based products, services and manufacturing processes of the years to come. Amendment 112

Annex I, Chapter 1.1.3, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 4

Where materials are concerned, the aim is to develop intelligent materials which are expected to add considerable value in terms of applications in sectors such as transport, energy and the biomedical sector and for which there is a potential market of several tens of billions of euros. 	to mid-term (2010-2020) requirement to support technological developments essential to address the reduction of greenhouse gases and pollutant emissions and the security of energy supply by safeguarding the existing infrastructure, until Renewables technologies gain more widespread acceptance, especially in the liberalised energy market, an approach which would have positive implications for cost, safety and security of energy supplies.

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.6.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1 (new)

	Justification of the effort and European added value
	The global implementation of sustainable development requires the design, development and dissemination of technologies making it possible to ensure more rational and sustainable use of natural resources to produce energy and raw materials for industrial processes. This should include finding and developing the resources, clean and energy efficient production and minimising waste, emissions and the impact of such economic activity on the environment. Particular attention should be given to the development of an Energy Intelligent Europe;

Amendment 165

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.6.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraphs 2-4 (new)

	The requirement to provide security and diversity of supply, whilst meeting ever more stringent environmental obligations, within a European Community promoting its indigenous industry, with the ability to provide for internal economic growth, against the worldwide threat presented by competition is well documented.
	Such a goal requires a continuous and evolving RD&D programme to facilitate an accelerated development of renewables and sustainable development of conventional energies but also act as a bridge to longer term solutions like hydrogen.
	The growth in energy demand and the Kyoto targets require the development of safe, clean, cheap and sustainable innovative conventional-energy technical solutions. This in turn will accelerate the development of a replacement programme of renewables to meet the demand.

Amendment 166

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.6.1, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 5 (new)

	In order to achieve sustainable development the production and management of natural resources over the whole life cycle, as in the case of energy, is a core issue. Following the EU's policy on sustainable development, the Commission's 'Communication on the non-energy extractive industry and

Annex 1, Chapter 1.1.6,
Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraphs 6b, 6c and 6d (new)

	In addition, the close ties between the environment and agriculture and forestry cannot be overlooked, since these activities occupy a large part of European territory and make direct use of natural resources. Helping to integrate agriculture, forestry and the environment would contribute to the sustainability of the European agricultural model, as well as preserving biodiversity and curbing the greenhouse effect.
	With this in view, a three-pronged research strategy needs to be developed: first, the multifunctional role of agricultural and forestry activity must be incorporated into the various production systems as a focus for a new CAP capable of ensuring the sustainable development of rural areas; second, with a view to securing sustainable agricultural production, greater knowledge is needed of the impact of agriculture's negative externalities; lastly, appropriate political mechanisms must be devised to meet these challenges, making it possible to provide farmers with aid in return for the goods and services of public interest they provide (positive externalities), introduce new production methods that are more environment-friendly and help protect genetic resources, geared to individual production systems, improve farm waste recycling techniques, develop alternatives to existing inputs to guarantee production and combat pests and diseases, encourage techniques to combat erosion and the effects of fires and acid rain on forests and, finally, study animal welfare rules while determining the precise economic effects on farms.
	This strategy, with the support of a detailed study of economic analyses of the impact of the Agenda 2000 reform and indicators of the multifunctional role of each production system and local, regional and Community agri-environmental indicators, must provide quantified responses and thus facilitate decision-making both by economic operators and political leaders within the framework of a new CAP.

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 210

Annex I, Chapter 1.1.6.3, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1, indent 1 (new)

	— the integration of sustainable development (see Article 6 of the Treaty): the reduction of noise and harmful gases (both local and regional) in the interests of the environment and human health by means of socio-economic techniques and approaches relating to mobility and transport in Europe, in order to prevent or reduce external environmental costs. It would include research for:
	— new vehicle concepts in particular for road transport and urban transport;
	— novel propulsion systems, fuel cells and alternative motor fuels adapted to transport;
	— advanced design and production techniques leading to improved quality, safety, reliability, recyclability, weight reduction, comfort and cost-effectiveness of transport systems and vehicles.

Amendment 211

Annex I., Chapter 1.1.6.3, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1, indent 2 (new)

	— safety, security, and accessibility for persons with reduced mobility: support to enable new techniques and socio-psychological expertise to be devised and developed regarding the safety, security, and accessibility of mobility and surface transport in order to foster a stronger safety and security culture within the systems and avert the social and external costs incurred in accidents;

Amendment 212

Annex I, Chapter 1.1.6.3, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1, indent 3 (new)

	— intermodality: making the rail network and its intermodal connections in Europe (hard- and software techniques for connection and transfer hubs and points) more efficient for the general public, so as to provide a better alternative to more congested forms of mobility and transport;

Amendment 213

Annex I, Chapter 1.1.6.3, Justification of the effort and European added value, paragraph 1, indent 4 (new)

	— interoperability: increasing the effectiveness of cross-border mobility and transport links by contributing to new techniques which are more compatible and less costly to industries and operators and, ultimately, to European consumers. The European added value is obvious in this case because cross-border problems can be resolved only by joint action;

Europe's transition towards a knowledge-based economy and society, and its sustainable development in the interests of the quality of life of all citizens will be all the easier if it takes place in a way which is properly understood and managed. This requires a substantial research effort concerning the issues of integrated and sustainable economic and social progress based on the fundamental values of justice and solidarity which characterise the European model of society. In this respect, economic, political, social and human sciences research should more particularly help to ensure the harnessing and exploitation of an exponentially increasing quantity of information and knowledge and an understanding of the processes at work in this area. TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Annex III, introduction, paragraph 2

The Community's financial contribution to these activities, which will incorporate measures to encourage innovation, will be carried out by means of a range of instruments described below.	The Community's financial contribution to these activities, which will incorporate measures to encourage innovation, will be carried out by means of a range of four new instruments: networks of excellence, integrated projects, programmes under Article 169 of the Treaty and the stairway to excellence, which will exist for a limited period alongside some of the old instruments.

Amendment 297

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.1, paragraph −1 (new)

	The overall objective of Networks of Excellence (NoE) is to reinforce scientific and technological excellence in Europe by progressively integrating research capacities at the level of excellence across European countries. NoE foster cooperation between enterprises (SMEs and large firms), centres of excellence of universities and R&D centres, technology organisations; they foster cooperation in the field of strategic fundamental pre-competitive research, because every NoE has as its objective to advance the progress of knowledge related to its particular theme, with a view to attaining long-term goals. Therefore a NoE has a programme of research activities.

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.1, paragraph 5a (new)

	A network of excellence must have a strategy for disseminating research results. To secure the implementation of such an information strategy, part of the budget of each network is to be allocated to an information activity. The information will, depending on the focus of the research, be distributed either to the public, industry or to both. The participation of companies must comprise at least 50 % of each network.

Amendment 299

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph −1 (new)

	The overall objective of an integrated research project (IP) is to achieve pre-defined results. The pre-defined results are related to the improvement of the competitiveness of European enterprises (SMEs and large enterprises) or are directed towards problem-solving research related to the 8 integrating research priorities of FP6. Because IP have pre-defined results they focus on pre-agreed research objectives limited in time. The cooperation amongst partners of an IP is also for the term of the integrated research project. Partners can be enterprises, SMEs, universities or, research and technology organisations. The pre-defined results are pre-competitive and related to products, processes and services. IP will never cover commercial development activities. The participants will retain ownership of the results on conditions defined by the 'Rules on participation and dissemination'.

Amendment 300

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph 2

These projects, representing an order of magnitude of up to tens of millions of euros, will be carried out by consortia, often involving intense university/industry collaboration.	These projects, which include small and medium-sized projects as well as those representing an order of magnitude of up to tens of millions of euros, will be carried out by consortia, often involving intense university/industry collaboration.

Amendment 301

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph 2a (new)

	At least 10 % of each project must be allocated to universities for basic research.

Amendment 302

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph 3

The projects may cover 'risky' research and will in all cases have clearly defined objectives in terms of scientific and technological knowledge or products, processes or services. The integrated projects may in some cases be made up of clusters dedicated to different aspects of one and the same objective, integrated into a single action by industry and public sector research partners on the basis of a regularly updated timetable.	The projects may cover 'risky' research and will in all cases have clearly defined objectives in terms of scientific and technological knowledge applicable to products, processes or services. The integrated projects may in some cases be made up of clusters dedicated to different aspects of one and the same objective, integrated into a single action by industry and public sector research partners on the basis of a regularly updated timetable.

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph 6

The integrated projects will be selected on the basis of calls for proposals. Participation in them will be open to third country organisations and organisations for European scientific co-operation. There will be specific measures to encourage SME participation.	The integrated projects will be selected on the basis of calls for proposals. Participation in them will be open to third country organisations and organisations for European scientific co-operation. There will be specific measures to encourage SME participation. Therefore in order to encourage integration of SMEs into the integrated projects, projects which include SMEs should be rated more highly in the evaluation of the applicants.

Amendment 304

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2, paragraph 6a (new)

	Criteria for selection of integrated projects:
	— areas which are expanding and create good growth prospects;
	— areas in which Community businesses can and must become more competitive;

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	— areas in which prospects of significant scientific and technological progress are opening up, offering possibilities for dissemination and exploitation of results in the medium or long term, in order to contribute to the harmonious and sustainable development of the Community as a whole.

Amendment 305

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2a, Stairway to excellence (new)

	1.1.2a. Stairway to excellence
	In the priority thematic areas of research of the framework programme, financial contribution to projects falling within the scope of the stairway to excellence.
	If the European Research Area is to be brought into being, efforts will have to be pooled in the European policy for research and technological development. That being the case, European added value and a great part of its research should be measured, according to the three essential yardsticks of excellence, critical mass, and the pioneering nature of the project, (together with the quality of its findings). Efforts will focus on projects and forms of cooperation which, having satisfied all three criteria, offer the best prospects of success.
	As well as focusing efforts in the manner described above, additional efforts will be made to identify subfields or research projects within the priority thematic areas and partners in the research community who deserve to be encouraged to rise to the requisite degrees of excellence, critical mass, and utility which they have not yet attained. In cases of this kind, the other three new instruments will not always be possible or appropriate to apply directly. The means to be employed in such cases, where the need has been duly shown to exist, will therefore be the range of tools provided under the Fifth framework programme for indirect research actions, subject to the same financial conditions for participation. These tools are: shared-cost projects, support affording access to research infrastructures, technology-stimulation projects to encourage and facilitate SME participation in research and technological development activities, 'Marie Curie' training grants, support for networks, concerted research projects, and accompanying measures.
	This instrument must be used flexibly and provide for arrangements to accommodate other small-scale participants with innovative research projects, and the potential to meet the criteria with regard to critical mass and centres of excellence. Moreover, the stairway to excellence must be able to embrace:
	(a) research centres not included in the networks of excellence,
	(b) initiatives proposed by precompetitive research teams,

Wednesday 14 November 2001

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	(c) SMEs, and
	(d) projects which can form the basis of future networks, with a view to integrating regions with similar problems and candidate countries to be incorporated into the European Research Area.
	These projects should be consistent with or relevant to the main themes of the framework programme. Funding will be limited to 20 % of the total budget of the framework programme. Administration may be delegated to external sources where this would be beneficial financially and administratively.
Amendment 306
Annex III, Chapter 1.1.2a, paragraph 5a (new)
	In the implementation of the Framework programme the Commission must aim to allocate 30 % of the financial resources assigned to the heading 'Integrating research' to the instrument: 'Stairway to excellence'. This with the objective of creating a smooth transition from the Fifth to the Sixth framework programme and in order to allocate resources for smaller research projects etc. carried out under this instrument.
	The Commission shall deliver to Parliament each year a status containing (for each of the four instruments):
	— Number of applicant and granted projects,
	— Total and average amount of resources being applied and granted,
	The status shall be accompanied by an explanation
Amendment 307
Annex III, Chapter 1.1.3, paragraph 2a (new)
	National programmes to be carried out jointly pursuant to Article 169 of the Treaty will be determined by the European Parliament and the Council under the codecision procedure (Article 251 of the Treaty). Whenever Article 169 is to be applied, a decision to that effect must be taken under Article 251. Subject to this stipulation of the Treaty, several proposals for decisions may be submitted to Parliament and the Council at the same time.
Amendment 308
Annex III, Chapter 1.1.3, paragraph 3a (new)
	The application of Article 169 of the Treaty should be non-discriminatory as between larger and smaller Member States and that the specific proposals for actions of this category be inserted in the framework programme.

Wednesday 14 November 2001

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 309

Annex III, Chapter 1.1.4a (new)

1.1.4 a Use of research results

The rules governing the dissemination of research results should promote the protection of the intellectual property and the use and dissemination of those results. They should ensure that participants have mutual access to pre-existing know-how and to knowledge arising from research work to the extent necessary to conduct the research work or to use the resulting knowledge. At the same time, they should guarantee the protection of the participants' intellectual assets. They should also take account of the features of the integrated projects and networks of excellence, in particular by offering a high degree of flexibility to the participants, and allowing them to agree among themselves on the most suitable arrangements for their collaboration and for the exploitation of the resulting knowledge.

Amendment 310

Annex 3, Chapter 1.2.1 (new)

1.2.1. Qualitative and quantitative criteria for the structuring of the ERA

Before starting to implement the activities of the European Research Area, the Commission will set out in a communication which concrete objectives it aims to achieve by it. The communication will consider, inter alia, direct outcomes such as:

- number of Marie Curie grants,
- number of exchanges of researchers,
- outcome of such exchanges.

It will also consider indirect outcomes such as:

- publications,
- contributions to new research programmes,
- citations in professional journals,
- new patents,
- contributions to the dissemination of the results of such research.

Amendment 311

Annex 3, Chapter 2, paragraph −1 (new)

Decentralisation of management

It is important that the management of the Sixth framework programme should be decentralised.

Nevertheless, a clear separation of powers needs to be made between the Commission as the body responsible for the European Court of Auditors and the European Parliament, and the management of a decentralised project.

Wednesday 14 November 2001

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	The Rules of Participation must also make clear:
	— the management tasks of a decentralised project;
	— which management costs the Commission will reimburse and which are to be borne by the participants in the decentralised project;
	— the nature of financial responsibility and the conduct of the discharge of a decentralised project;
	— who is responsible for the conduct of the project, and what role the Commission has in this context as supervisory authority;
	— intellectual property rights;
	— when, and how the results will be disseminated;
	— what contribution a decentralised project must make to dissemination of results.
	Amendment 312
	Annex 3, Chapter 2, paragraph −1a (new)
	The Commission will seek to ensure that the management tasks allocated to Networks of Excellence (NoEs) and Integrated Projects (IPs) are limited to what is strictly necessary in terms of the remote management of NoEs and IPs by the Commission. It is not intended that the Commission should pass on its own administrative burdens to the NoEs and IPs or place unnecessary burdens on these bodies.
	The Commission will assess on an annual basis with the current NoEs and IPs the level of the management tasks and the administrative burdens, and will issue a report to the European Parliament and the Council.
	Amendment 313
	Annex III, Chapter2, paragraph 1a (new)
	The rules governing Community financial participation will be set out in a proposal to be submitted by the Commission to the European Parliament and the Council and will be laid down under the codecision procedure provided for in Article 251 of the Treaty. The proposal will cover all the matters to be dealt with, including the following: the division of responsibilities between and the respective specific tasks of the Community and external project managers; intellectual property rights; rules on calls for proposals aimed at outside bodies issued by external managers; publication and dissemination of findings; the definition of the management costs to be reimbursed by the Commission or borne by participants; a simplified selection procedure to enable possible project sponsors to be given an initial indication regarding the likely eligibility of such applications as they might intend to submit; to foresee mechanisms to recognise in the following call for competition research projects already judged scientifically valid by the Commission and not financed for the shortage of financial resources; transparency in relation to non-participating bodies; advance publication of possible future calls for proposals; rules on co-partnership to ensure that, when a private and a public institute are co-partners in a network of excellence, the network is not funded twice over; and detailed financial arrangements for the participation of bodies from candidate and third countries in the various instruments.

	Amendment 314
	Annex 3, Chapter 2, paragraph 1b (new)
	The Commission will create, within the Sixth framework programme, a separate facility to enable those countries of the former Yugoslavia which are participants in the Stability Pact also to participate in the implementation of the Sixth FP.
	Amendment 315
	Annex III, Chapter 2, paragraph 3a (new)
	In the case of participation of organisations from Mediterranean or developing countries, a contribution of the MEDA programme and of the financial instruments of the Union's aid to development could be envisaged.
	Amendment 316
	Annex III, Chapter 2, paragraph 7a (new)
	Pursuant to Article 4 of the Decision concerning the Sixth framework programme and Article 173 of the Treaty the Commission will draw up an annual progress report on the implementation of the 2002-2006 framework programme. The report will accurately assess the decentralisation arrangements and the procedures for implementing each category of instrument, especially in the light of management parameters such as the speed at which programmes are launched and contracts concluded, the effectiveness of contractors as regards decentralised calls for proposals, the attainment of quantitative and qualitative objectives, and the integrating and structuring effects.
	Amendment 317
	Annex III, Chapter 2, paragraph 7b (new)
	The Commission will assess the progress, results, and scientific quality of the activities carried out under the Sixth framework programme and the management of those activities by its own departments and, where applicable, its contractors. In accordance with Article 5 of the Decision concerning the Sixth framework programme, the Commission will call upon independent high-level experts to assess the implementation of Community activities during the preceding five years. The nature of that assessment will be both operational and strategic. In particular, the assessment will specify how far the Sixth framework programme has served to establish the European Research Area and attain the Lisbon objectives.

TEXTS ADOPTED

1. Criminal sanctions and Community law (procedure without debate)

B5-0707/2001

European Parliament recommendation on criminal sanctions and Community law

The European Parliament,

— having regard to the provisions on police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters: Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, Articles 2, 6, 42 and 47 of the Treaty on European Union and, inter alia, Articles 47(2), 55, 65, 95, 175, and 280 of the EC Treaty,

— having regard to its previous resolutions, particularly its resolution of 13 March 1998 on judicial cooperation in criminal matters in the European Union [1],

— having regard to the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union [2],

— having regard to Article 39(3) of the Treaty on European Union,

— having regard to the proposals of the Committee on Citizens' Freedoms and Rights, Justice and Home Affairs, the Committee on the Environment, Public Health and Consumer Policy and the Committee on Budgetary Control,

— having regard to Rule 107 of its Rules of Procedure,

A. whereas the European Union is founded on the principles of the rule of law, liberty, democracy and respect for human rights, as stated in Article 6 of the Treaty on European Union, principles which are common to the Member States,

B. whereas these principles, and in particular the principle of the rule of law, imply parliamentary scrutiny and judicial control over legislative measures, and whereas adequate controls are particularly important for measures directly impinging on the rights and freedoms of citizens, such as the imposition of criminal law sanctions,

C. whereas the European Parliament is consulted increasingly frequently on legislative measures requiring Member States to establish criminal law sanctions, for example in relation to the environment [3], the protection of the Community's financial interests [4], counterfeiting of the Euro [5], child pornography [6], combating terrorism [7], illegal immigration [8], and trafficking in human beings [9]; whereas, in particular:

  — within the EU framework two legislative initiatives have so far been adopted regarding environmental crimes, with different legal bases; the Council framework Decision on combating serious environmental crime [10] is based on Article 34(2)(b) of the Treaty on European Union and the proposal for a Directive of the European Parliament and the Council on the protection of the environment through criminal law [11] is based on Article 175 of the EC Treaty,

— Parliament has, in several resolutions, emphasised the need to appoint a European Public Prosecutor for the protection of the financial interests of the European Union, by means of a revision of Article 280 of the EC Treaty, and whereas the Commission's proposal to the Nice European Council to that effect was not successful,

— the Nice European Council again confirmed that protection of the Communities' financial interests came under the first pillar,

— the 1995 convention and the two additional protocols on the protection of the European Communities' financial interests, drawn up by the Council Act of 26 July 1995 [1], have still not been ratified by all the Member States, which is preventing them from entering into force and means there is no genuine protection of financial interests at Community level,

— the will of the Member States and the Commission to wage a genuine campaign to combat fraud against the Community's financial interests can be called into question,

— the Commission recently proposed a Directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on the criminal-law protection of the Community's financial interests [2], which incorporates the provisions of the abovementioned convention, including Member States' substantive criminal law concerning the definition of fraud, corruption and money laundering, but does not include the provisions on criminal law procedure and judicial cooperation, which means that the draft directive is not a satisfactory anti-fraud tool,

D. whereas only first-pillar legislation is automatically subject both to judicial review by the Court of Justice and oversight by the Commission in its capacity as guardian of the Treaties,

E. whereas, pursuant to Article 47 of the Treaty on European Union, the EC Treaty takes precedence over the Treaty on European Union, with the result that measures adopted under the provisions of Title VI TEU cannot encroach upon the competence of the Community, leading to disputes as to the correct legal base and the division of competence for the adoption of measures concerning criminal law sanctions,

F. whereas measures for the approximation of rules in the Member States on criminal matters are due to be adopted outside the Community framework, in accordance with the intergovernmental provisions in Title VI of the Treaty on European Union,

G. pointing out that, under Title VI of the Treaty on European Union, the European Parliament, the body most representative of EU citizens, is only consulted on certain measures and within strict time limits (Article 39), and judicial control by the European Court of Justice is severely limited (Article 35),

H. whereas the threat of international terrorism has further highlighted the weaknesses of Title VI of the Treaty on European Union; whereas, if the Member States show confidence in each other's penal law systems through the adoption of the Commission proposal for a Council framework Decision on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between the Member States (COM(2001) 522), it will be hard to understand why Member States continue to insist on this divided competence,

I. whereas the coexistence of two parallel legal frameworks in which criminal law sanctions are adopted, with reference to the same Member States, the same fundamental rights, the same citizens and the same objective of developing the Union as an area of freedom, security and justice may result in delays, parallel proceedings, possible incoherence and legal uncertainty,

Thursday 15 November 2001

J. whereas the Community law system relies on general principles of law common to the national legal systems and on Article 10 of the EC Treaty, which enshrines the principle of loyal cooperation, for competence to require Member States to provide appropriate sanctions, including criminal law sanctions, to ensure fulfilment of obligations arising from the EC Treaty or its implementing measures, as recognised by the European Court of Justice,

K. whereas Parliament has been asking since 1999 for the first and third pillars to be unified [1],

L. whereas, pursuant to Article 42 of the Treaty on European Union, the Council has the power to transfer competence for the creation of an area of freedom, security and justice as defined in Article 29 to Title IV of the Treaty establishing the European Community, thereby creating a unified legal framework for measures requiring criminal law sanctions,

M. whereas the transfer by the Amsterdam Treaty of judicial cooperation in civil matters from the third pillar to the Community framework resulted in Member States adopting within a six-month period measures which, under intergovernmental cooperation, had been blocked for thirty years,

N. whereas similar handling of cooperation in the civil and criminal spheres under Title IV of the EC Treaty will:

- be conducive to better functioning of justice for European citizens,
- avoid duplication of legislative instruments for the same subject,
- provide more certainty for the Member States as regards the fulfilment of obligations imposed by the Treaties; and, furthermore,
- pave the way for clearer negotiation with candidate countries,

1. Recommends the transfer, pursuant to Article 42 of the EU Treaty and to the codecision procedure, of competence for all areas of action defined in Article 29 of the Treaty on European Union or, at least, of competence for measures in the field of judicial cooperation in criminal matters having cross-border implications within the European Union, in particular, approximation, where necessary, to Title IV of the EC Treaty;

2. Recommends that the Commission, or one or more of the Member States, submit an initiative to the European Parliament for its opinion and to the Laeken European Council in December 2001 for its unanimous adoption;

3. Recommends that the Commission or the Member States submitting an initiative consider the possibility that those Member States to which protocols apply may continue to be bound by general international law even if future measures are adopted in a Community framework, by analogy with the Danish protocol on Title IV Community measures;

4. Recommends that the Laeken European Council adopt such an initiative in accordance with the provisions of Article 42 of the EU Treaty;

5. Recommends that Member States ratify that decision as rapidly as possible in accordance with their respective constitutional requirements;

6. Recommends that Council refrain from taking any action on environmental criminal law before the abovementioned draft Directive on the protection of the environment through criminal law is adopted;

7. Recommends that the Commission take appropriate action should Council envisage adopting the abovementioned draft framework Decision on combating serious environmental crime, prior to the adoption of the abovementioned draft Directive;

8. Instructs its President to forward this recommendation to the Council, the Commission and the parliaments and governments of the Member States.

3. Cross-border payments in euro I

Proposal for a European Parliament and Council regulation on cross-border payments in euro (COM(2001) 439 – C5-0379/2001 – 2001/0174(COD))

Amendment 1 Recital 1
(1) Directive 97/5/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 27 January 1997 on cross-border credit transfers sought to improve cross-border credit transfer services and notably their efficiency. The aim was to enable in particular consumers and small and medium-sized enterprises to make credit transfers rapidly, reliably and cheaply from one part of the Community to another. Such credit transfers and cross-border payments in general are still extremely expensive compared to payments at national level.	(1) Directive 97/5/EC of the European Parliament and the Council of 27 January 1997 on cross-border credit transfers sought to improve cross-border credit transfer services and notably their efficiency. The aim was to enable in particular consumers and small and medium-sized enterprises to make credit transfers rapidly, reliably and cheaply from one part of the Community to another. Such credit transfers and cross-border payments in general are still extremely expensive compared to payments at national level. This situation has been confirmed by the findings of a study, undertaken for the Commission and released on 20 September 2001, according to which consumers are given insufficient or no prior information on the costs of transfers, and the average cost of cross-border credit transfers has hardly changed since 1993 when a comparable study was carried out.
Amendment 2 Recital 3
(3) The Commission's Communication to the European Parliament, the Council, the Economic and Social Committee, the Committee of the Regions and the European Central Bank of 3 April 2001 on the preparations for the introduction of euro notes and coins announces that the Commission will consider using all the instruments at its disposal and will take all the steps necessary to ensure that the costs of cross-border transactions are brought more closely into line with the costs of domestic transactions on 1 January 2002.	(3) The Commission's Communication to the European Parliament, the Council, the Economic and Social Committee, the Committee of the Regions and the European Central Bank of 3 April 2001 on the preparations for the introduction of euro notes and coins announced that the Commission would consider using all the instruments at its disposal and would take all the steps necessary to ensure that the costs of cross-border transactions were brought more closely into line with the costs of domestic transactions on 1 January 2002, thus making the concept of the euro zone as a 'domestic payment area' tangible and transparently clear to citizens.
Amendment 3 Recital 3a (new)
	(3a) Credit institutions have so far not made any discernible effort to significantly reduce the level of costs for cross-border payments and credit transfers compared to payments at national level, although they have been aware at least since the introduction of the euro on 1 January 1999 of the Commission's aim of achieving a uniform, or at least similar, cost structure throughout the euro zone.

6. Conversion of vessels and fishermen dependent on the fishing agreement with Morocco *

Proposal for a Council regulation aiming to promote the conversion of vessels and of fishermen that were, up to 1999, dependent on the fishing agreement with Morocco (COM(2001) 384 – C5-0407/2001 – 2001/0163(CNS))

The proposal was amended as follows:

TEXT PROPOSED BY THE COMMISSION	AMENDMENTS BY PARLIAMENT
	Amendment 1 Recital 3a (new)
	(3a). The industry supplying the fleet and shore-based companies, having suffered heavy losses during the years 2000 and 2001, have lost more than 70 % of their turn-over without being compensated. Ancillary firms in the fisheries sector should benefit from the specific measure. Likewise, this specific measure should finance economic development measures in the areas affected, particularly in aquaculture and the fish-product processing industry,
	Oral amendment Recital 11a (new)
	(11a) The Regulation was not foreseen in the financial perspective. The financial framework of the Regulation should be covered by additional resources.

The fishermen and the vessel owners to whom, during 2000 and 2001, compensation was granted under Article 16(1) point (b) of Regulation (EC) No 2792/1999, owing to the non-renewal of the fishing agreement with Morocco, for at least a nine-month cumulative period of temporary cessation of activity, can benefit from exceptional supporting measures, under the conditions and within the limits envisaged by the present regulation.	1. 7. Approximation of civil and commercial law

European Parliament resolution on the approximation of the civil and commercial law of the Member States (COM(2001) 398 – C5-0471/2001 – 2001/2187(COS))

The European Parliament,

– having regard to the Commission communication to the Council and the European Parliament on European Contract Law (COM(2001) 398 – C5-0471/2001) ([1]),

– having regard to its resolution of 26 May 1989 on action to bring into line the private law of the Member States ([2]),

– having regard to its resolution of 6 May 1994 on the harmonisation of certain sectors of the private law of the Member States ([3]),

– having regard to the conclusions of the Tampere European Council (15 and 16 October 1999), in particular Conclusion 39,

– having regard to the working paper drawn up by its Directorate-General for Research entitled 'The Private Law Systems in the EU: Discrimination on grounds of nationality and the need for a European Civil Code' ([4]),

– having regard to Rule 47(1) of its Rules of Procedure,

– having regard to the report of the Committee on Legal Affairs and the Internal Market (A5-0384/2001),

A. whereas the similarities between the legal traditions of the peoples of Europe ultimately outweigh the differences between them,

B. whereas without the abundant similarities between the various legal traditions the solemn proclamation of a Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union on 7 December 2000 at the European Council of Nice would not have been possible,

C. whereas the discussion of large-scale harmonisation of Member States' core civil law is a politically charged and sensitive issue;

D. whereas Article 61 of the Treaty provides that in order to establish progressively an area of freedom, security and justice the Council shall adopt measures in the field of judicial cooperation in civil matters as provided for in Article 65,

E. whereas the internal market established by the European Union has proved an undeniable economic success,

F. whereas the gradual completion of the internal market is leading to broader and deeper economic integration,

G. whereas legal relationships with cross-border implications are, however, still the exception,

H. whereas the internal market will only be genuinely complete when consumers can also take full advantage of the benefits it offers,

([4]) Legal Affairs Series, JURI 103.

I. whereas small and medium-sized undertakings in particular are reluctant to conclude cross-border contracts owing to uncertainties about which legislation is applicable and the often unpredictable costs of legal proceedings,

J. whereas the provisions of the Rome Convention on the law applicable to contractual obligations and of the United Nations Convention on contracts for the international sale of goods (CISG) could provide a basis for a future common body of law, but will not finally solve the problem of cross-border legal relationships,

Current situation

1. Notes that directives, regulations and Conventions in force which have implications for the private law of the Member States include the following:

— Council Directive 85/374/EEC of 25 July 1985 on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States concerning liability for defective products (Amended by Directive 1999/34/EC of 10 May 1999) ([1]),

— Council Directive 85/577/EEC of 20 December 1985 to protect the consumer in respect of contracts negotiated away from business premises ([2]),

— Council Directive 87/102/EEC of 22 December 1986 on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the Member States concerning consumer credit (Amended by Directive 90/88/EEC of 22 February 1990 and Directive 98/7/EC of 16 February 1998) ([3]),

— Council Directive 90/314/EEC of 23 June 1990 on package travel, package holidays and package tours ([4]),

— Council Directive 93/13/EEC of 5 April 1993 on unfair terms in consumer contracts ([5]),

— European Parliament and Council Directive 94/47/EC of 26 October 1994 on the protection of purchasers in respect of certain aspects of contracts relating to the purchase of the right to use immovable properties on a timeshare basis ([6]),

— European Parliament and Council Directive 97/7/EC of 20 May 1997 on the protection of consumers in respect of distance contracts — Statement by the Council and Parliament re Article 6(1) — Statement by the Commission re Article 3(1), first indent ([7]),

— European Parliament and Council Directive 98/27/EC of 19 May 1998 on injunctions for the protection of consumers' interests ([8]),

— European Parliament and Council Directive 1999/44/EC of 25 May 1999 on certain aspects of the sale of consumer goods and associated guarantees ([9]),

— European Parliament and Council Directive 2000/35/EC of 29 June 2000 on combating late payment in commercial transactions [1];

— Council Regulation (EC) 44/2001 of 22 December 2000 on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters [2];

— the 1980 Rome Convention on the law applicable to contractual obligations [3].

2. Notes that the Community directives referred to above are not coordinated as well as they might be;

3. Notes that some of the abovementioned directives give rise to problems when implemented in conjunction with national civil codes;

4. Notes that in an enlarged Union of 500 million inhabitants it will become more and more difficult to guarantee the uniform application of European law;

Assessment of future developments

5. Is convinced that electronic commerce and the introduction of the euro in 12 Member States will lead to a substantial increase in the number of cross-border legal relationships;

6. Recalls for this reason the importance of ensuring rigorous implementation of the e-commerce directive in Member States in order to achieve its objective of establishing a genuine internal market for electronic commerce, and underlines the need to pursue the harmonisation of contract law with the aim of facilitating cross-border transactions in the internal market in particular in the following areas:

— equitably balancing the interests of undertakings and consumers,

— decisions determining the competent court in a given case,

— procedural costs,

— the effectiveness of legal protection,

— the workload imposed on even the lowest courts by complex international legal issues,

— the burden placed on consumer and legal representatives by complex legal issues,

7. Takes the view therefore that the differing national, European or international rules should be applied more consistently,

8. Advocates a body of law which is close to citizens, accessible, respects established traditions and at the same time takes into account the requirements of the internal market;

Commission Communication COM(2001) 398

9. Regrets the fact that the Commission has surprisingly restricted its communication to private contract law, although under the terms of the mandate of the European Council of Tampere it could have broadened its scope;

10. Underlines the need to pursue targeted harmonisation of contract law where mutual recognition of national rules cannot be applied and where divergence of these rules leads to obstacles to the functioning of the internal market as defined by the Court of Justice [4];

11. Considers, with regard to the forms of contract frequently arising in cross-border legal relationships, that it is appropriate to draw up, in the form of a regulation, a European instrument available for use on an optional basis under private international law in legal relationships (for example sales contracts, the law on security, and financial services);

12. Urges the Commission to present proposals to revise the existing consumer protection directives relating to contract law in particular to remove minimal harmonisation clauses which have prevented the establishment of uniform law at EU level to the detriment of the protection of consumers and the smooth functioning of the internal market;

13. Notes that current problems concerning the conclusion, performance and termination of contracts cannot be solved unless issues relating to general formal provisions, non-contractual liability, the law of restitution and property law are also addressed;

14. Welcomes the Commission communication which contains many good ideas and urges it to take the next step towards achieving the approximation of the civil and commercial law of the Member States and, on the basis of detailed expert advice, to submit an action plan comprising the following steps:

(a) by the end of 2004: to compile a database in all Community languages of national legislation and case law in the field of contract law, and to promote, on the basis of such a database, comparative law research and co-operation between interested parties, academics and legal practitioners. This co-operation should aim to find common legal concepts and solutions and a common terminology of the legal systems of the 15 Member States which could be applied on a voluntary basis (Option II of the Communication) notably in the following fields: general contract law, the law on sales contracts, the law governing service contracts including financial services and insurance contracts, the law governing personal securities, the law governing non-contractual obligations (tort, law of restitution), the law governing the transfer of ownership of moveables, the law governing credit guarantees and moveables, the law on trusts;

(b) to regularly present reports to the European Parliament on progress of these comparative analyses and possible common legal concepts and solutions for contract law; the European Parliament should provide its opinion on these reports when they provide draft common legal concepts and solutions;

(c) in parallel to the above by the end of 2004: on the basis of detailed expert advice to put forward legislative proposals aimed at consolidation (for example, streamlining, simplification and standardisation of legal concepts, codification, extension and abrogation) of the law in the instruments referred to in paragraph 1;

(d) by the end of 2004 to consider whether further provisions relevant to the internal market are essential, paying particular attention to the expansion in electronic business;

(e) at the beginning of 2005 in co-operation with the European Community's Office for Official Publications: the publication of the comparative analysis and common legal concepts and solutions in the appropriate form;

(f) from 2005: measures to promote the dissemination of comparative analysis and common legal concepts and solutions in academic training and in the syllabuses of the legal profession, as well as promote dissemination of Community law to the same academic and legal circles;

(g) from 2005: the consistent application of the common legal concepts and solutions and legal terminology by all EU institutions involved in legislative drafting and implementing procedures;

(h) from 2006: European legislation implementing the common legal principles and terminology for cross-border or national contractual relations with the possibility of abrogating contracts;

Thursday 15 November 2001

(i) beginning of 2008: review of how far the common legal principles and uniform terminology in European law have proved their value in practice, and consideration of whether uniform European provisions should be laid down in respect thereof, so as to lead, in the longer term, to uniformity in contract law within the EU and as regards the laws of its Member States;

(j) from 2010: establishment and adoption of a body of rules on contract law in the European Union that takes account of the common legal concepts and solutions established under previous initiatives;

15. Advocates setting up by the end of 2002 a 'European Legal Institute' in which legal policy-makers, the administrative authorities, the judiciary and those responsible for applying the law cooperate on a scientific basis in the drawing-up of the principles of the abovementioned reforms;

16. Takes the view that the Commission could secure legal advice from, for example, the following working groups and bodies together with the academic bodies competent for other branches of law and all interested parties throughout the course of the action plan, whilst ensuring a balanced view from both civil law and common law traditions:

— Commission on European Contract Law, Holte,

— Academy of European Private Lawyers, Pavia,

— European University Institute, Florence,

— European Academy of Law, Trier,

— national professional organisations of lawyers and reform bodies in the Member States;

17. Takes the view that, owing to the topical nature of the problem, progress should be made first and foremost on the work on the harmonisation of the civil procedure of international law (jurisdiction and enforcement), the recognition of judgments, and mutual assistance;

18. Calls on the Commission to have recourse to the legal basis provided by Article 95 of the EC Treaty (internal market) for the further consolidation and development of the harmonisation of civil law;

19. Takes the view that directives which are not aimed at complete harmonisation but pursue specific objectives such as consumer protection, product safety or product liability should continue to be drafted as directives which contain few detailed rules and are not based on any particular legal system, so that they can readily be incorporated into the various national legal systems;

20. Calls on the Commission to examine whether it might not be more effective and reasonable to use the instrument of the regulation for future single market legislation;

21. Insists that the codecision procedure involving the full participation of the European Parliament must in principle be used when adopting legislation in the field of civil law;

22. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council and the Commission.

8. Security of energy supply

European Parliament resolution on the Commission Green Paper Towards a European strategy for the security of energy supply (COM(2000) 769 − C5-0145/2001 − 2001/2071(COS))

The European Parliament,

− having regard to the Commission Green Paper (COM(2000) 769 − C5-0145/2001),

− having regard to the Commission White Paper on energy policy for the European Union (COM(1995) 682),

− having regard to the conclusions of the Council meeting on industry and energy which took place on 14/15 May 2001,

− having regard to Rule 47(1) of its Rules of Procedure,

− having regard to the report of the Committee on Industry, External Trade, Research and Energy and the opinion of the Committee on the Environment, Public Health and Consumer Policy (A5-0363/2001),

A. whereas detailed bottom-up scenarios for the future energy demand in the EU are lacking in the Commission's proposed Green Paper,

B. whereas EU import dependency for energy is 50 % (49 % in 1998) and is projected to rise to 71 % by 2030 if no actions are taken. However import dependency is in itself not a decisive criterion for security of supply and has to be complemented by other criteria like lack of resources, risk of price insecurity, risk of domestic or foreign political crises, infrastructure failure or loss of public acceptance,

C. whereas total energy consumption in the EU was 1 436 million tonnes oil equivalent (Mtoe) in 1998, of which 41 % oil, 22 % gas, 16 % coal, 15 % nuclear and 6 % renewable energy sources (RES),

D. whereas EU electricity generation is 35 % nuclear, 27 % solid fuel (predominantly coal), 16 % gas, 15 % RES, and 7 % oil,

E. whereas 95 % of EU demand for nuclear fuel, 76 % for oil, 50 % of its coal, 40 % for gas, 0 % of its renewables is met from imports,

F. whereas the EU is dependent on Middle East countries for 41 % of oil imports, the security of which depends largely on the foreign/military policy of the USA, on Russia for 41 % of gas imports and 18 % of oil imports, on Algeria for 29 % of gas imports; and whereas about 95 % of its uranium requirement must be met from imports,

G. whereas reducing the demand of end energy and improving energy efficiency in production is the best way to reduce Europe's external energy dependency; whereas, in all sectors of the economy, there exists enormous untapped technical and economic potential to improve the EU's energy efficiency, as has been acknowledged by the Commission and the European Parliament in their respective documents on the energy efficiency action plan and presented in more detail in the ECCP programme,

H. whereas oil consumption in the EU is increasing, in particular in the transport sector; whereas oil consumption in the sector of electricity production has gone down steadily, and is stagnating and even slowly reducing, both in industry and in building; whereas oil consumption in the EU is heavily increasing in the transport sector, which is responsible for 78 % of the final energy demand increase since 1985; whereas import dependency of oil from a small number of countries is associated with a serious risk of price instability in the short run and lack of resources in the long run; whereas it is also noticeable that less- developed countries are much more affected by oil price rises,

I. whereas gas demand in the EU has risen markedly in both absolute terms and relative to other fuels where its market has risen over ten years from 16 % to 22 % in 1998 and is expected to be 27 % by 2020 if no action is taken; whereas the rise is mainly due to massive use of gas in the electricity sector; whereas in the heating sector the gas consumption is still rising in certain EU countries and is peaking in those countries where the domestic gas distribution grid is well developed,

J. whereas demand for coal in the EU has been decreasing for many years, import dependency is already 50 % and is rising as a proportion of consumption of coal; whereas the sources of supply are diverse and secure and in general more economic than the EU's own mining,

K. whereas only eight Member States generate nuclear electricity and there are currently no firm plans to construct replacement capacity; whereas certain Member States (Belgium, Germany, Netherlands and Sweden) have a declared policy to phase out nuclear power; whereas there would thus seem to be no political majority for future support for nuclear energy in the EU; whereas import dependency for uranium is almost total, however the volumes involved are very small and sources of supply are diverse and secure,

L. whereas the EU has set targets for increasing the share of energy consumption from RES from 6 % to 12 % and 22,1 % electricity from RES by 2010; whereas, however, targets regularly set since 1985 for doubling the share of electricity from RES have not been achieved, but latest studies forecast much larger shares for 2010 and beyond in various Member States with effective support systems,

M. whereas EU energy policy has three main objectives, security of supply, competitiveness and protection of the environment, taking into account the principle of subsidiarity as established in the Council Resolution of 8 July 1986,

N. whereas final energy use in the EU in 1998 was 28 % in the industrial sector, 32 % for transport and 40 % in buildings, consumption growth fastest in the transport sector,

O. whereas energy efficiency in the EU has improved 7 % since 1990, but only 3 % since 1993, yet current Commission proposals envisage 1 % improvement per year in the future; whereas the European Parliament is of the opinion that annual reductions in final energy intensity of 2,5 % ought to be achievable, provided a strong political will exists,

P. whereas experience shows that well targeted public procurement programmes have the potential of significantly reducing the price of energy efficient equipment, which is yet not commercially viable, and thus making it competitive with conventional technologies,

Q. whereas overall energy demand in the EU has been growing at a rate of between 1 % to 2 % per year since 1986,

R. whereas taxation levels and excise duties vary considerably between Member States yielding between 4,7 % (France) and 9,7 % (Portugal) of total tax revenue compared with the EU average of 6,5 % in 1997; whereas duties on lead free petrol range between € 750 per 1 000 litre (UK) and € 300 per 1 000 litre (Greece),

S. whereas the mix of energy sources vary widely between Member States with oil dependence ranging from 71 % in Luxembourg to 11 % in Italy, gas from 59 % in Italy to 1 % in Sweden, nuclear from 37 % in France to zero in seven States, and RES from 28 % in Sweden to 1 % in Belgium,

T. whereas the expiry of the ECSC leaves only Euratom as a stand-alone energy treaty; whereas the Euratom Treaty should expire after 50 years of its existence in 2007,

1. Welcomes the Commission Green Paper 'Towards a European strategy for the security of energy supply' as a basis for a discussion; regrets missing scenarios for demand side, renewables and co-generation and urges Commission to develop before next year's Barcelona summit comprehensive scenarios; considers that this analysis should have a more detailed bottom-up approach taking better account also of the existing scenario work done in the different EU countries;

2. Considers that the most appropriate strategy to ensure energy supply consists in diversifying energy sources and origins of supply;

3. Recognises the fundamental importance of security of energy supply and the cost of energy to the European economy and stresses the high priority that must be given by the Commission, Council and Member State governments to securing long-term stable energy supplies in the interests of continuing European prosperity and well-being;

4. Notes that world total final energy consumption grew from 4 549 Mtoe in 1973 to 6 646 Mtoe, an increase of 46,1 % over 25 years; notes that EU consumption is projected to grow by 22 % in the period 1990 to 2020 and concludes that with demand rising faster in the world outside the EU, particularly in non-OECD countries, there will be increased competing demand from third countries for the energy needed by EU Member States; draws the conclusion from this that the EU must make efforts to ensure energy demand does not rise as forecast; considers that every available effort must be made to increase energy efficiency and energy-saving, and reduce dependence on imports;

5. Considers the level of dependence upon oil and the level of dependence on imports of oil to be of great concern; urges the Commission to take specific measures at EU level to curb demand for oil in the transport sector by promoting new efficient engines — the 1 litre car — shifting the emphasis from road and air to rail and ship and pushing Member States for a more integrated regional and town planning; considers that these actions should be combined with the development of alternative fuels like biofuels and hydrogen based on renewables; asks the Commission and the 15 EU Member States also to take action in their activities with developing countries to aid the short and mid-term development of alternative investments both in the transport and electricity sectors;

Thursday 15 November 2001

6. Calls on the Commission to submit a proposal for introducing a national energy requirement; considers that Member States should be allowed within this energy requirement, to finance energy sources in accordance with the principles of general interest services and environmental protection, whilst fully respecting EU competition and State aid rules

7. Considers that the European Union should use its trade and development policy more efficiently in order to facilitate penetration of the markets of energy supplying countries, principally to create or improve conditions for investment into gas and petrol transportation networks, in particular transportation via pipeline;

8. Recognises the growing importance of gas as its share of total energy rises towards 25 % and its projected dominance in electricity production; points out that the potential risks from dependence on natural gas can be reduced:

— by reducing the needs for gas in the field of heating by introducing energy conservation policies in new and existing building stock and energy efficiency measures like central heating systems based on cogeneration and/or biomass,

— by spreading the competition at every stage of the process in the natural gas market,

— by encouraging the construction of new connections (gas pipelines) with the producer countries or gasification terminals with the aim of diversifying the geopolitical and economic risk,

— by favouring a proactive policy with the main providers of gas like Russia and Algeria allowing for better conditions in technology transfer and capital investment both for the prospecting of new gas fields and for reducing the leakages in existing pipelines and through carrying out plans in the fields of energy-saving, for which the ratification of the Energy Charter would provide a serviceable framework,

— by taking practical measures within the EU framework to stockpile a higher level of gas reserves in the EU, so as to be able to anticipate breaks in gas supplies, with EU countries which are highly dependent on gas imports taking immediate extra measures in this area;

9. Notes the relative decline of coal and other solid fuels due to high production costs, high levels of polluting emissions and competition from lower cost imports while recalling that coal remains an important indigenous, stable and secure long-term energy source;

10. Draws attention to the special role of brown coal, which is making a substantial contribution to energy production not only in some Member States such as Germany and the UK but also in several candidate countries; considers that the structure of power production in some Member States is diversified by the use of coal and, in the EU as a whole, this helps to ensure stability in the power industry; believes that coal, particularly indigenous brown coal, is an important factor here for the long term; considers that the EU should continue to ensure in its energy and environmental strategies that this indigenous and competitive contribution to energy supply is secured, which is also in the EU's long-term interest;

11. Recognises the environmental importance of the EU reaching its Kyoto target of 8 % reduction in CO_2 by 2010, and welcomes the statements in the Commission Green Paper on security of energy supply regarding the important contribution of energy efficiency, nuclear energy and the development of renewable energy sources in achieving this goal;

12. Recommends that the Commission take the necessary measures to ensure that current human resource levels in the nuclear sector do not shrink to such an extent as to jeopardise the existence of the valuable wealth of knowledge and experience in the field of safety and security of operating reactors, decommissioning or waste management;

13. Recommends that the Commission, when drawing up the future Community energy policy based on the need to diversify supply sources, acknowledge the role which LPG may play as an energy source on account of its low CO_2 emissions when used either for domestic, industrial and agricultural purposes or as vehicle fuel;

14. Calls on the Commission to draw up an energy ladder indicating the order of preferred energy sources determined by CO_2 emissions, other pollutants and environmental hazards; calls on the Commission also to indicate how each energy source increases or reduces the EU's dependence on non-member countries;

15. Reaffirms its strong support for RES and agrees with the Commission's conclusion that the use of biomass for energy supply can be significantly improved; calls on Member States to redouble efforts to achieve a 12 % share of total energy consumption and 22.1 % of electricity from RES by 2010 and welcomes the adoption of the Directive on electricity from RES; asks the Commission to develop before 2005 a 2020 EU target for RES and asks for better R & D policies and a more flexible interpretation of competition rules while a technology is being developed;

16. Agrees with the Commission's conclusion that the use of bio-fuels (such as biodiesel, based for instance on oil seed rape and alcohol) will reduce our dependence on fossil fuels and hence the greenhouse effect; calls on the Commission to encourage the production of raw materials for biofuels and to do its utmost to remove restrictions on the growing of such raw materials under the WTO;

17. Calls on all EU institutions to encourage the shift towards zero-carbon emission fuels for power, notably electricity generation from nuclear energy, hydrogen for transport fuel from biomass, hydroelectric, solar and wind energy sources, both by removing existing legislative obstacles and by making them subject to a specific EU-wide exemption from all excise duties, energy taxes or climate levies and also by providing incentives to encourage a shift towards efficient energy production plants, including combined heat and power;

18. Agrees with the Council conclusion that a shared view on a strategy for security of supply should respect Member States' geographical, economical, regional, climate and structural differences; promote further market opening in the EU; considers that this view should also be consistent with sustainable development as well as climate change commitments within the energy sector, and should add value over action by individual Member States and thus also support local energy production, particularly of combined heat and power production (CHP); considers it important therefore to develop and promote the use of local raw materials, and proposes that the significance of energy sources exploitable at local level in the Member States, and of the whole role of local energy as a way of securing energy supplies should be examined; highlights the need, however, for the coordination of national energy policies in the interest of the Community as a whole;

19. Agrees with the Commission conclusion that the first priority for action should be in the field of demand management measures to improve efficiency of energy use and reduce consumption through conservation; calls on the Commission to submit specific proposals and measures in the demand area as soon as possible, such as a directive on the 'stand-by mode' or improving efficiency in domestic appliances; regrets the delay in bringing forward proposals for the transport sector and in the field of cogeneration, energy services and demand side management; asks the Commission to launch a strategy to make Europe the most energy-efficient economy in the world (Energy Intelligent Europe); notes that no other energy option offers such potential for economic and environmental improvements as energy efficiency; calls for urgent action in all areas given that the Commission notes that 18 % of energy can be saved with currently available technology and at no extra costs; considers that demand side should also play a leading role in EU energy international collaboration both with central and eastern Europe, Russia and Ukraine, but also with developing countries using also the new flexible instruments of the Kyoto protocol;

Thursday 15 November 2001

20. Notes that the resources allocated to research into new and better methods of producing and using energy, in the Sixth Framework Programme for Research and Development project, do not meet expectations for increasing energy efficiency; wishes the European Parliament and the Council to review increasing such resources and, in particular, to allocate a greater share of funds, in absolute and relative terms, to researching systems;

21. Takes the view that despite the absence of a separate energy chapter the EU has plenty of opportunities to conduct an energy policy of its own and that such a policy should consist of the following elements:

— liberalising the energy industry,

— promoting a level playing-field,

— promoting the use of renewable energy sources and monitoring implementation of the Kyoto agreements at EU level,

— research and development in the energy field,

— developing geopolitical frameworks for concluding energy contracts,

— promoting EU policy for energy-saving,

— ensuring that consumer interests are respected in EU policy,

— safeguarding security of supply by giving special attention to creating conditions to enable the cross-frontier transmission of gas and electricity to take place;

Welcomes the call by the Commission for an Energy Chapter and calls on the Member States to include in the EC Treaty a chapter on an Energy Policy at the next IGC, in order to approximate policy frameworks and pave the way for a more systematic and long-term approach to energy, with declared priority for an efficient use of energy and the promotion of renewable energy;

22. Recognises that taxation can have an important part to play in influencing patterns of behaviour, and can be used as an instrument for guiding energy use, as can regulations and technical measures, but considers, from past experience and Commission studies, that taxation must be applied along with practical measures to reduce energy use; calls for targeted taxes, that reflect the environmental impact of energy sources to be introduced that encourage lower energy use and enable environmental commitments to be met; notes that in Germany alone, a petrol saving of about 5 % has been achieved since introducing the 'eco-tax';

23. Considers that fiscal measures now need to form part of a balanced package of instruments to encourage energy savings in industry and domestic households, and to promote the use of sustainable energy in order to ensure self sufficiency, and considers that voluntary agreements with industry are a valuable instrument; calls in this context on the Commission to present a proposal for framework legislation on voluntary environmental agreements, which lays down the relevant criteria with regard to conditions, monitoring arrangements and binding penalties.

24. Believes that all forms of electricity production must internalise negative externalities equally, without the current instances of discrimination that favour some primary energy sources over others;

25. Believes that the costs incurred from the internalisation of the negative externalities relating to the various primary energy sources should be reflected in the price for the end user, the aim being to convey the desired message to the market and thus trigger awareness in society as to the need for more rational use of energy resources;

26. Considers that, when deemed necessary, taxation should be applied to carbon emissions and other pollutants rather than energy production itself;

27. Considers that any taxation of energy for environmental reasons should bear very much in mind the effect on competitiveness of the European economy along with the inflationary affects on vulnerable industries, vulnerable socioeconomic groups and vulnerable remote and rural regions;

28. Notes that, in order to increase the energy efficiency of transport, the TEN network, intermodal transport and 'intelligent transport' solutions need to be developed; considers it urgent that the Commission submit proposals for sustained, long-term improvement in energy efficiency and conservation in the transport sector by working with the industry and, where appropriate, making legislative proposals to achieve:

(a) more fuel efficient engines,

(b) lighter, stronger materials for vehicle construction,

(c) use of alternative fuels, particularly biofuels and hydrogen,

(d) a transfer of traffic from road to more environmentally friendly transport modes such as rail or inland waterway, and

(e) optimising inter-operability and the combination of transport modes;

29. Considers that an energy-efficient transport system will require large public and private investment and calls on the European Investment Bank to make this an area of high priority both for its own funding and to promote private sector financing and co-financing;

30. Calls on the Commission to produce a co-ordinated strategy for tax incentives on new transport fuels, in order to stimulate pan EU investment in infrastructure, and encourage the marketing of new motive power systems;

31. Notes the considerable potential for energy efficiency gains, reductions in polluting emissions and a world-wide market for new equipment and systems from clean coal technology and calls for industry and the newly established fund formed out of the ECSC to achieve a successful demonstration of clean coal power systems; believes therefore, that it is essential to maintain a viable indigenous coal production industry while recognising the need for greater efficiencies and reduced subsidies;

32. Points out that greater resources than at present provided must be allocated, under the Sixth Framework Programme, to research and development into technologies that will improve the yield from and environmental compatibility of the combustion of carbons and other traditional fuels to generate electricity; wishes dissemination of the results of such research to be promoted by cooperation programmes with third countries, particularly developing countries, with the aim of safeguarding the environmental sustainability of the expected growth in energy demand in such countries;

33. Calls for a European initiative for the development of an emission-free coal-fired power station;

34. Notes that maintaining security of energy supply is primarily a matter for the energy policy of the Member States, though this does not rule out agreements concluded with other countries for improving security of energy supply; considers that national responsibility for ensuring security of energy supply means that Member States must have freedom of action in the means they use to ensure security of supply, whilst fully respecting EU competition and State aid rules; calls on the Council and Commission to move swiftly to complete the missing links in trans-European energy networks (TENS) in order to improve security of supply as well as complete the internal market, by supporting specific projects, where appropriate; calls for particular attention to be given to the development of natural gas transport networks; wishes, in this regard, to see close cooperation between the energy industry, the Union, the Member States and the financial institutions to mobilise all the available resources in the best market conditions;

35. Believes that the failure to adopt effective measures to increase interconnection — above all in areas where it is most lacking, as is the case with the Iberian Peninsula vis-à-vis the rest of Europe — will prevent the emergence of a fully functioning internal market in energy as an alternative to the apparent prevailing trend towards various liberalised national markets;

Thursday 15 November 2001

36. Recognises the employment and social security effects of local energy production and its importance in securing energy supply, and the huge potential for increased employment, as well as equipment and systems sales, both within the EU and in the wider world, from investment in new capacity for generating electricity from RES, nuclear energy, clean coal technology, combined heat and power generation, techniques for energy-saving and intelligent energy consumption applications (ICT);

37. Calls on the Commission to explore appropriate technology fields where large-scale procurement initiatives could result in major efficiency gains as well as reduced dependency on fossil imports;

38. Supports investment in researching, developing and exploiting more efficiently our indigenous supplies of energy in ways which are compatible with Europe's environmental commitments;

39. Recognises the wide desirability and necessity of electricity from RES, and that in the long run it will be possible to cover our power requirement from the use of various renewable energy technologies; recognises therefore that a combination of biomass and hydro-electric power will in future provide for constant base load generation, and that in addition, the use of wind and photovoltaic power, in conjunction with fuel cell technology, will be able to cover loads in excess of the base load;

40. Considers it essential that the EU lead by example in maintaining research expenditure with the Sixth Framework Programme on future energy technologies, and welcomes the support of the Commission proposal for maintaining a balanced energy mix in the European Union;

41. Draws attention to the fact that the transition to a low carbon economy requires a great deal of research and innovation; calls on the Commission and the Member States to pool their efforts and to draw up a joint research agenda; proposes that particular attention be paid to this aspect in the Sixth Framework Programme and recommends that Article 169 be used as the instrument;

42. Remains of the view that an essential part of maintaining security of supply is to complete the liberalisation of energy markets to achieve a fully functioning internal market in electricity and gas to enhance competitiveness, transparency and energy efficiency; considers that there is an urgent need to create a level playing field in the EU as soon as possible and therefore wishes to see full liberalisation come about as soon as possible; considers that special measures to insure security of supply should not be allowed to offset the general rules of the internal energy market more than necessary; considers that external costs of fossil and nuclear fuels should be fully internalised, where they are not already;

43. Recognises the great importance of fusion as a major new source of CO_2-free energy worldwide in the future; points out the competitive advantage held by European fusion researchers and the importance of siting ITER within Europe;

44. Urges the Commission to assert the full strength of European competition policy and the rules of the European single market on conventional energy suppliers;

45. Points out that liberalisation must be based on reciprocity between the Member States in the case of access to energy markets;

46. Disagrees with the Commission view that little can be done on the supply side, having regard to targets for an increased share of final energy consumption for RES; calls on the Commission to put forward legislative proposals for:

(a) expanding combined heat and power generation, and

(b) encouraging alternative energy sources such as the combustion of waste;

47. Recommends that special emphasis be placed on research into new designs for safer and less costly fission reactors with more efficient fuel consumption, given the need, whatever the future of nuclear power may be, to remain sufficiently capable of drawing upon a diverse range of energy sources that do not emit greenhouse gases, should dramatic geostrategic shifts in the world or a sudden adverse trend in climate change render it vital to update nuclear power stations in Europe once the current generation of power stations reaches the end of its useful life;

48. Believes that achieving the targets for 22,1 % electricity from RES by 2010, maintaining the present level of nuclear electricity production and building new clean coal power plants are all essential for security of supply and for achieving the Kyoto emission reduction targets;

49. Recognises the importance of good political relations with EU major energy supply partner countries; considers moreover, that this cooperation should be reinforced in order to be able to create commercial conditions which are favourable for European enterprises and for the supply of gas and petrol; supports the Commission initiative not only with Russia but also the Caucasian Republics, Iran and other countries producing fossil fuels and calls for speedy ratification of the Energy Charter; proposes that the European Union's Northern Dimension policy be given concrete form by energy projects serving common European objectives, e.g. the construction of a northern gas pipeline link from Russia to Europe;

50. Agrees with the Commission proposal to step up political and economic cooperation with the Caspian Sea countries, to obtain a more geographically distributed energy supply, giving special attention to transit through such countries as Ukraine and Turkey;

51. Calls on those Member States who presently enjoy the benefits of nuclear generation of electricity which have not already made provision for the treatment and disposal of their own radioactive waste material to adopt appropriate measures as soon as possible because, having regard to the importance of nuclear electricity to EU security of supply, the waste issue must be addressed and public confidence must be secured in the solutions; believes the Commission has a role in this regard in suggesting options;

52. Considers that the storage of nuclear waste is still a problem requiring more research and greater efforts; calls also for the safety of nuclear power stations in the candidate countries to be guaranteed;

53. Calls on the Commission to draw up a treaty for promoting, researching and expanding renewable energies that will recognise that there is unlimited need for this, in so far as we also want to safeguard sustainable energy supply for the period after the expected exhaustion of fossil energy sources;

54. Considers that a major challenge facing the EU and Member States is the need to shift public attitudes and perceptions from the present widely held view that energy is in plentiful supply with no likelihood of change in the foreseeable future to a better understanding of how vital energy is to everyday life and EU living standards and therefore how important it is to behave responsibly in energy use through greater efficiency and conservation measures; calls for measures to inform public opinion;

55. Points out that there are two billion people in the world today who do not have access to electricity; emphasises that sustainable energy reduces dependence and can promote economic development;

56. Encourages the use of local and regional energy resources as a way to secure the energy supply and support the production and use of all local fuels in the whole EU;

57. Supports the discussion with local and regional energy initiatives;

58. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the parliaments of the Member States.

— having regard to Rule 47(1) of its Rules of Procedure,

A. whereas the Commission is consulting the European Parliament on the strategy for a future chemicals policy with a view to proposing a new regulatory framework on chemicals; whereas the European Parliament should contribute to the development of this framework in a clear and ambitious way, seeking above all to promote sustainable development, reconfirming that protection of human health and the environment must have priority, taking due account of economic and social considerations,

B. whereas Article 3 of the EC Treaty calls for the competitiveness of Community industry to be strengthened, research and technological development to be promoted, a high level of health protection to be attained, and a system to be established to ensure that competition in the internal market is not distorted,

C. whereas Article 6 of the EC Treaty states that environmental protection requirements shall be integrated into the definition and implementation of Community policies and activities referred to in Article 3, in particular with a view to promoting sustainable development,

D. whereas Article 157 of the EC Treaty requires the Community and the Member States to create the conditions necessary for the competitiveness of the Community's industry and to work to encourage an environment favourable to initiative and to the development of undertakings throughout the Community, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises,

E. whereas, Article 174(1) of the EC Treaty says that Community policy on the environment shall contribute to pursuit, among other things, of the objectives of preserving, protecting and improving the quality of the environment and protecting human health; whereas paragraph 2 of that Article also stipulates that this policy shall be based on the precautionary principle and on the principles that preventive action should be taken, that environmental damage should, as a priority, be rectified at source and that the polluter should pay; and whereas under paragraph 3 of that Article, available scientific data, the benefits and costs of action or lack of action, and the economic and social development of the Community as a whole must be taken into account,

F. whereas sustainable development should serve both to protect human health and the environment and to promote balanced development of economic activities and hence, in particular, safeguard employment and guarantee a high level of social protection,

G. whereas public health and the environment need to be protected to the same degree in all the Member States,

H. whereas, having regard to the Commission communication on the precautionary principle (COM(2000) 1), a further point to repeat is that observance of the precautionary principle — taking into account the criteria laid down by the Commission (proportionality, non-discrimination, consistency, and analysis of costs and benefits and scientific developments) — implies that the most appropriate measure must be taken and that the principle must never be used under any circumstances to justify arbitrary decisions,

I. whereas, as maintained in that communication, a decision-making authority, before deciding whether to take precautionary measures, needs to have an overall picture of what is known about the potential risk associated with a substance and its use, based on recognised scientific principles,

J. whereas the Lisbon European Council pointed out that the competitiveness and buoyancy of the markets depend directly on a regulatory framework to encourage investment, innovation, and entrepreneurship,

Thursday 15 November 2001

K. whereas Parliament is calling for measures to be taken to give encouragement and support, especially to small and medium-sized enterprises, in order to develop facilities to help them surmount technical and organisational obstacles and establish a 'fast track' within the multiannual framework programme 2002-2006 of the European Community for research, technological development and demonstration activities aimed at contributing towards the creation of the European research area (COM(2001) 94),

L. whereas the substitution principle — the promotion of safer practices and substances to replace hazardous practices and substances — must be implemented as a key aim of EU chemicals policy and as primary risk reduction option; whereas research into and the development of alternative new products whose life cycles conform to the principles set out by the Commission in the Green Paper on Integrated Product Policy (COM(2001) 68) should be fostered,

M. whereas diffuse sources, such as the use of chemicals in products, are estimated to be the biggest source of exposure for man and the environment; whereas, however, chemicals are used mainly in products from which society derives benefit,

N. whereas data on basic properties and relevant uses is either missing or not made available to authorities for the large majority of chemicals, despite the fact that 99 % of the currently marketed chemicals have been on the market for more than 20 years and that disclosure of existing data would significantly reduce the need for animal testing; whereas information on basic properties and uses must be made publicly accessible, bearing in mind that the data supplied by industry to the European Chemicals Bureau up to 1999 on high-volume existing substances (over 1 000 tonnes a year) satisfied the base set requirements for 14 % of these chemicals entirely, for 65 % partly and for 21 % not at all,

O. whereas the chemical industry needs to offer greater transparency so as to respond to the public health and consumer protection problems with which citizens are increasingly having to contend,

P. whereas the Commission's review of current legislation on existing substances revealed the immediate concern that man and the environment are potentially exposed from a large number of sources to a large number of chemical substances the hazardous properties of which have not been identified; whereas this is of particular concern for chemical industry workers; whereas these substances may furthermore have a greater adverse effect when acting together as compared to when acting in isolation, or interact to produce unknown effects; whereas this situation needs to be improved in the interests of protecting human health and the environment,

Q. whereas many substances suspected of being endocrine disrupters have already been identified and included in other priority chemicals lists because of their negative effect on human health and wildlife without concrete action being taken,

R. whereas the current system governing existing chemicals is characterised by a lack of transparency for consumers and industry, inconsistencies in cumbersome procedures or rules that have not been harmonised, a large amount of red tape, and an unclear division of responsibilities,

S. whereas the current system of risk management needs to be replaced by a new and effective instrument within the new system,

T. whereas the use of chemicals in products manufactured within the European Union is sufficiently monitored, but the necessary supervision is not being exercised over products imported into the European Union,

U. whereas the current system cannot achieve the objective of sustainable development,

V. whereas the need for a complete structural reform of Community legislation on chemicals is fully supported,

W. whereas the many and varied legal requirements applying to chemicals need as a matter of urgency to be formed into a unified whole so as to improve transparency for all concerned in order to achieve coherent, harmonised, and comprehensive legislation in the European Union,

X. whereas the new chemicals policy should contribute to sustainable development and ensure a high level of protection for human health, including workers' health, and the environment,

Y. whereas the new policy should cover the entire life cycle of chemicals, including the point at which chemicals and products which consist of or contain chemicals become waste,

Z. whereas the competitiveness of the chemicals industry and its associated industries is a legitimate political objective in itself, which draws its legitimacy from its potential to achieve a higher quality of life for present and future generations, but only insofar as this potential is actually fulfilled, whereas the development of safer products in an environmentally sensitive manner, enhanced transparency and consumer information and promotion of sustainable development are positive marketing benefits which can enhance the competitiveness of the European chemicals industry,

AA. whereas the chemicals industry in Europe directly employs 1,7 million people and several million jobs depend on it,

AB. whereas most of the firms operating in both the chemical industry and the downstream processing industry are small and medium-sized enterprises, which in numerical terms make up 96 % of the total,

AC. whereas it is unclear from the available empirical evidence that the impact of environmental regulation on the competitiveness of the EU chemicals industry is adverse, indeed, the impact on the competitiveness of proactive firms that have already set themselves the goal of sustainable development may be positive; whereas, despite the additional requirements imposed on firms and on small and medium-sized enterprises in particular, the new regulatory framework, once implemented, could boost innovation and growth in the European chemicals industry,

AD. whereas the creation of a single system for existing and new substances will facilitate innovation, as new substances will no longer undergo stricter regulation than do existing substances,

AE. whereas the new policy should aim to achieve the target of cessation of emissions, discharges and losses of hazardous substances to the marine environment within one generation (2020), with hazardous substances being defined as substances that are persistent, bioaccumulative and toxic, or of equivalent concern, in line with the water framework directive and with commitments that the European Community and its Member States have undertaken in international fora,

AF. whereas the principles of environment policy laid down in the EC Treaty, as well as the substitution principle — the promotion of safer practices and substances to replace hazardous practices and substances — should be fully applied in the new policy as key drivers to stimulate innovation towards a sustainable chemicals industry,

AG. whereas the new policy should be designed in a way that it is transparent, proportional, and comprehensive in scope, practicable and effective in action,

AH. whereas the smooth operation of the single market implies that there should be no discrepancies in the Member States' perceptions of the risks associated with a product,

Thursday 15 November 2001

AI. whereas, given international competition, employees, especially in small and medium-sized enterprises, are anxious in the interest of their livelihood to see as practicable, efficient, and cost-effective arrangements as possible, sufficient data protection, confidentiality as regards applications, and protection of property rights,

AJ. whereas the new policy should guarantee the safe use of all chemicals and provide for effective supervision of chemicals whose use gives cause for concern,

AK. whereas imported products should fulfil the same requirements as EU products and whereas the international standard-setting requirements applying to trade should be observed by the Commission and the Member States, not least within the World Trade Organisation,

AL. whereas animal toxicity tests should be reduced to the absolute minimum required for an adequate assessment of chemical substances,

1. Welcomes the Commission's initiative to propose a strategy for the new Chemicals Policy as a first step towards a complete reform of European chemicals policy to achieve the goal of sustainable development which meets the criteria of improving consumer and environmental protection, promoting the competitiveness and innovative capacity of industry while taking account of the social context within the European Union, and supports the Council conclusions of 7 June 2001;

2. Calls on the Commission to assess carefully the impact of a modified chemicals policy on the number of jobs and social standards in the Community — with particular reference to the special situation of small and medium-sized business and their employees — and to ensure that no disproportionate, adverse effects are to be expected and, if necessary, to propose environmental protection support measures, and restructuring aid or measures;

3. Is of the opinion that in a single system for existing and new substances called REACH (Registration, Evaluation, and Authorisation of Chemicals), all efforts should be made to assign priority to chemicals which meet the criteria for concern in use; considers that priority may be assigned by means of rapid and cost-effective screening methods (QSAR, Read Across, Common Sense) using existing data and information on user patterns, production volumes and potential exposure; considers that the data on the properties of chemicals should be published;

4. Welcomes the intended closure of continuing gaps in the knowledge of some 30 000 existing substances in a manageable time-frame and on the basis of the extensive data already in the possession of Member State authorities and chemical-industry enterprises;

5. Calls for clearly specified allocations of Commission and Member State assessment activities to be guaranteed by maintaining a centralised approach to registration, evaluation and authorisation laying down binding deadlines for the various stages of the REACH procedure;

6. Considers it essential to draw attention to the need for close coordination of the work of the European body that will be called upon to administer the REACH system with the activities of the various existing scientific expert groups (which deal with classification and labelling of substances, limit values, health effects, the environmental impact of pesticides, etc.);

7. Calls on the Commission to present as soon as possible in sufficient time to meet the target dates laid down in the White Paper, its first proposal for a new, comprehensive, effective, practicable and transparent regulatory framework for chemicals, in the form of one regulation; calls on the Commission not to delay its proposal because of the studies it commissioned on the business impact and the central entity or any other studies, but rather to take them into account in the further decision-making process with the European Parliament and the Council;

8. Insists that the whole new chemicals policy strategy must be developed at European level so as to guarantee a high level of protection and prevent splintering of the European internal market;

9. Calls on the Commission to ensure that it takes a high level of protection for health, safety, the environment and consumers as its basis for creating a common legislative framework, taking account in particular of any new development based on scientific findings pursuant to Article 95 of the EC Treaty, and extending these criteria to cover imports;

10. Calls for the measures to be adopted in order to lay down the new comprehensive regulatory framework to allow for the precautionary principle, whereby the advantages and costs resulting from action or failure to act would have to be considered, to be commensurate with the degree of protection being sought, enforced without discrimination, and consistent with steps already taken in similar situations, following similar approaches, and to be reviewed and, if necessary, altered in the light of the findings of scientific research and assessment of their impact;

11. Calls on the Commission to develop effective measures to ensure that imported products (including end products) comply with the same high safety standard with regard to protection of consumers and the environment and health and safety at work as will apply to substances and products within the EU, and to enforce these measures; this will require, inter alia, clear monitoring and review methods, penalties and international agreements;

12. Calls on the Commission to issue a regulation as soon as possible requiring all manufacturers and importers to report forthwith on an annual basis to the ECB the volumes of chemicals they produce and import so that it is possible to determine exactly which substances are still on the market at all and how many substances would fall below which quantity thresholds, should a quantity threshold system be retained;

13. Welcomes the fact that industry is responsible for data collection, risk assessment and risk management, subject to evaluation by the authorities, and registration as a condition for importing and placing on the market;

14. Asks the Commission to ensure a clear division of responsibilities between the Commission and the Member States in regard to evaluation and, at the same time, to maintain a central approach to registration, evaluation and authorisation;

15. Asks the Commission to ensure that all chemicals produced in, or imported into, the European Union as substances, preparations, or in products above 1 tonne be registered in the new system, in order to obtain an overview of the basic properties and actual use of these chemicals from which to establish priorities for further risk evaluation and/or risk reduction; for chemicals above 1 tonne that are exclusively used in research and development activities or exclusively used as intermediates in manufacturing processes within closed systems that prevent all releases to the environment, a simplified registration should be envisaged consisting of a minimum standard of information concerning their hazardous properties in order to protect workers' health as well as the environment in the event of accidents;

16. Welcomes the merging of legislative provisions applicable to existing and new substances, and the proposed registration and evaluation procedure for all substances produced in excess of 1 tonne annually; rejects calls for an additional register for all substances produced at under 1 tonne annually;

17. Calls for the introduction of a registration requirement for all chemicals irrespective of production volume, in respect of which the following minimum data must be supplied:

— physical and chemical properties,

— persistence,

— bioaccumulation,

Thursday 15 November 2001

— acute aquatic toxicity,

— corrosive and irritant effect,

— Ames test (for carcinogenicity and mutagenicity),

18. Requests that scientific information from sources other than industry be fully considered in the REACH system;

19. Endorses the Council's conclusions of 7 June 2001 that manufacturers should be subject to a general requirement to obtain sufficient knowledge and take the necessary measures to guarantee the safety of chemicals (the precautionary principle) irrespective of production volume and even if no specific information requirements have been laid down. To check that the precautionary principle has been observed, manufacturers should keep registers of the data, including data concerning properties, scope and use for all chemicals manufactured and used, including use in products, and upon request make all these registers available to the authorities;

20. Requests the use of screening procedures based on simplified risk assessment using data modelling, e.g. quantitative structure activity relationships (QSAR) and use patterns to prioritise substances of possible concern for early registration, in addition to tonnage considerations, in order to speed up risk assessments and/or risk management measures of such substances;

21. Believes that the proposed information system on environmental concentrations and releases should take account of the need to detect substances which are not identified through the REACH system itself, and also provide information on concentrations of chemicals in the environment;

22. Emphasises the need to encourage early registration to ensure efficiency of the system;

23. Believes that substances should be registered collectively, an aim to be achieved through, among other means, support to set up appropriate consortia, on the understanding that producers who so wish would have the option of registering substances individually;

24. Calls for the introduction of appropriate and harmonised risk assessments throughout the European Union and appropriate sanction mechanisms as a means of achieving effective implementation of all measures in order to promote efficiency and performance, while avoiding distortions of competition within the European Union;

25. Recommends that all data required for registration and evaluation of substances be based on internationally recognised test methodologies and risk assessment procedures, where available or be recognised by the competent authorities as sufficiently meaningful;

26. Proposes that industry cooperate in the delivery of data/information on the identity and properties of the substances to be registered, so as to share the workload and related costs and to avoid unnecessary duplication of tasks; proposes that the costs related to testing and registration be shared by the respective producers/importers on the basis of market share as the fairest basis;

27. Accepts tonnage thresholds based on production or import volumes by a single producer or importer as a starting point for the future system, but requests that aggregate tonnage be calculated, and that in all cases where aggregate tonnage exceeds the next tonnage threshold for a single producer or importer, the data requirements for that threshold should apply;

28. Welcomes active participation of downstream users — including non-industrial users — from the outset and considers that time limits for the provision of information should be established at all stages of the production cycle; inclusive of the total product chain and calls for all operators, in particular those at the processing and end-user stages of the production chain and product life-cycle, to be included in the chemicals security scheme;

29. Insists that failure to register a substance as well as incomplete or incorrect registration thereof within the reasonable time limits to be set within the system shall render illegal the production or import of the substance, preparation or article in which it is found (no data — no market);

30. Asks that a mechanism of sanctions be introduced into the system against producers, distributors, professional users or importers who withhold required, or other information which might reasonably be considered to be relevant for risk assessment and management (including information about animals tests, whenever and wherever they took place), or who do not comply with the legislation;

31. Requests that any person who imports into the Community a product for sale, hire, leasing or any form of distributing in the course of his business shall ensure that the chemicals contained in the product meet the requirements laid down in chemicals legislation;

32. Calls for the creation of a working party to deal with the exchange of data and information within the value-added chain with the aim of ensuring safe use of substances through the entire life cycle, respecting the confidentiality of the test data and protecting the company-specific know-how concerning the use and application of substances;

33. Calls on the Commission to ensure that animal testing is reduced to the absolute minimum, firstly by ensuring that all relevant data is made available and considered, secondly by basing further tailor-made tests on exposure and use and thirdly by implementing, as far as possible, a step-wise non-animal testing strategy, that makes full use of computer models that predict hazards based on chemical structure (QSAR), as well as of physico-chemical tests for persistency and bioaccumulation, and cascades of in vitro tests which are recognised by the authorities, also with a view to reducing testing time and costs;

34. Requests that the use of animal tests be prohibited where alternative tests recognised by the authorities are available, in accordance with the principles in Council Directive 86/609/EEC, and that more resources be provided immediately to accelerate the development and validation of further scientifically reliable, recognised and standardised alternative tests to replace animal tests in the implementation of the new system;

35. Requests that substances, as soon as they are shown to meet the criteria for very high concern, either from existing classification including industry self-classification, registration or evaluation, shall be phased out according to strict deadlines, unless it is shown that the use in question is essential to society, that the hazardous properties of the substance in question are essential for the intended use and that no safer alternative exists at substance, material or process level, in which case it may be submitted to the authorisation process;

36. Considers that tailor-making of evaluations for substances marketed in quantities above 100 tonnes or those whose use is of concern should be based on simple categories of use (e.g. industrial/non-industrial/closed systems/open systems/professional users/consumers) and be simplified, to the extent possible, by the use of decision trees to avoid lengthy procedures, while the evaluations themselves shall have clear time limits;

37. Considers that scientifically based evaluations shall be taken as an essential basis for regulatory action, given the major uncertainties resulting from the enormous complexity of ecotoxicological effects and the wide range of sources of exposure;

Thursday 15 November 2001

38. Believes that effects on children's health and also on the unborn child shall be used as reference for human health risk assessments, (outside the occupational health framework), given the enhanced sensitivity to chemical exposure;

39. Believes that the authorisation procedure should primarily apply to substances that are proven to be carcinogenic, mutagenic and toxic to reproduction for human beings and animals; suggests therefore that the authorisation procedure should be limited to CMR (categories 1 and 2) and POP substances as defined in Annex D of the Stockholm Convention; asks the Commission to study whether it is necessary to extend the authorisation procedure to other substances such as PBTs, whose use is of high concern;

40. Considers that the only acceptable kind of authorisation procedure is one under which decisions by the authorities will be made as directly as possible on the basis of the information obtained at the registration and evaluation stage; calls for consistent adherence to the precautionary principle advocated by the Commission, which provides for risk-management measures, scientific risk-assessment, proportionality and a cost-benefit analysis;

41. Urges the Commission to ensure that substances of very high concern only receive temporary authorisation subject to regular review for specific applications, including their use in preparations and products, upon proof by industry;

42. Requests that the Community's chemicals policy also include authorisation of pesticides (plant protection products and biocides);

43. Insists that authorisation, in the sense of dispensation for the use of particularly hazardous substances on which, ultimately, there will be a total ban, should be granted only as an absolute exception for a short, temporary period and only where there is documentation to show that development work is in progress to find alternatives or alternative methods;

44. Insists that no uses of substances of very high concern shall be authorised in consumer products as soon as appropriate safer alternatives are available and at the latest after 2012, and that, in principle no other uses of substances of very high concern which lead to releases to the environment during their lifecycle shall be authorised after 2020; in other words, such substances may then only be used as intermediate products in manufacturing processes within closed cycles that prevent all releases to the environment;

45. Considers that authorisations should, in general, be taken at Community level;

46. Insists that all national differentiations and particularities in the overall procedure which are required of Member States should be adequately justified by them before they adopt national provisions, in accordance with the EU standards in force, and stresses that the Commission must examine and decide on all applications for national differentiations and particularities in relation to the overall procedure on the basis of EU law, taking all circumstances into account;

47. Calls for the authorisation exemption arrangements allowed for certain uses to be strictly supervised and for concepts such as 'controlled industrial use' to be assessed and defined in advance;

48. Believes that an authorisation decision should go hand in hand with specific risk management measures (conditions for the use of the product, timetable for reassessments, etc.);

49. Stresses that the substitution principle — the promotion of safer practices and substances to replace hazardous practices and substances — should apply to all chemicals of concern, not just those subject to authorisation; chemicals that are of concern should be substituted with safer chemicals, or with materials or safer technologies not entailing the use of such chemicals, especially where safer alternatives already exist, taking account of socio-economic aspects in the choice of the best substitute; substitution should become a duty for manufacturers and downstream users to avoid risks to workers as well as to human health and the environment in general; firms should be required to publish annually a list of all substances of concern which they have not yet replaced; considers that Integrated Product Policy (IPP) should be an additional tool to the new chemicals policy to promote sustainable consumption;

50. Calls for intensified research into alternatives in the sense not only of alternative chemicals but also other material and alternative methods; also calls on the Commission to encourage and support small and medium-sized firms working on alternative solutions;

51. Calls for the assessment with a view to replacement to be performed on the basis of a holistic life cycle analysis; possible alternatives must likewise be subjected to a life cycle analysis in order to ascertain possible risks and dangers and to facilitate an integrated assessment;

52. Suggests that the Commission further encourages the promotion of safer practices and substances to replace hazardous practices and substances by facilitating the creation of a publicly accessible database containing meaningful and relevant information for the purpose of protecting human health and the environment, drawing on the best available knowledge on processes and materials that reduce or eliminate the use of substances of concern;

53. Calls on the Commission to provide the means required for flexible coordination of the European databases to be set up in the future with those existing in other parts of the world so as to allow a continuous exchange of information and experiences among the different countries which manufacture and market chemical substances and preparations that might pose dangers;

54. Calls on the Commission to develop criteria to put substances, which do not fall under the authorisation system, in categories of concern based on hazard criteria and use pattern, which then trigger consistent and rapid risk reduction measures;

55. Requests that a tiered approach be used for risk management decisions under the accelerated risk management system: a committee procedure may be used to allow for quick adoption of temporary measures; the Commission shall thereafter make proposals for permanent measures on each of the temporary measures subject to co-decision to ensure that the European Parliament is fully involved in the decision-making;

56. Welcomes the intention to create a publicly accessible database containing meaningful and relevant information about chemicals and their regulatory status with reference to human health and environment protection; considers that key information such as production volumes, use patterns and sources of exposure, shall not remain confidential but be included in the database, and calls on the Commission to propose arrangements for the publication of data from past animal tests (whenever and wherever they took place) where this may reduce the need for further animal testing;

57. Considers that manufacturers, importers, downstream users and distributors should have a duty to provide publicly available, meaningful and relevant information on the content and properties of chemicals in products with reference to human health and environmental protection (including data from animal tests, whenever and wherever they took place); in this connection, an appropriate balance must be found between the need for transparency to allow consumer choice and the need to respect justified business secrets;

58. Insists that the proposed right of public access to information about substances must be so structured as to reflect both consumers' needs for information and producers' needs for protection of confidential information;

Thursday 15 November 2001

59. Requests that an information service should be set up by industry to be reached via a toll free number in all European countries to provide consumer information about chemicals in products;

60. Insists that labelling of consumer products with regard to the content of substances of concern is imperative as long as they are still contained in them, to allow consumers to make informed choices, and that realistic and practical provisions on that matter be included in the future proposal;

61. Considers that small and medium-sized enterprises cannot be expected to cope with too great a burden of red tape, and that risk information and warning measures should in any event be strengthened by way of product labelling;

62. Takes the view that the improvement in consumer protection to which the White Paper aspires is not precise enough; the precautionary principle should be applied in accordance with the guidelines adopted by the Commission and the European Parliament: in the case of chemicals policy consumer protection should, apart from risk prevention, be a matter of clear and comprehensible information;

63. Suggests that the Commission facilitates the compilation of such information in publicly available product registers, starting with the most relevant consumer product categories, based on the registers available in Member States and countries of the European Economic Area;

64. Calls upon the Commission not to restrict harmonised classification to CMR properties but to retain the same range as hitherto and at the same time to simplify the classification in order to make the system more effective and practical;

65. Calls on the Commission, especially in view of the compulsory registration of new substances that will result from the White Paper, to intensify still further the Community efforts to promote proper training for workers who have to handle hazardous products;

66. Calls for the assessment of the additional resources necessitated by the new chemicals policy proposed in the White Paper to be spelt out in fuller detail, especially as regards the resources to be mobilised in Member States and fee systems;

67. Believes that the new Chemicals Policy should provide the basis for the regulation, evaluation and authorisation of all chemicals and consequently impact all consumer product legislation and calls on the Commission to make provision for the recast of all relevant community legislation, including legislation on pesticides, in line with the future chemicals directive;

68. Requests that future Community legislation on environment liability is based on strict liability for damages to human health and the environment, covering all chemicals and their uses, as an additional driver towards safer chemicals and products;

69. Requests the Commission to carry out a detailed analysis of the relationship between chemicals legislation and Community legislation on waste;

70. Urges the Commission to take more account of international aspects in developing the REACH system and to work for worldwide convergence of the essential systems of law regulating chemicals (at least those in the EU, the USA and Japan); the recognition of findings from tests in OECD countries is one important aspect;

71. Advocates, in the interests of international convergence, that the OECD's definition of endocrine disrupters be adopted as soon as agreement has been reached there;

72. Calls on the Commission to involve the Eastern European applicant countries in the development of the new EU law on chemicals at an early stage;

73. Calls for the conditions necessary for the competitiveness of the Community's industry to be created, and for efforts to be directed towards encouraging an environment favourable to initiative and towards the development of enterprises throughout the Community, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises, in accordance with Article 157 of the EC Treaty;

74. Calls on the Commission to advise and assist small and medium-sized enterprises with registration and assessment procedures;

75. Calls on the Commission to establish a fast track within the multiannual framework programme 2002-2006 of the European Community for research, technological development and demonstration activities aimed at contributing towards the creation of the European research area, with a view to encouraging small and medium-sized enterprises in particular to develop new products that will protect health, safety, and the environment to an increasingly greater degree;

76. Calls on the Commission to encourage the Member States to provide means of financial support for small and medium-sized enterprises with a view to developing facilities and operating arrangements to help them cope with the technical and organisational burdens stemming from REACH;

77. Emphasises the vital need to take account of the particular difficulties that may arise for small and medium-sized enterprises when they have to comply with future legislative proposals deriving from the White Paper;

78. Insists that the property rights of processing and user enterprises in data and risk assessment must be protected vis-à-vis European and non-European competitors in a way that does not distort competition between small and medium-sized producers and big producers;

79. Calls, in connection with the development of future provisions and implementing measures, for the active and balanced involvement of all societal groups concerned, such as industry, European works councils, workers' representatives and their trade unions, environmental and health NGOs and consumer groups; calls, in particular, for a strengthening of the role and powers of the health and safety committees set up by enterprises;

80. Insists that, before any future regulations are adopted, their socio-economic impact, in particular that on small and medium-sized enterprises, having regard in particular to the possible effects on employment and jobs in European industry as a whole, must be analysed and taken into consideration, and calls consequently on the Commission to engage in permanent dialogue with industry and the trade unions;

81. Calls on the Commission to draw up new proposals with a view to increasing the transparency of data relating to substances manufactured by the chemical industry, without undermining industrial secrecy, so as to deal with public health and consumer protection problems;

82. Calls on the Commission to address a recommendation to the Member States urging them to pay greater attention to the training of more toxicologists so that Europe will in the future have sufficiently well qualified experts to ensure that the White Paper is put into practice;

83. Calls on the Commission to submit a brief annual report of some ten pages outlining the progress made and problems associated with implementing the REACH system so that any misdevelopments are detected by the other Community bodies earlier than in the case of the pesticide review pursuant to Directive 91/414/EEC;

84. Calls on the Commission to submit a comprehensive analysis and study of all substance- and product-related rules by mid-2002, together with proposals as to which of the rules ought to be amended, simplified or even rescinded in the light of the new chemicals policy;

Thursday 15 November 2001

85. Calls on the Commission to compile a coherent and consolidated collection of all the provisions banning or imposing restrictions on substances or products (including those incorporated under other subject-headings), or to bring them together in a single EU legislative instrument, thereby ensuring legal clarity and certainty (particularly including provisions in the fields of the Water Framework Directive, the directives on electrical appliances and cars for disposal, and health and safety at work), to make those texts available on the Internet and to update them at least once a year;

86. Calls for all new legislation to be as practical and transparent as possible, so that implementation to improve the protection of consumers, the environment, workers and all parties concerned — particularly by the authorities and small and medium-sized enterprises — can be undertaken swiftly;

87. Calls on the Commission to test new legislation and its possible implementation immediately in practice by means of special projects in order to ensure that it is as efficient and practical as possible for all parties concerned in terms of bureaucracy, cost and collection of data, particularly for the authorities and small and medium-sized enterprises;

88. Invites the Commission to consider the possibility that the JRC and in particular the European Chemical Bureau of this centre may become the centralised site for registration, evaluation and authorisation of new chemical substances, thus avoiding heterogeneous criteria in the different Member States;

89. Calls for the approach adopted in the White Paper of a consistent and integrated European substances and products law not to be confined to chemicals, but for acquired data collection and risk assessment procedures to be applied also to other areas of EU legislation on workplace, consumer and environmental protection;

90. Asks the Commission to produce a consistent and clear definition in European law of the so-called 'substitution principle';

91. Calls on the Commission to encourage other countries to (a) make existing and future animal test data publicly available and (b) accept the validity of data from non-animal tests which are accepted within the European Union;

92. Requests the Council and Commission to urge all parties at the UN Rio+10 meeting in Johannesburg to make a commitment to a global chemicals policy built on sustainable development and the precautionary principle, in accordance with the definition of the precautionary principle given by the Commission in its communication on the precautionary principle;

— having regard to Rules 47(2) and 163 of its Rules of Procedure,

— having regard to the report of the Committee on the Environment, Public Health and Consumer Policy (A5-0323/2001),

A. whereas packaging waste continues to require attention in order to control its effects on the environment; whereas the environmental, economic and social issues of packaging and packaging waste need to be addressed in the framework of the Strategy for Sustainable Development, the Sixth Environmental Action Programme 2001-2010, integrated product policy and the EU's waste management policy,

B. whereas the deadline for transposition was 30 June 1996, a majority of the Member States had only transposed the Directive by late 1998,

C. whereas prevention of waste is the highest step in the waste hierarchy for all packaging materials, the Directive does not contain a concrete prevention target; whereas Austria, Denmark, the Netherlands and the United Kingdom have experienced a decrease in amounts of packaging put on the market from 1997 to 1998, Belgium, Finland, Germany and Italy have experienced an increase,

D. whereas in 1998 the Member States that had submitted data (all except, Greece, Ireland and Portugal) had reached the target of 25 % recycling of all packaging by a good margin, with a positive trend in all Member States except for Spain,

E. whereas in 1998 all Member States had reached the mandatory 15 % recycling of glass by a good margin, with most Member States having increased the recycling rate; whereas all Member States that had submitted data (all except, Greece, Ireland and Portugal) had met the mandatory target of 15 % paper and cardboard recycling; whereas 10 of the 12 Member States having submitted data (all except Finland, Luxembourg, and Portugal) had reached the mandatory target of 15 % for metal,

F. whereas in 1998 only Austria, Belgium, Germany and Sweden had reached the mandatory 15 % recycling of plastics, which indicates that plastics are difficult to collect, sort and recycle and that additional efforts are needed,

G. whereas of the 12 Member States that had submitted data (all except Greece, Ireland, and Portugal) only Italy, Spain and the United Kingdom had not reached the target of 50 % recovery of all packaging waste in 1998,

H. whereas the European Parliament wishes to ensure the quality of EU rules and regulations, so that they can be complied with and enforced; whereas EU rules and regulations need to be subject to careful monitoring to assess whether there is a need to strengthen them,

I. whereas according to Article 6(3)(b) of Directive 94/62/EC, the Commission was due to come forward by the end of 2000 with a proposal including targets for the period 2001-2006,

J. whereas, due to the absence of reliable data, environmental performance defined as the savings in consumption of natural resources, energy, water and the reductions on emissions related with new production, is difficult to express,

K. whereas the lack of reliable data is in some cases due to the lack of harmonisation of the declarations filled out by those producing and marketing packaging in each Member State,

L. whereas the packaging sector involves competition between different materials, each with specific characteristics,

M. whereas ensuring the functioning of the internal market is one of the two fundamental principles of the Directive,

N. whereas the Directive makes it more difficult for some Member States with a progressive packaging policy to go ahead on a more environmentally friendly way,

O. whereas all quantitative targets set should be realistic, proportional and achievable and set in such a way that they help achieve the objective of preventing any negative environmental impact of packaging and packaging waste on the Member States or non-member countries or reduce such an impact, thus providing a high level of environmental protection while recognising the function of packaging,

P. whereas recycling is a job-creating industry which has a potential for continuous growth; whereas the market for recycled materials may be developed and can be boosted by public procurement decisions,

Q. whereas today Life Cycle Analysis (LCA) is a method to be taken into account when assessing a product's environmental impact, if consumption of raw materials, water, energy, emissions to the air and water and residues are taken into account and if the impact on global warming, human and environmental toxicity, acidification, waste and depletion of natural resources are fully considered,

R. whereas transport of waste is an issue of growing concern and the environmental pressures caused by the transport of waste must be reduced, since these pressures are likely to increase in the future as waste is separated into more fractions for different treatment,

S. whereas certain Member States, which do not have satisfactory waste management plans, should ensure compliance with the packaging recycling targets and not invest solely in new waste incineration facilities,

T. whereas the Community packaging waste policy should aim at maximising diversion from landfill and optimising the resources efficiency for the different packaging materials,

U. whereas some recycled materials are subject to administrative restrictions and obligations because they are classified as 'waste' under Community legislation, despite the fact that they are valuable raw materials,

V. whereas the waste management hierarchy — prevention, re-use, recycling, incineration (with energy recovery), landfill — may not reflect the best environmental option in all situations in view of the nature and scale of the transport operations it requires,

W. whereas, in cases where prevention, re-use and recycling are not possible, incineration with energy recovery is the least-worst option and preferable to landfill,

X. whereas different policy-options exists and whereas results are best reached by a mix of policies; whereas differentiation is needed between the limited short-term revision of the Directive and the more fundamental change foreseen in the medium term,

Y. whereas packaging has no raison d'être on its own, its only purpose being to protect packaged goods, and it must therefore save more resources than have been consumed in its production,

1. Notes that most Member States were late in transposing the Directive into their national legal system, but that all but one Member State have now communicated implementing measures to the Commission; regrets that the Commission is late in coming forward with a revised proposal;

2. Welcomes that in general the targets set out in the Directive have been met by the Member States; regrets that the recycling target for plastics in 1998 was only met by four Member States;

3. Considers that the Directive can be improved by clarifying the meaning of the definitions; calls on the Commission to issue a harmonised reporting technique and clear guidelines for data providers on how to obtain reliable data on packaging and packaging waste;

4. Regrets that there is no clear evaluation of the environmental impact of the Directive or of its impact on the functioning of the internal market and free competition between the various packaging materials;

5. Underlines the importance of the timely availability of data on the implementation of the Directive by Member States and considers that the European Environment Agency can play a useful role in drafting reports on the implementation and in evaluating the environmental impact of the current Directive;

6. Considers that a meaningful outcome to the work of CEN is particularly important to all stakeholders with a view to issuing material-related standards relating to paragraph 1 of Annex II to Directive 94/62/EC which afford producers greater legal certainty as regards compliance with prevention requirements; notes the fact, however, that the Commission has formally rejected three out of five CEN environmental standards for packaging; requests that CEN be asked to continue its work on drawing up standards for meeting the essential requirements in Annex II based on guidance on criteria for environmental friendly packaging; urges the Commission to ensure that all stakeholders are properly represented in the process, including representatives from consumer and environmental organisations; requests that that the essential requirements be put into the body of the revised legislation in clear terms with a view to ensuring democratic control and scrutiny;

7. Notes that some two-thirds of packaging is for food and that a proportion of this will be contaminated by food and will therefore be more difficult to separate from the domestic waste stream for recycling;

8. Reminds the Commission that, in line with Article 2(2) of the Directive, any policy of packaging prevention must take account of hygienic protection of foodstuffs and other products;

9. Considers that problems with cross border transport of packaging waste that limit the possibilities of creating scale economies need to be addressed carefully and that action needs to be taken to promote the use of less polluting means of transport such as the railways;

10. Underlines that retailers have a responsibility to collect packaging and packaging waste and asks Member States to encourage retailers to provide for the organisation of the take-back of packaging and packaging waste;

11. Considers that the environmental burden of packaging and packaging waste will decrease by using a policy mix of:

— ensuring that a waste management approach is adopted, which takes account of all possible forms of recycling and recovery,

Thursday 15 November 2001

— introducing a binding general target on the reduction of the amount of packaging waste going to landfill,

— introducing easily-accessible means of collecting packaging for consumers,

12. Urges the Commission to initiate and guide stakeholder dialogue on the sectoral level to encourage development of standards for packaging in the spirit of the Sixth Environmental Action Programme (saving energy, limiting use of natural resources, banning hazardous substances and minimalisation of waste); encourages the development of indicators, e.g. product/packaging ratios;

13. Calls on the Commission to carry out a study on the implementation of the CEN standard on prevention and to measure its impact in the different Member States;

14. Calls on the Commission to present a proposal for the introduction of a prevention and reduction target per material for the quantity of packaging material placed on the market, where appropriate, and in the long term to ensure that in-depth reviews of such targets are conducted in order to adapt them to technical progress;

15. Calls on the Commission to present a proposal for a strategy for module-based transport packaging to reduce the number of transport operations which takes proper account of the role of packaging throughout the logistics chain;

16. Urges the Commission to develop means to introduce producer responsibility in preventing packaging waste, meaning that each producer has to prove on the basis of a LCA that he has chosen the environmentally best option to satisfy the essential functions of packaging;

17. Calls on the Commission to present a proposal to introduce re-use targets for certain packaging products consisting of materials where re-use is placed higher in the hierarchy than recycling and in cases where the burden of transport does not exceed the environmental benefit, account being taken of the fact that, in the case of materials which occur in comparatively small quantities on the European market (<10 000 t/a) and whose collection cannot be concentrated, recycling generally does not make sense;

19. Notes that in order to make recycled material more competitive as a secondary raw material the price difference with virgin raw materials needs to be reduced by internalising environmental costs in the price of these virgin raw materials; commends the introduction of a mandatory fee on the use of packaging materials that are unable to generate a positive price when recycled;

20. Urges the Commission to develop a definition and criteria on waste streams suitable for recovery with the aim of maximising energy use and minimising releases of hazardous substances; underlines that a sufficient increase in recycling targets will make an increase of the recovery target obsolete;

21. Calls for a general reduction target on packaging waste going to landfill;

22. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States.

B. whereas, if the political, economic, environmental and social challenges still confronting Latin America are to be surmounted, Europeans and Latin Americans must work together along the same lines and in a climate of mutual respect,

C. whereas, although democracy has spread through several countries in the region in recent years, it has not taken hold to the same extent across the board; whereas, in spite of relatively healthy economic growth, poverty and inequalities continue to spread; whereas the gradual demise of military regimes throughout the 1990s has not eased social tensions to any appreciable extent; whereas all of these factors could jeopardise the transition to democracy in some of these countries and feed an authoritarian backlash,

D. whereas the second summit, to be staged in May 2002, will provide an excellent opportunity to forge a comprehensive strategy framework that endows the European Union's foreign policy vis-à-vis Latin America with real substance and structure,

E. whereas launching a common strategy for relations with Latin America constitutes the best political, legal and institutional means available to the European Union of achieving the strategic bi-regional partnership agreed upon in Rio,

F. whereas the added value gained from the launch of the above common strategy would be the adoption of an all-encompassing, consistent, united and independent approach capable of providing constant and structured impetus to the relations between the European Union and Latin America,

G. whereas the new strategy should be built first and foremost on the bilateral and regional aspects of European Union policy towards Latin America and their respective achievements, and also on broader political dialogue within the updated and modernised Rio and San José processes,

H. whereas, furthermore, due to its role in lending legitimacy to the different integration processes under way in both regions, EU-Latin American parliamentary dialogue constitutes a key aspect of the global strategic bi-regional partnership; whereas such dialogue ought to include procedures for consulting and involving citizens,

I. mindful of the need to allot appropriate resources to the new priorities established at the Rio summit,

J. whereas support for the peace process and social change in Colombia, based on the respect for human rights and social justice and enabling the Colombian people to retain the power to take their own decisions and their independence, must be one of the main items on the new agenda for political dialogue between the two regions,

K. whereas the proposed global anti-drugs plan should be backed up with genuine economic measures as an alternative to growing drug crops and should seek to preserve the environment,

L. whereas the so-called Puebla-Panama project for a comprehensive programme of infrastructure to integrate fully the south of Mexico with the Central American isthmus could prove to be of geopolitical importance and of great socio-economic significance, but should give due consideration to the potentially negative impact of a plan of such scope on social structures, on business for small- and medium-scale producers and on the environment,

M. whereas the aforementioned initiative must take due account of projects geared towards social development and the protection of natural resources,

A global outlook for the European Union-Latin America strategic bi-regional partnership

1. Reiterates its support for the launch of the strategic bi-regional partnership agreed upon by the Heads of State and Government of the countries of the European Union, Latin America and the Caribbean, meeting in Rio on 28 and 29 June 1999; notes with dismay that time has already been wasted because no specific initiatives have been taken to implement agreed cooperation issues;

2. Calls on the European Council to adopt a common EU strategy for Latin America and the Caribbean to give substance and direction to EU action in launching the strategic bi-regional partnership agreed upon in Rio;

3. Points out that the starting point for the new common strategy and for EU policy vis-à-vis Latin America must be the partnership principle and must therefore enjoy the support of both parties;

4. Believes that the second summit of Heads of State and Government, to be staged in May 2002, is an ideal setting in which to adopt the aforementioned strategy;

Aims of the common strategy

5. Recommends that the aims of the new common strategy reflect the priorities agreed upon at the First Summit of Heads of State and Government in Rio and be divided into three main groups as follows:

(a) Aims in the political sphere:

- adopting a broader bi-regional political agenda,
- updating and modernising political dialogue at ministerial level,
- modernising parliamentary dialogue and creating an EU-Latin American Transatlantic Assembly,
- signing an EU-Latin American peace charter, and
- launching an EU-Latin American political and security partnership;

(b) Aims in the economic, financial and commercial spheres:

- finalising the series of association agreements under negotiation with Mercosur and Chile,
- submitting new negotiating guidelines with a view to concluding association agreements with the Andean Community and Central America in the medium term,
- maintaining the terms of the Community GSP from which the Andean and Central American countries benefit in the short and medium term,
- concluding a global interregional partnership agreement to ensure that the substance of the strategic partnership enjoys institutional back-up and covers all of the countries concerned, and
- setting up an area of shared prosperity by strengthening regional markets;

(c) Aims in the social and cultural spheres:

- implementing a firm and ambitious development cooperation policy covering the social sphere, culture, education, immigration, justice and home affairs and, above all, the fight against poverty,
- setting up a bi-regional solidarity fund,
- introducing a global anti-drugs plan,
- launching a Euro-Latin-For programme to train members of the judiciary and the police, together with a Euro-Latin-Lex programme to establish the legal framework required to ensure that drug trafficking and related offences are suitably prosecuted,
- firmly supporting the ALIS programme and the information society proposed by the Commission, and
- establishing a centre for European and Latin American studies (CELAS);

6. Believes that a further basic aim of the new strategy should lie in promoting the principles that underlie the Union, including human rights, democracy, good governance, transparency and the rule of law;

Thursday 15 November 2001

A broader bi-regional political agenda

7. Calls further for the new common strategy to provide for a broader agenda for bi-regional political dialogue at the ministerial and parliamentary levels alike that also embraces in particular:

— reform of the United Nations system,

— the promotion of democracy, human rights and the rule of law, together with the fight against impunity,

— issues relating to the environment and sustainable development, and the funding thereof,

— reform of the international financial system,

— consultations with regard to the new WTO round,

— the creation of an EU-Latin American area of peace and stability founded on fundamental principles such as respect for human rights, the rule of law and democratic values, and — support for the peace process and ongoing social change in Colombia and in other areas where there is conflict;

Updating and modernising political dialogue at ministerial level

8. Calls for the processes linked to the Rio Group and San José process to be updated and modernised, so as to provide them with fresh impetus in line with the aims and initiatives pursued by the strategy; considers that both processes should adopt the approach established at the summits and discuss matters on the new, broader political agenda;

Creation of an EU-Latin American Transatlantic Assembly

9. Proposes that the existing system of interparliamentary conferences be replaced with an EU-Latin American Transatlantic Assembly, composed of an equal number of Members of the European Parliament, the Latin American Parliament (Parlatino) and the regional integration parliaments, whose work would be conducted in plenary sittings and in committee, and which would meet once a year;

10. Calls for the new strategy to promote initiatives designed to strengthen the direct legitimacy of Parlatino and the Andean Parliament through gradual moves within a given period towards the election of their representatives by direct universal suffrage, whilst of course abiding by the domestic legislation of each country;

11. Calls further for support to be provided to the Central-American Parliament (Parlacen) and its efforts towards regional integration in Central America in the form of specific measures such as backing for its multiannual programme for bolstering democracy;

Specific initiatives under the new common strategy

Launching an EU-Latin American political partnership and signing an EU-Latin American peace charter

12. Calls on the European Union to strengthen political dialogue on security matters with the countries of Latin America at every level, be it bilateral dialogue with individual countries, multilateral dialogue or dialogue within Rio Group and San José process bodies;

13. Calls for the establishment of an EU-Latin American strategic and political partnership implemented on the basis of an EU-Latin American peace charter which follows the example of the United Nations Charter and gives concrete expression to political, strategic and security-related proposals of interest to both regions;

14. Calls for cooperation on security and defence matters between the EU Member States and the countries of Latin America to feature amongst the issues addressed within the context of the above Charter;

15. Believes that the matters addressed within the context of such cooperation could relate to: upholding peace and security worldwide, with particular emphasis on curbs on small-bore weapons, disarmament, nuclear non-proliferation, military and technical cooperation with regard to the arms industry and the control of arms exports, security, economic, development and environmental issues; and, in general, any other matters with a bearing on mutual security and defence interests;

Finalising a new series of association agreements and concluding a global interregional partnership agreement with a view to putting an EU-Latin American free-trade area in place by 2010

16. Calls for the series of association agreements under negotiation with Mercosur and Chile to be finalised in the near future, with each concluded on its own merits, and, furthermore, for new negotiating guidelines to be submitted as soon as possible with a view to concluding association agreements with the Andean Community and Central America in the medium term;

17. Sees the need to maintain the terms of the Community GSP from which the Andean and Central American countries benefit in the short and medium term;

18. Calls for the conclusion, within a given period, of a single global interregional partnership agreement to ensure that the substance of the strategic partnership enjoys institutional back-up and covers all of the countries concerned;

19. Proposes that the aim of the new agreement should ultimately be the bilateral and preferential liberalisation, on a gradual and reciprocal basis, of the trade in all kinds of goods and services between the two regions, in accordance with WTO rules;

20. Hopes that the above agreement can serve to boost sustainable development, reduce social disparities and enhance the well-being of the peoples of Latin America;

21. Calls for the various negotiating mandates to rule out making the conclusion of the new association agreements — both those with Mercosur and Chile and the proposed new association agreements with the Andean Community and the countries of Central America — in any way dependent on completion of the WTO round of negotiations, whilst ensuring that, in the final analysis, the free-trade area envisaged between the two parties is fully compatible with existing WTO rules;

22. Calls on the Commission and the Council to consult the European Parliament on the guidelines governing negotiations of any kind on agreements with Latin American countries before they are approved by the Council; calls on the Commission to pursue its work on partnership arrangements with civil society;

23. Asks that, alongside the importance that they attach to purely economic and trade-related aspects, the new agreements acknowledge the qualitative importance of political, social (relating to health, education, training, the rights of women and children, preservation of a sustainable environment and infrastructure projects), cultural, immigration, and economic and development cooperation considerations;

24. Proposes redefining and establishing an EU-Latin American free-trade area by 2010 by means of the conclusion of the aforementioned global interregional partnership agreement, which, whilst not bypassing the bilateral agreements already concluded or under negotiation, will provide additional institutional back-up for the substance of the strategic bi-regional partnership agreed upon in Rio and cover all of the countries concerned;

25. Recommends that the bilateral and interregional agreements already concluded or under negotiation be backed up by a multilateral approach designed to promote regional integration and trade within Latin America itself, the provisions of which could be incorporated into the proposed global interregional partnership agreement at a later stage;

26. Points to the need, with a view to the development of a competitive industry, for the regular transfer of technology and knowledge;

Implementing a firm and ambitious development cooperation policy covering the social sphere, culture, education, immigration, justice and home affairs and, above all, the fight against poverty

27. Calls for the new common strategy to make education, health and culture its priorities and to provide for targeted measures in support of those Latin American countries which require them, with particular attention paid to ethnic minorities and indigenous groups;

28. Calls for the ALFA programme for higher education to be expanded and for an assessment to be made of how students from Latin America could take part in the Erasmus programme; offers further its firm support to Commission activities and moves to promote education and culture in EU-Latin American relations;

29. Recommends extending to the countries of Latin America those programmes relating to vocational training, education on new technologies and cultural heritage that may prove beneficial to both parties, taking the EU's Socrates, Leonardo and Raphael programmes as a framework and working in accordance with the cooperation programme between both parties as established by EU and Latin American education ministers in Paris on 3 November 2000;

30. Takes the view that the new common strategy must present innovative immigration policies founded on the respect for, and dignity of, the individual and on the sovereignty of the countries concerned;

31. Suggests to the Commission that an immigration observatory be set up with responsibility for ongoing and thorough monitoring of all issues related to migratory flows between Europe and Latin America;

32. Calls for the promotion of cooperation on social issues, including gender equality, and for strengthened social dialogue;

33. Calls for deeper involvement for civil society (NGOs, immigrants, local communities, undertakings, associations, universities, trade unions, etc.) as a means of ensuring that society as a whole becomes more closely associated with the activities and benefits that ensue from the launch of the new strategy;

34. Supports the launch of an EU-Latin American business forum bringing together representatives from employer organisations and small, medium-sized and large enterprises in Europe and Latin America with the aim of promoting trade and attracting all kinds of investment to both regions;

Creation of a bi-regional solidarity fund

35. Believes that a prime focus of the new common strategy should lie in giving a major new boost to EU development cooperation policy towards Latin America, a key element of which should be the fight against poverty and social inequality;

36. Suggests creating a bi-regional solidarity fund, whose activities would be geared towards managing and financing sectoral programmes focusing initially on health, education and the fight against abject poverty in those countries and regions with lower per capita income levels and more acute social inequalities and subsequently on Latin America as a whole;

37. Takes the view that the aforementioned fund ought to enjoy appropriate sectoral budgetary support and be run by the Commission in conjunction with those bodies (EIB, IDB, World Bank, etc.) and countries whose assistance would further serve to provide the fund with adequate budgetary resources; considers that the Commission and the Council must encourage the aforementioned bodies to promote the creation of the fund;

38. Considers that the new common strategy should pave the way for the establishment of a joint EU-Latin American global plan to combat drug trafficking and related offences, conceived as a specific and comprehensive strategic project for joint action that employs innovative and effective measures to counter this scourge adequately by offering genuine economic alternatives to the people concerned, abides fully by international and environmental law and applies a system of joint responsibility;

39. Proposes that the global anti-drugs plan provide for the approval and ratification of the UN Convention against Transnational Organised Crime and the protocols thereto, signed in Palermo in December 2000; proposes further that priority be given to drug prevention policies and their three distinct stages of research, action and evaluation, with the emphasis placed on policies geared towards bringing down production and demand and using various international cooperation projects as a means of promoting rehabilitation programmes for drug addicts;

40. Calls on the EU and Latin America to work together more closely in this field under the global anti-drugs plan, in line with the principle of shared responsibility, and to undertake to refrain from using the fight against drugs as a pretext for making political or military demands; calls for the provisions of criminal law to be deal adequately with drug trafficking, money laundering and the illicit trade in chemical precursors; considers, moreover, that support should be given to all instruments which focus on the exchange of information and experience in combating drugs;

41. Believes that, in the interests of greater effectiveness, the cooperation and coordination mechanism on drugs linking the countries of the European Union, Latin America and the Caribbean could form part of the global plan;

42. Calls for the new common strategy to encompass targeted practical measures to combat drug trafficking, organised crime and the traffic in small-bore weapons, and to include a Euro-Latin-For programme for the training of, and exchanges between, members of the judiciary and the police, together with a Euro-Latin-Lex programme to promote the approximation of legislation on the effective indictment of such offences, whilst fully respecting the sovereignty of the countries concerned;

Support for the ALIS programme and the information society proposed by the Commission

43. Supports the Commission's proposals to promote the information society and all new electronic communications systems in EU-Latin American relations, and the proposals relating to the new ALIS programme in particular; calls also for initiatives to be encouraged to bridge the technological divide separating the two regions and focus on basic education and quality training, with support for procedures which guarantee the transparency of governmental activities;

44. Calls for the spread of new technologies to be encouraged, so as to provide for easier access, and greater emphasis on audiovisual programmes aspiring to achieve quality, cultural diversity and the promotion of democratic values, whilst guarding against monopolies and guaranteeing the right to accurate and reliable information;

Other specific initiatives under the new common strategy

45. Considers that the new common strategy should make provision for specific initiatives with regard to democracy, human rights, including economic, social and cultural rights, and the rule of law, with a view to ensuring that the public sector, private sector and civil society work together to defend democracy;

46. Takes the view that the new common strategy must include measures to place globalisation at the service of human beings, whilst preserving the cultural heritage of peoples and narrowing the gap between rich and poor countries;

Thursday 15 November 2001

47. Suggests that the strategy ought to contain stringent environmental measures whose aim lies in ratifying and enforcing the terms of the Kyoto Protocol and the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety, making headway towards meeting the objectives of Agenda 21 and of the next World Summit on Sustainable Development, in countering the increase in toxic substances, and in providing for the ratification of existing international conventions, in particular the Basel Convention on hazardous chemical products;

48. Emphasises that the New strategy should contain measures to ensure that the integration process in Latin America receives resolute encouragement and momentum and to facilitate economic, commercial, social, regional and bi-regional exchanges in response to the challenges thrown up by globalisation; welcomes in this regard, the example set by the Central American Bank for Economic Integration as a multilateral bank for integration and regional development in Central America;

49. Reiterates its view that the Commission and the Council should make clear their political desire to solve the problem of debt, which is seriously hampering development efforts in the countries of Latin America and which, if rescheduled, ought to serve to fund projects combining investment and employment, particularly amongst young people; considers that the Council and the Commission must promote and shape specific initiatives to that end;

50. Calls on the European Union to join with the international financial community in helping to ensure that the proposed Puebla-Panama project is a success, since besides being a political and legal concept, market integration is primarily a practical notion;

51. Welcomes the emergency social production programme 'A Trabajar' ('Off to Work') recently launched by the new democratic government of Peru with the aim of reducing poverty in the country and improving the economic and social conditions of its people, and also firmly supports the holding of a donors' conference in the hope that international cooperation can help provide adequate co-funding to ensure the success of the objectives pursued by the programme;

52. Considers it vital in the near future to open without delay a Commission delegation in Ecuador, the only Andean country which does not have one, in order to enhance the Union's profile and actions in the Andean area and provide firm support for greater regional integration, as one of the most effective means of helping overcome the difficult times being experienced by most countries in the region;

Ways and means of applying the new strategy

53. In order to give a higher profile to the European Union's actions and initiatives in the region and make them more effective, calls for increased coordination, cohesion and complementarity between the instruments and actions of the European Union and the Member States in the region;

54. Requests also that efforts be made to ensure that the European Union's policy towards Latin America complements its policies towards other associated countries;

55. Recommends that in implementing the common strategy the European Union institutions and bodies act with due regard for the competences and procedures laid down in the EU and the EC Treaties;

56. Considers that the Member States should contribute to the objectives of the common strategy by making appropriate and coordinated use of all the relevant instruments available to them;

57. Considers it vital for the Council, Commission and Member States to adapt all the existing in this area to the needs of the future strategy and to make full and appropriate use of the various existing instruments, means and programmes, whilst drawing up a list to serve as a guide to the resources available to the Union, the Community and the Member States for applying the common strategy;

58. Considers that, in order to implement the new common strategy, increased human resources will be needed in the Directorate for Latin America of the Commission's Directorate-General for External Relations and in related services;

59. Proposes that a centre for European and Latin American studies (CELAS) be set up, to be funded initially from existing capacity by the Community budget, the Member States, the countries of Latin America and other possible external donors, but looking to the private sector as its long-term source of support;

Budgetary aspects of the EU-Latin America strategic bi-regional partnership

60. Calls on the Commission and the Council to provide adequate funding to achieve the objectives set under the present strategy, bearing in mind that Latin America needs opportunities not hand-outs;

61. Calls for the financial provisions applicable to Latin America to be placed on a firmer legal footing and for this purpose considers it vital to divide the existing financial regulation applying to both Asia and the countries of Latin America into two separate financial regulations;

62. Calls on the Commission, the Council, the Member States and the countries of Latin America to help strengthen private enterprise as a key to the success of the actions provided for under the new strategy and to sustainable development;

63. Calls on the Commission, bearing in mind existing needs, to submit a proposal designed to increase the efforts and resources deployed by the EIB in the region, under initiatives such as the action plan for integration of regional infrastructures in South America or the Puebla-Panama project;

Duration and revision of the new common strategy

64. Requests that the new common strategy remain in force for an initial period of four years and be extended, revised and adapted by the European Council as often as necessary, on a recommendation from the Council, following a report by the European Parliament and after consulting the Latin American partners;

65. Calls on the Council to review and assess the Union's action under the future strategy and to inform the European Council and the European Parliament at least once a year on the progress made towards achieving its objectives;

66. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the governments and parliaments of the Member States and of all the countries in Latin America and the Caribbean, the Latin American Parliament, Parlacen, the Andean Parliament and the Mercosur Joint Parliamentary Committee.

12. Arbitrary arrests and the political situation in Laos

B5-0704/2001

European Parliament resolution on the arbitrary arrests and the political situation in Laos

The European Parliament,

— having regard to the Cooperation Agreement between the European Community and the Lao People's Democratic Republic,

— having regard to its resolution of 15 February 2001 on the human rights situation in the Lao People's Democractic Republic [1],

Thursday 15 November 2001

A. having regard to the arrest in Vientiane on 26 October 2001 of the MEP Olivier Dupuis, as well as Silvja Manzi, Bruno Mellano, Massimo Lensi and Nikolai Khramov, members of the Transnational Radical Party, on the grounds of a non-violent demonstration in favour of democracy and reconciliation in Laos, on the second anniversary of the '26 October 1999 Movement', whose principal leaders, Bouavanh Chanmanivong, Khamphouvieng Sisa-At, Thongpaseuth Keuakoun, Seng-Aloun Phengphanh and Keochay, have in the meantime disappeared,

B. whereas Mr Olivier Dupuis and his four companions were imprisoned for fourteen days in particularly harsh conditions,

C. whereas for several days the detainees were refused all contact with diplomatic representatives of the Member States concerned and of Russia and with their lawyers, in defiance of their rights as recognised by the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations of 24 April 1963,

D. whereas the two-year suspended sentences handed down by the Vientiane court to the detainees for 'propaganda against the Lao People's Democratic Republic tending to damage national security and stability' are manifestly contrary to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and to the constitution of the Lao PDR itself,

E. whereas the Cooperation Agreement between the European Community and Laos is based on 'respect for the democratic principles and fundamental human rights established by the Universal Declaration on Human Rights' (Article 1), and whereas failure to respect this condition must be considered a 'case of the material breach of the Agreement' with respect to Article 19 and Annex 1 thereof, implying non-execution of the Agreement by one of the parties,

F. whereas the attitude of the Laotian authorities, not only towards an MEP and four other members of the Transnational Radical Party but also as regards the arrest and disappearance of five leaders of the 26 October 1999 Movement, is a clear and visible case of violation of the democratic principles of the Universal Declaration on Human Rights, and must therefore be considered a case of non-respect of the abovementioned Cooperation Agreement,

G. having regard to the numerous political and diplomatic actions taken by the countries of which the five detainees are citizens, the President of the European Parliament, the Council, the Commission and the High Representative for the CFSP with a view to resolving the situation;

H. deeply concerned at the general political situation in Laos under the ruling single party, which has been in power since 1975, and at the plight of one of the world's poorest populations subsisting without democracy and bereft of the rule of law,

1. Welcomes the release of the MEP Olivier Dupuis and the other four European activists; draws attention to the role of the Italian government, and especially the Italian Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who went to Laos in person and managed to obtain their repatriation, and also stresses the efforts of the representatives of the EU institutions and the governments of the Member States and Russia and their interventions throughout the time these persons were under arrest,

2. Strongly condemns the attitude of the Laotian political and legal authorities towards an MEP and four other Radical activists, whose non-violent demonstration in solidarity with the leaders of the 26 October 1999 Movement was an expression of the rights guaranteed by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and was in the spirit of the demands made by the European Parliament in its abovementioned resolution;

3. Expresses its deep concern over the fate of the leaders of the 26 October 1999 Movement and of all prisoners of conscience, as well as over the failure to respect democratic principles in Laos;

4. Notes that the Laotian authorities appear to be ignoring the relevant clauses of their Cooperation Agreement with the EC, and therefore calls on the Commission and Council to issue a strong protest to the Laotian authorities on the matter and to demand the convening of the joint committee provided for in Article 14 of the Agreement, to examine the following:

(a) the need for full information on the fate of the five student leaders who were arrested on 26 October 1999 and of whom no news has been forthcoming since that date;

(b) the need for an undertaking by the Government of the Lao PDR that it will guarantee respect for the civil and political rights recognised by the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and will accept the demands of the abovementioned resolution, including the repeal of Article 59 of the Laotian penal code, which lays down a prison sentence of one to five years for 'anti-government propaganda';

5. Calls on the Commission, the Council and the Member States to take all possible steps to ensure that the trial of the five Laotian leaders against whom charges have been lodged takes place as soon as possible and on a basis of full respect for international law and for the Constitution of the Lao PDR itself;

6. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States, of Russia and of the Lao People's Democratic Republic.

European Parliament resolution on negotiations within the framework of the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention following the recent anthrax attacks

The European Parliament,

— having regard to its previous resolutions on arms control, non-proliferation and disarmament, and in particular to its resolution of 14 June 2001 on the compliance protocol for the Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention (BTWC) [1],

— having regard to the 1972 UN Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention (BTWC),

— having regard to the Common Position of 17 May 1999 (1999/346/CFSP) [2] adopted by the Council on the basis of Article 15 of the Treaty on European Union relating to progress towards a legally binding Protocol to strengthen compliance with the BTWC,

— having regard to the upcoming fifth review conference of the Convention to be held in Geneva from 19 November to 7 December 2001,

— having regard to the fact that, since 11 September 2001, the US government, in order to strengthen the BTWC, has presented a number of new proposals to the international community, and to the EU in particular, to be negotiated at the Review Conference,

A. extremely concerned by the realistic threat posed by the deliberate use, by state as well as by non-state actors, of biological and toxin weapons on a massive scale against humans, plants and animals,

B. regretting that there is currently no legally binding mechanism to verify compliance with the BTWC,

C. regretting the failure of the States Parties to the BTWC to agree on a compliance protocol before the Fifth Review Conference, following the US withdrawal in July 2001 from negotiations to conclude such a protocol,

[1] 'Texts Adopted', Item 16.

Thursday 15 November 2001

D. whereas a compliance protocol would greatly increase confidence in the international community concerning prohibition of the development, production and stockpiling of biological and toxin weapons,

E. whereas the Commission was given a clear mandate by the Ghent European Council of 21 October 2001 to prepare a programme for improved cooperation in the field of biological warfare and public health,

1. Is greatly concerned by the recent terrorist use of anthrax in the US and elsewhere;

2. Welcomes the change in the US position, as expressed by the US President on 1 November 2001, including the search for effective procedures for addressing BTWC compliance concerns;

3. Urges the States Parties to the BTWC to increase their efforts to negotiate a protocol that addresses the urgent need to add an effective verification regime to the BTWC, capable of adjusting to changing technical capabilities, and calls in particular on the USA to contribute positively to the Ad Hoc Group which was created to contribute to these negotiations and to develop its new proposals in this multilateral framework;

4. Recommends that the States Parties to the BTWC confirm their commitment to ensure, by adopting national measures, the effective fulfilment of their obligations under the Convention, and to take any necessary measures to prohibit and prevent the development, production, stockpiling, acquisition or retention of such weapons within their territory, under their jurisdiction or under their control anywhere;

5. Urges the EU to ensure the fullest coordination of its action against the possible use of biological weapons within the EU;

6. Calls in this respect on the Commission and the Member States to consider the establishment of an EU agency under Commission control, along the lines of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, USA, to coordinate the work of the relevant national agencies in the field of communicable diseases;

7. Urges the Commission and the Member States to re-examine existing legislation and laboratory practices in the field of genetically modified micro-organisms and chemical and biological agents with a view to strengthening precautionary measures aimed at protecting human health and the environment;

8. Underlines the need for the States Parties to the Convention to draw up a set of rules which would require pharmaceutical, chemical, biotechnological and other industries with biotechnological installations which could be misused for the production of biological weapons to establish and apply efficient controls to avoid such misuse;

9. Calls on the UN to intervene quickly whenever there are reports of possible breaches of the 1925 Geneva Biological and Toxin Weapons Convention;

10. Calls on the USA and the countries of the former USSR to provide to all States Parties to the Convention a list and a description of the biological and toxin weapons known to them, with a view to reaching agreement on appropriate prevention and defence measures at a global level;

11. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the Chairman of the BTWC Ad Hoc Group, the Secretary-General of the United Nations, the President of the USA and the governments of the Member States and of the candidate countries.

14. Economic and employment situation in the air transport sector and in the industrial and related services sectors

European Parliament resolution on the economic and employment situation in the air transport sector and in the industrial and related service sectors

The European Parliament,

A. whereas the recent terrorist attacks have had a serious impact on consumer confidence in air travel and, as a result, on the economic condition of the airline industry and related service sectors worldwide,

B. recognising that, even before 11 September 2001, a number of companies had severe structural problems due to either worldwide economic recession, overcapacity or strategic mismanagement,

C. recognising that worldwide passenger traffic volume has decreased due to the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001, particularly on transatlantic services and Middle East services, and recognising also that the overwhelming majority of airlines have had to cancel flights in order to counteract the rapid decrease in passenger numbers,

D. concerned about the fact that the US government is distorting international air traffic through massive subsidies to US air carriers,

E. concerned that airlines will cancel or postpone their orders for new aircraft, thus putting at risk jobs in Europe's aerospace industry,

F. having regard to the fact that over 180 000 jobs in the aviation sector worldwide have already been lost since 11 September 2001 and massive losses are also being incurred in the European aviation sector,

G. concerned about the dramatic decline in tourist traffic, especially from the USA and the Far East to Europe, with its far-reaching consequences for the whole tourism industry,

H. recognising that there is a requirement for further consolidation and restructuring of the European aviation industry within the framework of an intermodal approach,

1. Is of the opinion that airlines have to be substantially compensated for the closure of US airspace during the first four days and the closure of US airports for a further three days after the terrorist attacks;

2. Urges the Member States to consider all necessary measures available to help the aviation industry find a solution regarding withdrawn insurance cover, as the industry itself cannot be blamed for the risk of war and terrorism; demands that national governments assume responsibility for additional security costs;

3. Urges the Commission to work on proposals which would make it possible for the European aviation industry to withstand the massive help given by the US government to US airlines and would ensure that the European aviation industry receives equal treatment, as far as possible, in accordance with EU law, and also asks the Commission to investigate the consistency of the USD 15 billion aid package with international trade rules;

Thursday 15 November 2001

4. Urges the Commission to contribute to the consolidation of the airline sector in Europe, using the Community competition rules on a case-by-case basis, so that a new structure can be built up for European airlines;

5. Asks the Commission to watch developments on the labour market in the air industry very closely so that, if necessary, it can present effective proposals for the safeguarding or creation of jobs;

6. Supports the social partners' efforts to avoid more job losses and welcomes their willingness to work together in trying to stabilise the industry at this time; also supports the European social partners' proposal for creating an ad hoc social group to identify and promote measures to alleviate the social consequences of the current crisis;

7. Urges the Commission, the Member States and the international community to work on corresponding proposals to restore public confidence in both the security and the safety of the aviation sector;

8. Urges the EU and the Member States to back public campaigns to support the tourism industry;

9. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Commission, the Council, the governments of the Member States and of the candidate countries.

15. Accident in the Gotthard Tunnel

European Parliament resolution on the Gotthard Tunnel disaster

The European Parliament,

— having regard to the tragic accident in the Gotthard tunnel in Switzerland on 24 October 2001,

A. deeply shocked by the disaster in the Gotthard tunnel, hitherto regarded as the safest tunnel in Europe, which has made new measures to improve safety in tunnels an even more urgent priority,

B. whereas the accident brought to light legal and social irregularities which could pose a threat to road safety,

C. having regard to the need to reinforce safety conditions for road transport and to promote rail and piggy-back transport,

D. aware of the concerns of the inhabitants of the transalpine region as regards road safety and the environmental impact of road transport,

E. whereas the Gotthard tunnel provided road mobility for persons and goods between Italy and the rest of Europe, and whereas in 1999 alone it carried five times more heavy goods vehicles than the other three main Swiss routes put together,

1. Sends its most sincere condolences to the families of the victims and pays tribute to the courage of the rescue workers;

2. Calls for an early conclusion to the in-depth inquiry that is already under way, so that as much light as possible is shed on the conditions surrounding the accident, and the responsibility for them; calls for those responsible to be severely punished;

3. Reaffirms the necessity to make safety the top priority in transport policy, and calls on the Commission, the Council and the Member States, as well as on Switzerland, to take action to achieve this, learning everything they can from the Gotthard and Mont Blanc tragedies;

4. Takes the view that the measures taken thus far to ensure safety of road transport are insufficient, particularly in certain tunnels, and notes that, unfortunately, all too often not even minimum standards are adhered to;

5. Calls for priority to be given to rail transport of freight, particularly in mountainous and hazardous areas; reaffirms the urgent need to transfer transalpine traffic from the roads to the railways;

6. Calls on the Commission to present at the earliest opportunity the new directive that has already been announced on the harmonisation of minimum safety standards for road and rail tunnels, and undertakes to cooperate fully with the Council and Commission to ensure its rapid adoption and implementation; calls on the Commission to give serious consideration to the recent report by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development, which proposes banding of tunnels according to their level of safety for the transportation of dangerous substances;

7. Considers that the accident in the Gotthard tunnel and the ensuing traffic congestion have again underlined the need for the development of an integrated transport policy for the entire Alpine region; recalls its request of 5 September 2001 for the Commission to initiate a plan of action in this area;

8. Calls for the implementation of specific and more restrictive measures for vehicles transporting hazardous, or potentially hazardous, materials;

9. Takes the view that strict controls on maximum driving times are another way of achieving road safety; calls on the Council and Commission to bring the conciliation on working time to a prompt and positive conclusion, and asks the Member States for rapid implementation and control;

10. Considers that the circumstances surrounding the Gotthard accident have underlined the importance of the Commission's proposal to establish a uniform driver attestation; calls on Member States to make every effort to ensure that, once adopted, the proposed regulation is properly enforced, in order to ensure a level playing field throughout the single market in heavy goods transport in terms of employment of drivers of heavy goods vehicles;

11. Supports the approach of sustainable freight transport, as provided for in the Protocol on the Implementation of the Alpine Convention in the field of Transport ('Transport Protocol') and the agreement between Switzerland and the EU, underlining that this is a good basis for the development of an environmentally sustainable transport policy throughout the sensitive transalpine area;

12. Calls on the Commission and the Member States to give priority to measures ensuring safety in all tunnels which link the north and the south of Europe (Alps and Pyrenees) with the aim of re-establishing mobility of persons and goods as soon as possible;

13. Calls on the Commission and the Council to present without delay an efficient and integrated spatial planning proposal for Europe, linked with the development of the European Transport Networks and with regional and environmental policy;

14. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States and of Switzerland.

16. Human rights: Massacre of 200 people in Nigeria

European Parliament resolution the human rights situation in Nigeria

The European Parliament,

— having regard to its resolution of 15 February 2001 on human rights in Nigeria [1],

— having regard to the meeting on 5 November 2001 between Nigeria's President Olusegun Obasanjo and the Governors of the Benue, Taraba, Nassarawa and Plateau States,

Thursday 15 November 2001

— having regard to the meeting held in Abuja on 11 November 2001 between Nigeria's President Olusegun Obasanjo and political, traditional and opinion leaders from the Benue, Taraba, Nassarawa and Plateau States,

— having regard to efforts by civil society groups and, in particular, the Arewa Consultative Forum (ACF) to broker peace between the warring Tiv and Jukun communities in Benue and Taraba States at a meeting on 15 November 2001,

— having regard to the resolution on West Africa adopted by the ACP-EU Assembly on 1 November 2001 in Brussels,

A. whereas, between 22 and 24 October 2001, Nigerian soldiers drove into seven villages in Benue, a state in central Nigeria, and for three days ran amok, blowing up houses, burning shops and killing over 200 civilians,

B. whereas this tragic loss of human life was in apparent retaliation for the abduction and killing of 19 Nigerian soldiers by a Tiv militia on 10 October 2001,

C. whereas, among the Tivs, there is a strong suspicion that elements in the military responsible for the attacks between 22 and 24 October 2001 were backing the Jukuns,

D. whereas Benue state legislators described the attacks as a 'gruesome act of ethnic cleansing against the Tivs',

E. whereas thousands of Nigerians are now internally displaced and are receiving humanitarian assistance in refugee camps from the Nigerian Red Cross and the UK Department for International Development,

F. whereas demonstrations against the massacres have led to a further 13 deaths,

G. whereas similar incidents took place in the town of Odi in November 1999 without any action being taken against those involved,

H. whereas Nigeria — Africa's most populous country with more than 250 ethnic groups — has been riven by ethnic, religious and political tensions which have killed thousands since the 1999 elections that ended 15 years of military rule and repression,

I. whereas years of military dictatorship have allowed a feeling of impunity to develop within the federal army, despite remarkable efforts made by the new democratically elected government for national cohesion,

J. whereas on 12 November 2001 the Nigerian Government set up a Judicial Commission of Inquiry to investigate ethnic conflict between Jukuns and Tivs in the central Benue State,

K. whereas on 31 October 2001 President Olusegun Obasanjo of Nigeria established a 14-member National Security Commission which is mandated to investigate causes of conflict in the country and recommend solutions within 90 days,

L. whereas neither the European Union nor the United Nations have taken note in resolutions of this increase in ethnic conflict within Nigeria despite reports of more violence in the past few days,

M. whereas the 'Sharia' laws applied by fundamentalists in a growing number of departments of Nigeria have very serious consequences for civil liberties and human rights and for the peace between different ethnic groups,

N. deeply concerned by the northern Nigerian Islamic court decision that sentenced a woman to death by stoning after finding her guilty of adultery, while the male adulterer was acquitted,

1. Condemns the indiscriminate killing of civilians in Benue by elements of the Nigerian army and deplores the human suffering caused by ongoing conflicts in this country;

2. Calls on the Nigerian authorities to conduct a rapid, impartial and effective investigation into these incidents and to restore international confidence in Nigeria's democracy and prevent further massacres by the military;

3. Notes that Nigeria's Vice-President Atiku Abubakar described the massacre in Benue as 'most reprehensible and most regrettable' and that President Olusegun Obasanjo warned 'these disturbances have threatened the core values that bind us together as a civilised nation';

4. Draws attention to President Olusegun Obasanjo's move to establish a 14-member National Security Commission to investigate the causes of the continued ethnic and religious conflicts in Nigeria and awaits the Commission's findings;

5. Notes the Nigerian Lower Chamber's vote to investigate the massacre of hundreds of civilians and its demand for a judicial inquiry;

6. Urges the Nigerian Government to restore a climate of confidence between the communities, in accordance with the country's constitution, and to support efforts by civil society and groups like the ACF to broker peace between the warring Tiv and Jukun communities;

7. Condemns all forms of religious intolerance and, in particular, the setting on fire of several mosques, expresses its concern that fundamentalist interpretation and implementation of the Sharia Law in some Nigerian states may be contrary to respect for basic human rights and calls on the Federal Government of Nigeria to ensure full respect for the constitution and the rule of law;

8. Condemns in particular the northern Nigerian Islamic court's selective justice that sentenced Ms Safiya Hussaini-Tungar-Tudu to death by stoning after finding her guilty of adultery, while the male adulterer was acquitted;

9. Urges the Commission and Member States to provide humanitarian assistance to the internally displaced people living in Nigeria's refugee camps;

10. Considers that the Nigerian army is ill-suited to restoring civil order and urges the Commission and Member States to help provide technical assistance to train the Nigerian police to cope with communal conflict and enable it to deal with these specific conflicts with due respect for the rule of law;

11. Calls on the European Union to improve the dialogue with Nigeria, with a view to strengthening the existing processes in Nigeria towards the consolidation of democracy, social and economic justice and respect for human rights and religious freedoms;

12. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the Co-Presidents of the ACP-EU Joint Parliamentary Assembly, the African Union, and the government and parliament of Nigeria.

17. Disasters: Effects of hurricane 'Michelle' in Nicaragua, Cuba and Honduras

European Parliament resolution on the impact of Hurricane 'Michelle' on Central America

The European Parliament,

— having regard to its previous resolutions on the natural disasters that have hit Central America, and in particular its resolution of 19 November 1998 on the situation in Central America and action by the European Union [1],

— having regard to Regional Programme for the Reconstruction of Central America,

Thursday 15 November 2001

A. mindful of the havoc wrought by Hurricane 'Michelle' as it swept through Honduras, Nicaragua and Cuba, leaving people dead, missing or displaced and causing extensive material damage,

B. whereas these three particularly poor countries are now confronted with an emergency as regards hygiene, food and access to drinking water and to basic services such as hospitals and schools for their populations,

C. whereas, in spite of this being the worst disaster to hit Cuba in 50 years, the authorities there have been able to limit the hurricane's impact by means of preventive measures and a well-implemented emergency plan,

D. whereas the coincidental timing of a visit by a European Parliament delegation to Honduras and Nicaragua has made it possible to assess the hurricane's impact there at first hand,

E. whereas Hurricane 'Iris' swept through neighbouring Belize on 8 October 2001, causing further devastation in that area,

1. Expresses its solidarity with the families of the victims and those affected by this disaster, and shares the pain felt by the peoples of Honduras, Nicaragua and Cuba;

2. Welcomes the Commission's rapid response in providing assistance to these countries through its humanitarian aid office (ECHO);

3. Calls on the Commission to assess the damage in Honduras and Nicaragua, to take that damage into account in implementing the Regional Programme for the Reconstruction of Central America, and to increase the relevant budgetary allocations accordingly;

4. Regrets the fact that the lack of a cooperation agreement with Cuba prevents the European Union from helping to alleviate the impact of this disaster there through anything other than humanitarian aid; in this regard reiterates its belief in the need for a cooperation agreement with Cuba that is compatible with the European Union doctrine on cooperation, respect for human rights and democracy;

5. Welcomes the gesture made by the United States Government in offering humanitarian aid, and urges it to accede to Cuba's request to be allowed to purchase supplies and medicines from the United States for the humanitarian disaster relief effort, in spite of the existing embargo;

6. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, Parlacen and the presidents and legislative bodies of the republics of Honduras, Nicaragua and Cuba.

18. Disasters: Floods in Algeria

European Parliament resolution on the floods in Algeria

The European Parliament,

— having regard to the Barcelona Declaration,

A. mindful of the disastrous rainstorms which have struck Algeria in the past few days, leaving more than 500 people dead and many others injured and causing major damage to infrastructure and housing, notably in and around the capital,

B. deeply shocked by the high number of victims these floods have claimed,

C. welcoming the rapid response given by the Commission through its Humanitarian Aid Office (ECHO), which sent a team to assess the damage on the ground, and the immediate provision of € 758 800 to meet the urgent needs of the victims,

D. bearing in mind the Algerian authorities' appeal for international solidarity,

1. Wishes to express its deep sorrow to the victims' families and to the entire Algerian people and its representatives in view of the calamity which has befallen them, and pays tribute to the courage shown by the rescue workers;

2. Asks the Commission to examine every possibility for extending special emergency aid to Algeria to help the victims of this disaster, which is without precedent in Algeria and is yet further aggravating the already precarious situation of thousands of Algerian citizens, priority being given to the poorest families who have been the worst affected;

3. Calls on the Commission to make available to the Algerian government a team of technical experts to assess and quantify the damage caused, in order to identify what reconstruction measures are necessary in terms of urban infrastructure and the organisation of services and in other spheres, and invites the Commission and the Member States to provide aid within the framework of the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership to help rebuild homes and repair infrastructure;

4. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the governments and parliaments of the Member States and of the candidate countries, the Algerian National People's Assembly and the government of Algeria.

European Parliament resolution on small arms

The European Parliament,

— having regard to its resolutions of 19 January 1995 ([1]), 15 January 1998 ([2]), 14 May 1998 ([3]), 7 October 1999 ([4]), 5 October 2000 ([5]) and 15 March 2001 ([6]) on an EU Code of Conduct on the export or transfer of arms and the resolution adopted by the ACP-EU Joint Assembly on 21 April 1998,

— having regard to the Joint Action adopted by the Council on the European Union's contribution to combating the destabilising accumulation and spread of small arms and light weapons,

A. affirming the urgent need for more effective regulation of legal and illicit arms transfers in the wake of the tragic events of 11 September 2001, in order to cut off lines of supply to terrorist organisations and to tightly control transfers to governments that abuse human rights and regions of conflict and instability,

B. welcoming the UN Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects as an important first step in the international effort to reduce the immense human suffering caused by the proliferation and misuse of small arms and light weapons,

C. convinced that early and effective action by all States to implement the Programme of Action to Prevent, Combat and Eradicate the Illicit Trade in Small Arms and Light Weapons in All Its Aspects will result in significant progress towards this end,

D. noting with satisfaction the commitment contained in the Programme of Action for all States to assess applications for export authorizations according to strict national regulations and procedures that cover all small arms and light weapons and are consistent with States' existing responsibilities under relevant international law; welcoming the commitment to strengthen agreed norms or measures at the global, regional or national levels,

E. concerned that in some areas the Programme of Action does not provide for all of the international mechanisms necessary to address all aspects of the problem, particularly in the areas of arms brokering and international arms transfers and noting further, in this context, the need to establish effective controls on the transfer and use of all categories of conventional weaponry,

F. gravely concerned with the lack of effective national and international controls on arms transfers and on arms brokering, arms financiers and transporters and the inadequacy of national and regional efforts to tackle this global issue,

1. Calls on the Presidency-in-Office of the Council to appoint a Contact Group of States to pave the way for negotiations on a legally binding international instrument regulating the activities of arms brokering;

2. Calls on all States to start early negotiations on a legally binding international instrument on arms brokering and conclude such negotiations prior to the 2006 conference;

3. Urges Member States and Associated States to adopt legislation requiring registration and licensing of arms brokers, including manufacturing, importing, exporting, transferring, and facilitating transfers by mediating financing, or arranging financial transactions, transportation, and freight forwarding between a supplier and a recipient of arms;

4. Calls on Member States and Associated States to prosecute violators of such requirements, as well as violators of UN, EU and other regional and national arms embargoes, and include such violations among extraditable offences in the modified extradition treaties;

5. Encourages Member States and Associated States to compile and publish a list of convicted violators and to exchange information with other governments and international law enforcement agencies about potential or suspected illicit brokering activities, to exchange information, and provide mutual legal assistance to authorities involved in the criminal investigations of, or proceedings against, illicit brokering activities;

6. Calls on Member States to bring all national and regional control systems for the export of armaments into line with States' existing responsibilities under international law, and to take steps towards the negotiation of a legally binding instrument setting out norms and procedures for the international transfer of armaments, based on existing responsibilities under international law;

7. Requests the Presidency-in-Office of the Council to take immediate steps to open discussions with interested States on the agreement of a legally binding convention on international arms transfers and to keep the Parliament informed about progress made in this area;

	Amendment 3 Recital –1b (new)
	(–1b) The Commission adopted the Communication Towards a Barrier-free Europe for People with Disabilities in which it commits itself to developing and supporting a comprehensive and integrated strategy to tackle barriers that unnecessarily restrict access for disabled people to economic and social activities. The European Parliament on 4 April 2001 adopted a resolution on this Communication.
	Amendment 4 Recital –1c (new)
	(–1c) The abovementioned resolution calls on the Commission to submit a proposal for a directive based on Article 13 of the Treaty and covering all the EU's fields of jurisdiction, the aim of which should be equal treatment for people with disabilities, whilst recognising their individuality and their right to be different; this proposal should be submitted in the course of the 2003 European Year at the latest.
