BY THE COMMISSIONAMENDMENTS
BY PARLIAMENT

Amendment 2

RECITAL 6

(6) Road vehicles are increasingly reliant upon catalytic after-treatment devices to attain the emissions limits mandated in Council Directive 70/220/EEC relating to measures to be taken against air pollution by gases from positive-ignition engines of motor vehicles and Council Directive 88/77/EEC relating to the measures to be taken against the emission of gaseous pollutants from diesel engines for use in vehicles. Accordingly a reduction in the sulphur content of petrol and diesel is likely to have a larger impact on exhaust emissions than changes to the other fuel parameters;

(6) Road vehicles are increasingly reliant upon catalytic after-treatment devices to attain the emission limits mandated in Council Directive 70/220/EEC, as amended, relating to measures to be taken against air pollution by emissions from motor vehicles and Council Directive 88/77/EEC relating to the measures to be taken against the emission of gaseous pollutants from diesel engines for use in vehicles. Accordingly a reduction in the sulphur content of petrol and diesel is likely to have a larger impact on exhaust emissions than changes to the other fuel parameters;

Amendment 3

RECITAL 6a (new)

(6a) Directive 98/70/EC does not cover non-road mobile machinery fuels, yet fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) will become necessary in order to enable non-road engine technology to develop, as is the case with road fuels and vehicles;

Amendment 4

RECITAL 7

(7) The introduction of lower sulphur fuels will improve the fuel efficiency of new, emerging vehicle technologies and lead to significant reductions in emissions of conventional air pollutants when used in existing vehicles. These benefits must be balanced against the increased emissions of CO<sub>2</sub> associated with the production of zero sulphur petrol and diesel;

(7) The introduction of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) will enable the fuel efficiency improvements attainable with new, emerging vehicle and non-road mobile machinery technologies to be achieved and will lead to significant reductions in emissions of conventional air pollutants when used in existing vehicles. Modern non-road diesel engines are as sophisticated as automotive engines. This means that, in addition to the sulphur content, cetane number and other fuel parameters are important for engine operation and emissions. The benefits will compensate for the increased emissions of CO<sub>2</sub> associated with the production of lower sulphur petrol and diesel;

RECITAL 7a (new)

(7a) In order to optimise the health and environmental benefits which stem from this Directive, fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) should be introduced steadily onto the market at a rate which is proportionate to sales of new-technology vehicles. Provision should therefore be made for the necessary exceptions, which depend on the varying socio-economic, climatic and environmental circumstances of each Member State;

TEXT PROPOSED
BY THE COMMISSIONAMENDMENTS

RECITAL 8

(8) It is therefore appropriate to lay down measures ensuring the introduction and availability of zero sulphur fuels. In this regard fiscal incentives have been shown to be effective in promoting the introduction of higher quality fuels according to national needs and priorities;

(8) It is therefore appropriate to lay down measures ensuring the introduction and availability of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm). In this regard fiscal incentives have been shown to be effective in promoting the early introduction of higher quality fuels according to national needs and priorities and in shortening the transition period where two different qualities are distributed in the market;

The words 'zero sulphur fuels' to be replaced by 'fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm)' throughout the text.

Amendment 7

RECITAL 9

(9) The availability of zero sulphur fuels resulting from this Directive, will provide a basis for the automobile manufacturers to make significant additional commitments towards the attainment of the Community's target of 120 g/km for the average CO<sub>2</sub> emissions of the new car fleet when the current environmental commitments with the automobile manufacturers are reviewed in 2003;

(9) The widespread availability of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) resulting from this Directive will provide a basis for the automobile manufacturers to make significant additional progress towards improving the fuel efficiency of new vehicles. The potential contribution of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) towards the attainment of the Community's target of 120 g/km for the average CO<sub>2</sub> emissions of the new car fleet will be assessed when the current environmental commitments with the automobile manufacturers are reviewed in 2003;

Amendment 8

RECITAL 10

(10) It is necessary to ensure that sufficient quantities of zero sulphur petrol and diesel fuels are available from 1 January 2005 on a balanced geographic basis in order to permit the free circulation of new vehicles requiring these fuels whilst ensuring that CO<sub>2</sub> emissions reductions from new vehicles outweigh those additional emissions associated with the production of zero sulphur fuels;

(10) It is necessary to ensure that sufficient quantities of all grades of petrol and diesel fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) are available at the latest from 1 January 2005 on a balanced geographic basis in order to permit the free circulation of new vehicles requiring these fuels. The reductions in emissions of conventional pollutants and CO<sub>2</sub> attainable with these fuels will outweigh those additional emissions associated with the production of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm);

Amendment 9

RECITAL 10a (new)

(10a) Since, in certain Member States, unleaded Regular grade petrol has a not insignificant market share, those Member States should be authorised, upon application to the Commission, to continue to market such fuel even after 1 January 2005;

RECITAL 10b (new)

(10b) The use by Member States of differentiated excise taxation has proved to be instrumental in the introduction of more advanced fuels in line with national priorities, capacity and requirements, and should therefore be encouraged;

Amendment 11
RECITAL 11

(11) The complete penetration of zero sulphur fuels should be provided for from 1 January 2011 in order to allow the fuel manufacturing industry enough time to make the necessary investments to adapt its production plans. In addition, the full introduction of zero sulphur fuels from 2011 will reduce emissions of conventional pollutants from the existing fleet of vehicles leading to an improvement in air quality whilst ensuring that there is no overall increase in greenhouse gas emissions;

(11) The complete penetration of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) should be provided for from 1 January 2008. This should allow the oil industry enough time to make the necessary investments to adapt its production plans. In addition, the full introduction of fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) from 2008 will minimise the risk of misfuelling and will reduce emissions of conventional pollutants from the existing fleet of vehicles leading to an improvement in air quality whilst ensuring that there is no overall increase in greenhouse gas emissions;

Amendment 12
RECITAL 12a (new)

(12a) In order to simplify market distribution and diesel infrastructure across the European Union, new non-road fuel specifications should apply from 1 January 2005;

Amendment 13
RECITAL 13

(13) It is appropriate to provide for a uniform system of fuel quality monitoring and reporting in order to assess compliance with the mandated environmental fuel quality specifications;

(13) It is appropriate to provide for a uniform system of fuel quality monitoring and reporting in order to assess compliance with the mandated environmental fuel quality specifications. During the phase-in period (until 2008), the monitoring system should assess whether fuels with a maximum sulphur content of 10 mg/kg (ppm) are available on a balanced geographic basis;

Amendment 44
RECITAL 15a (new)

(15a) Limit values on lubricity, deposit-forming tendency, metallic additives, phosphorus and silicon in petrol help to keep sophisticated emission-control equipment in optimum condition, thus maintaining low emissions over the lifetime of a vehicle;

Amendment 10

Recital 10

(10) *It is necessary that the definition of the constituent elements of terrorism be common in all Member States, including those offences referred to terrorist groups. ## Amendment 11

Recital 10a (new)

(10a) Terrorist groups are at the heart of terrorist offences. The constituent elements of the criminal offences and the penalties applicable to terrorist groups should be defined. The number and seriousness of terrorist acts depend on the financial resources available to terrorists. It is essential to draw up a list, which should be periodically updated, containing the names of terrorist groups and organisations in order to take measures to prevent the financing of terrorists or their organisations and groups.

Amendment 117

Recital 10b (new)

(10b) in the fight against terrorism it is necessary to combat isolated actions and organisations which support or collaborate with a terrorist group by providing information or material means, including by financing its activities, and recruiting individuals for participation in the activities of a terrorist group. On the other hand, effectively combating terrorism requires tackling the sources of funding. In this context, it is indispensable to consider extortion intended to contribute to the carrying out of terrorist offences, as well as the laundering of the proceeds of terrorist offences or of other offences committed within the framework of a terrorist group.

- B. whereas this preparation includes further necessary changes to the Union's Institutions and their inter-relationships,
- C. whereas the final transition to the euro on 1 January 2002, for the euro-zone Member States, is also taking place against the background of a global economic slowdown,

On the future of the European Union

1. Welcomes the Council decision under the Belgian Presidency to establish the Convention in accordance with the European Parliament's request to prepare for institutional reform, and refers to its above-mentioned resolution of 29 November 2001;

On Afghanistan

2. Welcomes the recent developments on the ground in Afghanistan in the fight against terrorism and the Taliban regime and considers that it remains indispensable to attain the objective of destroying the al-Qa'ida terrorist network and capturing its leaders;
3. Considers it essential that a transitional government, made up of representatives of all Afghan groupings, explicitly including local civil organisations, in particular women's organisations, and respecting human rights and international humanitarian law, be constituted in Afghanistan; welcomes the meeting in Bonn under the aegis of the United Nations;
4. Demands that full support be given to the United Nations in its search for solutions and necessary means;

Thursday 29 November 2001

5. Welcomes the humanitarian aid by ECHO and calls on the Council to immediately provide, in cooperation with the UN agencies, necessary humanitarian aid to populations in Afghanistan as well as to the thousands of refugees in neighbouring countries, and also to make proposals for the undertaking of a plan for the reconstruction of the country according to the guidelines defined by the Ghent European Council; calls on the Council, acting on a proposal by the Commission, to propose adequate appropriations in the budget for 2002;

6. Express its compassion to the families of all those who have lost their lives in Afghanistan and in particular to the families of the journalists, whose work is a courageous testimony to the situation on the ground;

On the Middle East

7. Reaffirms its appeal to Israelis and Palestinians to immediately reopen negotiations on the basis of all the agreements previously signed by both parties; in this respect, considers indispensable the application of the recommendations of the Mitchell report, without any delay or conditions;

8. Welcomes the recent proposals by US President Bush and Secretary of State Powell for a settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and considers that the best conditions now exist for a joint EU-US initiative in the region;

9. Proposes that the European Council, in cooperation with the USA, launch a fresh initiative for the establishment of a viable Palestinian state while fully respecting the security and integrity of Israel;

10. Regrets strongly declarations made by Israeli Prime Minister Sharon on the occasion of the visit by the EU Troika in the region and calls on the Council and the Commission to pursue their initiatives in the political and diplomatic fields to restart the peace process according to the principles of the Madrid Conference;

11. Considers it essential to continue to provide assistance to Palestinian populations affected by an extremely serious economic and social situation;

On the Balkans

12. Welcomes the peaceful and orderly elections in Kosovo and in particular the participation of all groups of the population; calls on Ibrahim Rugova and his Democratic League of Kosovo to seek the broadest possible coalition representing the interests of all sections of the Kosovo population;

13. Calls on the Commission, Council and Member States to maintain their complete commitment in the Balkans, including via the Stability Pact, in order to guarantee a long-term peaceful development and an end to the continuing tensions between the different groups within the population; encourages all Balkan countries to foster cooperation in the region as a guarantee of positive economic, political and social development of the whole of the Balkans;

14. Welcomes the constitutional changes adopted by the Macedonian parliament giving ethnic Albanians more rights;

Thursday 29 November 2001

On the ESDP

15. Welcomes the efforts made by the Member States at the Capabilities Improvement Conference in addressing shortfalls in defence capabilities and in reassessing the European Union's Security and Defence Policy after the attacks of 11 September 2001 on the USA;

16. Stresses that, for the ESDP to become truly operational, European operations must include the possible use of NATO assets; insists that the European Council settle the operation and financing of the Rapid Reaction Force as well as questions of democratic accountability so that the Union can contribute more effectively to the prevention of conflict;

On enlargement

17. Welcomes the optimistic tone of the Commission's annual progress reports on candidate countries, which indicate that up to ten accession candidates could complete their negotiations by the end of 2002, but stresses that in these countries huge efforts still have to be made, notably with regard to the implementation of the acquis communautaire;

18. In this context, supports the Commission's proposal to make available more resources for an 'action plan' to develop the administrative and legal capacity of candidate countries and asks the Commission to report to Parliament on the implementation of the 'action plan' before the 2002 spring European Council meeting;

19. Rejects any modification of the conclusions of the Helsinki European Council and the Copenhagen criteria as regards the evaluation of the candidate countries which will be carried out on the basis of merit and in line with the principle of differentiation;

20. Reaffirms its commitment to ensuring that no country should be able to hold the negotiations hostage, and calls on the European Council to join it in condemning recent statements by Turkish ministers that Turkey may annex the occupied north of the island if Cyprus accedes to the Union before a political settlement is reached; welcomes in this respect the future meeting between the President of Cyprus and the leader of the Turkish community;

21. Reiterates that further improvements need to be made by the candidate countries as regards the establishment of, and respect for, democratic, human and minority rights, especially in the case of the Roma; believes, however, that a coherent policy for the democratic participation of the Roma in the European integration process has to be launched not only at the national, but also at the EU level; calls in this respect on the Council and the Commission to enter into a structured dialogue with Roma communities and to provide the necessary administrative resources for the establishment in the Commission of a task-force for the Roma;

On social and economic matters

22. Calls upon the European Council from now on to include the economic situation as a regular agenda item in order that, on the basis of the Stability and Growth Pact, economic policy-making in the European Union becomes better coordinated, and more united in resisting the synchronised global slow-down; stresses the importance of also recording progress on the tax package;

Thursday 29 November 2001

23. Given the importance of the 10-year reform programme agreed in the spring of 2000 in Lisbon, calls on the Laeken European Council to see to it that the second spring review meeting, in Barcelona, is well prepared; in particular, the European Council is asked to concentrate on ensuring that the Council works in such a way that the various Council formations respect the priorities and deadlines for structural reforms laid down;

24. Considers that social dialogue should be fostered and strengthened as a key factor in meeting the social and labour market policy challenges facing Europe, but also as a key factor in the macro-economic dialogue to develop more positive interaction between economic, social and employment policies; expects the social partners to be involved on a formal basis in the preparation of the Spring Summit;

25. Calls on the Council to endorse the social exclusion indicators agreed by the Social Protection Committee and to agree on an open method of coordination in the field of pensions which safeguards sustainable and universal pension schemes, based on the concept of solidarity and social cohesion;

26. Strongly supports the Presidency's efforts towards an active and socially oriented EU approach to restructuring and calls on the Council to give the Commission a mandate to devise a more holistic and proactive approach to industrial change;

27. Stresses the importance of a successful Laeken European Council as a way of instilling confidence in the European public in the use of euro notes and coins from 1 January 2002, which requires the public to be fully informed on the changeover;

28. Calls on the Council to take concrete action in accordance with the overwhelming opinion of the European Parliament as expressed in its resolution of 13 November 2001 <sup>(1)</sup>, concerning 'support vis-à-vis' the Commission [for] its proposal for a framework directive on the objectives and organisational arrangements of services of general interest based on Article 95 of the EC Treaty; this directive should create a legal framework which guarantees the availability of services of general interest to the public;

29. Welcomes the launch of a new round of comprehensive trade negotiations at the Fourth WTO Ministerial Conference in Doha, which will help promote confidence in the world economy; calls on the European Council to lend support to the establishment of a WTO parliamentary body, as called for by parliamentarians present at Doha;

On justice and home affairs

30. Asks the Council and the Member States to reach an agreement on the Framework Decisions on combating terrorism and the European arrest warrant in time for the Laeken European Council, taking into account Parliament's position on both legislative acts, and recalls the importance of these Framework Decisions in the context of achieving a European area of freedom, security and justice;

Thursday 29 November 2001

31. Considers that the Commission's scoreboard and the report presented by the Presidency show the lack of progress made in the AFSJ and that the mid-term Treaty objectives and timetable were not met, due mainly to the unanimity requirement in the Council and to the lack of political commitment of Member States;

32. Supports the establishment of the International Criminal Court and invites all States to ratify its Statute;

*

33. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the European Council, the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States.

19. Future of the European Union

A5-0368/2001

European Parliament resolution on the constitutional process and the future of the Union (2001/2180(INI))

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the treaty signed in Nice on 26 February 2001 and in particular Declaration No 23 on the future of the Union,
  - having regard to the communication from the Commission on certain arrangements for the debate on the future of the European Union (COM(2001) 178),
  - having regard to the report on the future of the Union presented to the Göteborg European Council by the Swedish Presidency,
  - having regard to its resolution of 31 May 2001 on the Treaty of Nice and the future of the European Union <sup>(1)</sup>,
  - having regard to its resolution of 25 October 2000 on the constitutionalisation of the Treaties <sup>(2)</sup>,
  - having regard to the report from the European Council on the progress achieved by the European Union in 2000,
  - having regard to the motion for a resolution tabled by Richard Corbett on the High Representative at the Commission (B5-0680/2000),
  - having regard to Rule 163 of its Rules of Procedure,
  - having regard to the report of the Committee on Constitutional Affairs and the opinions of the Committee on Economic and Monetary Affairs and the Committee on Legal Affairs and the Internal Market (A5-0368/2001),
- A. having regard to Declaration No 23 annexed to the Treaty of Nice, which provides for reform of the Treaties in 2004 preceded by a new process of preparation that is open and public,
- B. whereas the public debate that has taken place throughout 2001 has revealed a very broad consensus in support of a new method of reform of the Treaties based on the work of a Convention which would prepare the IGC,

Thursday 29 November 2001

- C. whereas dialogue with citizens has been inadequate hitherto and must therefore be intensified and extended throughout the process of reform of the Treaties,
- D. having regard to the hearing held in Brussels on 10/11 July 2001, in which the parliaments of the Member States and the candidate countries participated,
- E. whereas, in the light of recent world events, the challenges relating to external and internal security have resurfaced as an urgent issue on the Union's agenda,
- F. having regard to its opinion on the Treaty of Nice (which this resolution follows up and builds upon), the weak points of which are indicative of the current drift towards intergovernmental methods and the consequent weakening of the Community method,
- G. whereas European citizens desire, above all, that the policies and procedures adopted to determine the future course of the Union will make the Union more democratic, more effective, more transparent, more vigorous and more responsive to social issues,
- H. whereas one of the aims of the forthcoming reform must be to ensure that the general public fully embraces the process of European integration, for which purpose it needs to understand clearly who does what in the European Union, what the latter is required to do and how it should set about it,
- I. whereas, in all instances where the new Constitutional Treaty of the Union refers to physical persons, both the feminine and masculine genders will be used (principle of gender neutrality), and this principle should therefore apply to this resolution,

Future challenges facing Europe

1. Reiterates its commitment to a European Union which fulfils its fundamental role as a union of peoples and states and provides a stable and durable response to the requirements of democracy, legitimacy, transparency and effectiveness, which are essential if there is to be further progress in European integration, particularly with a view to enlargement, whilst in no event allowing the democratic nature of the Union to be sacrificed for the sake of effectiveness; considers that the aim of the 2003 Intergovernmental Conference must be a Constitution for the European Union;
2. Points out that the list of four topics in Declaration No 23 annexed to the Treaty of Nice is not exhaustive; considers, therefore, that the scope of the forthcoming reform and, consequently, the topics selected for discussion by the Convention must be based on a rigorous in-depth analysis of the strengths and weaknesses of the Union and the role it will have to play in the 21st century;
3. Considers that besides the four topics in Declaration No 23, which will be addressed in specific resolutions, political, economic and social progress, security and well-being for Europe's citizens and peoples and the affirmation of the Union's role in the world require:
  - (a) the establishment of a foreign, security and defence policy which incorporates the principles and the general guidelines of the CFSP and common defence and whose aims should include the fight against terrorism;
  - (b) the incorporation of the CFSP into the Community pillar, with all the provisions relating to the various aspects of foreign policy to be brought together within a single chapter;
  - (c) the recognition of the legal personality of the Union;

Thursday 29 November 2001

- (d) the consolidation, within the Treaty, of fundamental rights, citizens' rights and all other provisions relating directly or indirectly to action taken by the European institutions for the benefit of individuals in their capacity as holders of a fundamental right;
  - (e) the elimination of the lack of transparency that characterises the work of the European Central Bank at present and the establishment of a well-balanced economic and monetary system resulting from the consolidation of economic and social cohesion policy and closer coordination of Member States' economic policies;
  - (f) the development of the Union into a genuine area of freedom, security and justice by, in particular:
    - the merging, within the Community framework, of police and judicial cooperation in criminal matters with judicial cooperation in civil matters, the measures relating to the movement of persons and the other measures to protect fundamental rights and citizenship within the Union;
    - the recognition of the full jurisdiction of the Court of Justice in respect of all measures relating to the establishment of this area of freedom, security and justice;
    - the integration of Eurojust and Europol into the Union's institutional framework;
    - the establishment of a European Public Prosecutor's Office accountable to the Court of Justice;
4. Points out that the institutional reforms are not a closed chapter and considers that the agenda for the reform of the Treaties should include issues which were not tackled or not resolved under the Treaty of Nice and which are essential if the Union institutions are to operate more democratically and more effectively, such as:
- (a) an updating of the tasks which fall to the European Council, the General Affairs Council and the Council meeting sectorally;
  - (b) the system for nominating the Presidencies of the European Council, the General Affairs Council and the Council meeting sectorally;
  - (c) simplification of legislative procedures (with the latter subject to transparency) on the basis that the general principle in legislative matters must be qualified majority voting in the Council and codecision involving the European Parliament, so as to make the Union more democratic; in addition, the Council should deliberate and take decisions on European legislation in public;
  - (d) the removal of the distinction between compulsory and non-compulsory expenditure, with the budgetary procedure for non-compulsory expenditure thus being applied to the expenditure part of the budget as a whole, and the incorporation of the European Development Fund into the EU budget;
  - (e) the establishment of an independent European Public Prosecutor's Office empowered to bring cases before the competent Member State jurisdictions in the context of the protection of the Community's financial interests;
  - (f) the introduction of a hierarchy of Community acts;
  - (g) full involvement of the European Parliament in the common trade policy, in external economic relations and in the implementation and development of enhanced forms of cooperation;
  - (h) the election of the Commission president by the European Parliament;
  - (i) appointment of the members of the Court of Justice and the Court of First Instance by means of a qualified-majority vote and with the European Parliament's assent;
5. Will give detailed opinions on the scope of the reform in subsequent resolutions addressed to the Convention;

Composition of the Convention

6. Insists on the need to establish a Convention whose composition reflects European political pluralism and in which, consequently, the European and national parliaments are well represented, as was the case for the Convention that drafted the Charter of Fundamental Rights; considers that a Convention of this kind can represent an innovation indispensable for the success of the democratic reform of the EU;

Thursday 29 November 2001

7. Takes the view that the principle governing the composition of the Convention should be the same as that used to determine the composition of the Convention that drafted the aforementioned Charter, with the representation of the European Parliament in proportionate to that of the other component groups remaining the same;
8. Considers it essential that the candidate countries should be involved in preparing the reform of the Treaties and, consequently, that they should participate in the work of the Convention as permanent observers, with two representatives of the parliaments of each State and one representative of each government;
9. Proposes that the Court of Justice should be entitled to appoint an observer to the Convention; considers that the Committee of the Regions and the Economic and Social Committee should participate in the Convention through two permanent observers from each body, so that the regional and local authorities and representatives of the various categories of economic and social activity are also involved;
10. Points out that the composition of its own delegation will endeavour to ensure adequate representation of both sexes, and calls on the other delegations to follow this principle when appointing their representatives;
11. Considers that, in order to be effective, the work of the Convention should be supervised by a Presidium acting in a collegiate fashion, composed of the Chair, the Commission representative, two members chosen by the representatives of national parliaments, two representatives of the European Parliament and a representative of the Presidency-in-Office of the Council and of the following Presidency;
12. Believes that the Chair of the Convention has a key role and therefore considers that this position should be held by a distinguished European political figure with parliamentary experience; believes that the Chair should be elected by the Convention;
13. Considers that the Presidium must be responsible for maintaining relations with the European Council on a regular basis;
14. Considers that, after the work of the Convention has been wound up, the Presidium should participate fully and actively at all stages and levels of the IGC which is to ratify the reform of the Treaties prepared by the Convention;

Working methods of the Convention

15. Considers that the Convention should be free to decide how to organise its work, the Chair, assisted by the Presidium, being responsible for implementing procedural decisions adopted by the four component groups by common accord;
16. Considers that it would be useful for the Convention to be assisted by an interinstitutional Secretariat endowed with substantial resources, particularly in terms of the budget and staff, to ensure that the work of drafting and consultation can be carried out effectively;
17. Believes it is essential for the proceedings of the Convention to be fully transparent with regard to the conduct of debates and deliberations and with respect to documents, where all possible steps must be taken to guarantee public access;
18. Considers it essential that the European Parliament, the national parliaments and all the European institutions should support the work of the Convention through an active dialogue with citizens so that public concerns can be taken into account;
19. Fully supports the proposal for a civil-society forum as proposed by the Belgian Presidency at the informal Council meeting at Genval, which would enable the Convention to keep in close touch with public opinion so as to ensure that the outcome of its work takes account of the concerns, ideas and priorities for the future expressed by civil society; proposes that the Convention should also organise public hearings in the Member States for this purpose;

Thursday 29 November 2001

Mandate and timetable for the Convention

20. Considers it vital, with a view to effective reform of the Union, that the Convention should have a decision-making procedure under which it can draft a single coherent proposal by consensus and present it to the Intergovernmental Conference as the sole basis for negotiation and decision;

21. Hopes that the Convention will start work immediately after the Laeken European Council and complete its work in time to allow the Intergovernmental Conference to wind up its proceedings by the end of 2003 under the Italian Presidency so as to enable the new treaty to be adopted in December of that year, thereby ensuring that, in 2004, the European elections can act as a democratic fillip to European integration and that, together with the Commission, the European Parliament will be able to play its part in that process under the best possible conditions; considers that the period between presentation of the results of the Convention and the opening summit should be as short as possible, and in any case not longer than three months;

22. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council and Commission and to the Heads of State and Government and the parliaments of the Member States and the candidate countries.

- F. whereas it is regrettable that the White Paper does not contain clear indications as to how 'governance' can be improved by increasing the transparency of the Council as co-legislator, through its Rules of Procedure and without amending the Treaties,
- G. whereas the concept of efficiency in the sense of administrative efficiency must not jeopardise democratic legitimisation,
- H. whereas the degree of legitimacy and acceptance of the European Union depends to a great extent on how effective its decisions are,
- I. whereas the judicial mechanisms and the division of powers between the institutions are not, on their own, enough to stimulate interest on the part of citizens, and whereas a new method, as well as an appropriate communication campaign, should be introduced,
- J. whereas the White Paper's main concern is to enhance the acceptance and legitimacy of the European Union through greater involvement of citizens and civil society in the framing and implementation of Union policies,
- K. whereas, on the one hand, elements of participatory democracy in the political system of the Union must be introduced cautiously with a constant eye to the recognised principles and structural elements of representative democracy and the rule of law and, on the other, citizens of the Union rightly expect transparent decision-making processes and, at the same time, clear political accountability for decisions,
- L. whereas the principles of specific authority (Article 5 of the EU Treaty and Article 5, first paragraph, of the EC Treaty), subsidiarity (Article 2, second paragraph, of the EU Treaty and Article 5, second paragraph, of the EC Treaty), proportionality (Article 6(4) of the EU Treaty and Article 5, third paragraph, of the EC Treaty) and respect for the national identities of the Member States (Article 6(3) of the EU Treaty) set strict limits on any horizontal delegation of powers to autonomous EU regulatory agencies and any vertical delegation of powers and tasks directly by the Union to regional or local level for the purposes of 'stronger involvement of regional and local authorities in the Union's policies' <sup>(1)</sup>, as the Commission concedes,
- M. whereas, on the other hand, the contention that the way in which the Union currently works does not allow for 'a partnership in which national governments involve their regions and cities fully in European policy' <sup>(1)</sup> does not appear to be justified, because the Member States are well able under the Treaties to provide appropriately for the involvement of their regions and local authorities in the shaping and implementation of EU policy, in keeping with their respective constitutional systems,
- N. whereas screening of the 'unwieldy system' of almost 700 advisory bodies on which the Commission relies is long overdue but, according to the White Paper on reform of the Commission, a list of the committees and working groups involved in formal or structured consultation procedures (Action 5) <sup>(2)</sup> was to have been drawn up and published by June 2001, on the other hand a number of proposals mentioned in the White Paper such as 'on-line consultation through the inter-active policy-making initiative' <sup>(1)</sup> actually give rise to the risk of an escalation in consultation and such a development would be incompatible with the White Paper's other goal of 'reducing the long delays associated with the adoption and implementation of Community rules' <sup>(3)</sup>,
- O. whereas an easily achievable but important breakthrough in terms of transparency would be for the Commission to undertake to attach in future to each legislative proposal a list of all the committees, experts, associations, organisations and institutes consulted when the proposal was drafted,

- P. whereas the Union should no longer put off steps to reduce the denseness of regulation, i.e. to tackle the issue of how detailed regulation should be at Union level, not least in view of enlargement, because otherwise the bodies involved in lawmaking will be in danger of imploding,
- Q. whereas a solution to this problem requires a new approach to the issue of delegation of lawmaking ('commitology') and a change in the Community Treaty (Article 202 of the EC Treaty) to put the Council and Parliament on equal footing and the Commission's statements on this matter are therefore to be welcomed and its further thoughts on this issue, in particular on a 'simple legal mechanism'<sup>(1)</sup>, are awaited with great interest,
- R. whereas, although they have a direct impact on the general public, the measures funded from the Union's budget do not have a high enough profile and therefore fail to make people sufficiently aware of the European added value provided,
1. Welcomes the Commission's readiness to examine critically and without exception the rules, processes and behaviour that affect the way in which powers are exercised at European level 'Governance'<sup>(2)</sup> and to effect change;
  2. Warns the Commission nonetheless against taking measures in the legislative sphere which might affect the roles of Parliament and the Council in the legislative process before Parliament has been fully consulted;
  3. Proposes instead that the White Paper should be seen as initiating a purposeful dialogue between the institutions of the Union on governance reform, including measures in the 'first phase', and for the outcome to be incorporated into a revised text by the end of 2002;
  4. Welcomes the establishment of an interinstitutional working group, as proposed by President Prodi on 2 October 2001;
  5. Reiterates its confidence in the Community method and advocates maintaining the institutional balance as the most appropriate way of moving forward in terms of integration;
  6. Points out first of all that the principle of European governance cannot exist without democratically adopted own resources and without a major simplification of budgetary procedures that will ensure that they are properly understood by the general public;
  7. Welcomes the efforts being made by the Commission to improve the planning of procedures; considers, however, that the strategic planning process should be reviewed in the light of the political priorities expressed by the budgetary authority and that the human resources allocated to implementing policies should be adjusted accordingly;

Principles

8. Confirms that the 'parliamentarisation' of the Union's decision-making system presupposes increased transparency of the work of the Council and that the involvement of both the European and national parliaments constitutes the basis for a European system with democratic legitimacy and that only regional, national and European institutions which possess democratic legitimacy can take accountable legislative decisions;
9. Considers that Parliament cannot accept the move to reduce the legislative powers and the participation in the legislative process of the one institution to be directly elected by European citizens; enhancing communication between citizens and the institutions of the Union necessarily entails strengthening Parliament's legislative powers;

Thursday 29 November 2001

10. Therefore attaches particular importance to the following considerations of principle being taken into account in the further debate on governance:

- (a) governance by the Union institutions requires democratic legitimacy; this is provided jointly by the European Parliament and the parliaments of the Member States, the latter as the bodies exercising democratic scrutiny over governments acting in the Council;
- (b) democratic legitimacy presupposes that the political will underpinning decisions is arrived at through parliamentary deliberation; this is a substantive and not merely a formal requirement; there is also an urgent need for democratic legitimacy and scrutiny when implementing rules are adopted by the executive;
- (c) legitimacy is understood to mean that political decisions must be underpinned by a fundamental consensus, such as that expressed in the Charter of Fundamental Rights recognised by the European Union – in the sense of a list of individual rights and an objective value system;
- (d) legitimacy in this sense is ultimately inconceivable without clear attribution of political responsibility and cannot be replaced by 'technical' factors such as 'effectiveness' or 'coherence'

Participation and consultation

11. Points out, on the basis of these considerations, with regard to participation and consultation that

- (a) in terms of the criteria referred to in paragraphs 8 and 10 above, 'organised civil society' as 'the sum of all organisational structures whose members have objectives and responsibilities that are of general interest and who also act as mediators between the public authorities and citizens' <sup>(1)</sup>, whilst important, are inevitably sectoral and cannot be regarded as having its own democratic legitimacy <sup>(2)</sup>, given that representatives are not elected by the people and therefore cannot be voted out by the people,
- (b) consultation of interested parties with the aim of improving draft legislation can only ever supplement and can never replace the procedures and decisions of legislative bodies which possess democratic legitimacy; only the Council and Parliament, as co-legislators, can take responsible decisions in the context of legislative procedures, due account being taken of the opinions of the bodies specified in the Treaties, i.e. in particular the Economic and Social Committee and the Committee of the Regions,
- (c) an important mouthpiece for civil society is, by definition and in accordance with its newly formulated role under Article 257 as amended by the Treaty of Nice, the Economic and Social Committee, which has advisory status and which, as the law stands, may also be consulted by the Council and Commission 'in all cases in which they consider it is appropriate' <sup>(3)</sup>; early consultation of the ESC by the Commission can be seen as a way of increasing participatory democracy at Union level <sup>(4)</sup> <sup>(5)</sup>,
- (d) it would not be consistent with good governance for the Commission to set up groups of experts and delegate to them tasks which could better be carried out by the Economic and Social Committee in that it is independent of the Commission <sup>(6)</sup>,

Thursday 29 November 2001

- (e) however indispensable it may be to consult relevant groups and experts when drafting legislative proposals in particular, it should not be allowed to add a further level of bureaucracy, for instance in the form of 'accredited organisations' or 'organisations with partnership agreements',
- (f) in conjunction with the ESC, the Commission must find organisational structures so that a procedure for consulting interested parties can be conducted in a meaningful and efficient manner; all ongoing consultations should be listed in a register that is accessible via the Internet;

12. Proposes, following on from the suggestions made by the Commission and the Economic and Social Committee<sup>(1)</sup>, that an interinstitutional agreement on democratic consultation be concluded committing all three institutions to commonly agreed consultation standards and practices at Union level; points out, however, with regard to the independent role of many non-governmental organisations, that the creation of consultation standards must not be tied to any quid pro quo on the part of organisations of civil society because independent and critical public opinion is essential for a vibrant democracy; confirms, however, that the democratic requirements placed on the Community regulatory process as regards accountability and transparency must also apply to these organisations;

13. Points out that access to legislation is an important part of effective participation and consultation, so that legislation must be both consistent and clear, access thereto must be practical, and there must be better understanding of laws by those concerned;

14. Takes the view that this requires effective publicity and the best possible forms of communication, direct (to members of the public) and indirect (via the press), in order to arouse interest and win the public's support for measures to be taken;

15. Emphasises the opportunity which new technologies present as regards meeting new challenges concerning communication, consultation and the direct participation of civil society;

Autonomous regulatory authorities

16. Points out that the right of codecision and political scrutiny by the European Parliament and the Council would become more difficult if EU administrative powers were increasingly delegated to European agencies with decision-making powers;

17. Takes the view, based on the principles set out in paragraphs 8 and 10, that the creation of further independent regulatory authorities in addition to the Office for Harmonisation in the Internal Market in Alicante, the Community Plant Variety Office in Angers and the European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products in London within the framework described in the White Paper<sup>(2)</sup> can only be approved if specific scientific or technical expertise is required and a decentralised administration seems appropriate; however, this must not lead to a reduction in expert and judicial scrutiny by the Commission or to any watering down of the Commission's political accountability;

18. Points out, however, that the Commission must always have the necessary instruments to enable it to account to Parliament and the Council for the activities of such authorities and it goes without saying that authorities of this kind can be created only on a clear legal basis;

Openness and transparency

19. Takes the view that increased transparency and openness on the part of the Council as legislator is a sine qua non for good governance and that keeping interested parties informed of the Council's legislative work is the basic precondition for improving understanding and increasing participation on the part of the general public;

20. Stresses once again in this connection the need for the Council to hold its meetings in public when acting in a legislative capacity; in such cases, debates and votes must be made public; pursuant to the Council's Rules of Procedure, public debates must take place at the start and at the end of all legislative procedures, and the results of votes and explanations of votes by Members of the Council must be published;

<sup>(1)</sup> White Paper 3.1: 'What is needed is a reinforced culture of consultation and dialogue; a culture which is adopted by all European Institutions and which associates particularly the European Parliament in the consultative process, given its role in representing the citizen' and ESC opinion of 25.4.2001, 3.5, 3.5.1.

Thursday 29 November 2001

21. Regrets that the White Paper makes no reference to the institution of the petition to the European Parliament and complaints to the European Ombudsman, particularly given that the Commission makes a much appreciated and frequently decisive contribution to the processing of petitions in the interest of the European citizen;
22. Regrets that although the White Paper mainly deals with matters falling under good administration, the Commission has not been able to take a position on the initiative by the European Parliament and the European Ombudsman on good administration;
23. Finds it deplorable that the draft code of good administration does not serve as a point of departure when the Commission elaborates concrete actions to follow the White Paper;
24. Regrets that the Commission does not mention the new regulations on access to documents in the White Paper, since it is evident that proper implementation of these rules and the allocation of adequate resources to that end are of paramount importance for the achievement of good governance in the EU;

Involvement of regional and local authorities

25. Points out furthermore that, on the basis of the considerations set out in paragraphs 8 and 10 above, that there is no question of the direct delegation of powers and tasks to bodies or authorities at regional or local level in the Member States as this would undermine the basic structure of the Union and be in breach of the principles of subsidiarity and proportionality which leaves it up to Member States to decide how to organise themselves internally;
26. Welcomes the White Paper's concept of the role of the regions as intermediary between the citizen and the supranational authorities; will welcome proposals from the Convention to redraft Article 5 of the EC Treaty in order to make a specific reference to the function of constitutional regions within Member States; proposes that regions and local authorities, both of which have important duties in the implementation of EU law and policy, be invited to involve themselves much more in consultative work in the pre-legislative phase as well as in post-legislative monitoring of the effect of such legislation on the ground;
27. Is also of the opinion that the development of a dialogue with associations of municipalities should result in municipalities and local authorities being consulted on all Commission plans that affect their interests;
28. Notes in this connection that the administrative agreements sought also represent an interesting and new kind of approach to implementing Community law, but that the effects thereof on Member States' administrative laws, and in particular on the structures of local government, must be carefully studied;
29. Remains committed to the principle of autonomous enforcement of Community law by national governments and regions, because this leads to a transparent division of tasks, clear accountability and implementation of EU law that is close to the citizen; insists, however, on effective monitoring of compliance with obligations under European law, e.g. by means of Treaty infringement procedures;

Better lawmaking

30. Points out that an intensive exchange of views has been going on between the Union institutions on this subject for years<sup>(1)</sup>;
31. Considers that the drafting of an 'action plan for better regulation' by a Council working party (Mandelkern group on better regulation) and, at the same time, by a Commission working party with a similar brief, represents a serious breach of the Community method, for Parliament, as co-legislator, was neither informed of, nor involved in, the work of these working parties;

<sup>(1)</sup> Recent examples include: European Parliament resolution of 4.9.2001 on the Commission's 17th annual report on monitoring the application of Community law (1999) (COM(2000)92 – C5-0381/2000 – 2000/2197(COS)) ('Texts Adopted', Item 6), European Parliament resolution of 3.7.2001 on a draft interinstitutional agreement on a more structured use of the recasting technique for legal acts (2037/1/2000/rev. 1 – C5-0588/2000 – 2000/2266(ACI)) ('Texts Adopted', Item 5), European Parliament resolution of 16.1.2001 on the communication from the Commission to the Council and the European Parliament on a review of SLIM: Simpler Legislation for the Internal Market (COM(2000)104 – C5-0209/2000 – 2000/2115(COS)), and the abovementioned European Parliament resolution of 26.10.2000.

Thursday 29 November 2001

32. Calls on the European Council not to adopt the 'Action Plan for Better Regulation' without first consulting the European Parliament;
33. Recalls that, on 2 October 2001, Commission President Prodi assured the European Parliament that the Commission would not present such a plan either to the Laeken European Council or at any other time, without first obtaining Parliament's opinion; calls on the Commission, therefore, not to submit an 'action plan for better regulation', or any other document with the same content but under a different name, to the Laeken European Council before Parliament, as co-legislator, has delivered an opinion;
34. Considers that there are currently no interinstitutional agreements on co-regulation which guarantee Parliament effective exercise of its political role and responsibility, either with regard to the appropriate choice of a legal instrument (while respecting the Commission's right of initiative), or with regard to the form and implementation of a proposed co-regulation;
35. Believes that the use of so-called 'framework' directives must be accompanied by adequate mechanisms of democratic control; in particular, Parliament must in future have at its disposal a time-limited 'call-back mechanism' for legislation which is delegated;
36. Points out that these methods require further examination and consideration in Parliament and should be regulated by an interinstitutional agreement<sup>(1)</sup>; if the Commission assumes that co-regulation 'should not be used in situations where rules need to apply in a uniform way in every Member State'<sup>(2)</sup> then its scope of application is unlikely to be very wide; in no circumstances however should it be allowed to result in a situation in which targets for industry for the purposes of environmental protection are fixed in a way that circumvents Parliament and merely approved by the Council<sup>(3)</sup> under agreements between the Commission and trade associations which are neither 'representative' nor 'accountable'<sup>(4)</sup>;
37. Has fewer reservations about the open method of coordination if it is confined to the exchange of procedures that have proved their worth and the comparison of progress achieved and does not apply in the sphere of preparation of European Council meetings from which Parliament is excluded; it must under no circumstances lead to hidden parallel legislation by circumventing the legislative procedures established in the EC Treaty;
38. Points out that better law-making must become part of public administration 'culture' at all levels in the European Union, and must also encompass the implementation of laws and rules by Member State authorities; this will require effective and appropriate information and training of officials, both at European level and at national, regional and local levels, in order to guarantee decentralised administration and 'Europe-friendly conduct' at all levels;
39. Considers that any amendment to Community legislative provisions relating to the institutional and legal aspects of governance must be made by means of amending the Treaties in force and hence be placed on the agenda for the next Convention;
40. Takes the view that the Commission must present more far-reaching proposals for reforming comitology, as greater transparency and scrutiny by Parliament as co-legislator is also needed where the Commission implements Community legislation;
41. Calls on the Commission, in order to 'give priority to consideration of any infringements of Community law' — as it has expressed the intention of doing — not to hesitate to initiate measures possibly leading to proceedings for non-compliance before the Court of Justice of the European Community against Member States under Article 226 of the Treaty;
42. Urges the Commission to intensify its efforts to complete its own administrative reform so as to establish a first-class, open and transparent public administration, without which it will be impossible to aspire to being the principal executive in a well-managed and accountable Union;

<sup>(1)</sup> In its resolution of 26.10.2000 on better law making Parliament drew attention to the dangers of 'voluntary agreements among the parties concerned' (see 7th citation, paragraphs 23 and 24 of the resolution in the Würmeling report).

The most recent example of a planned voluntary agreement with industry concerns the protection of pedestrians against injury as a result of collision with a motor vehicle (Commission communication COM(2001) 389, 11.7.2001).

Thursday 29 November 2001

Cooperation with the European Parliament

43. Expects the Commission to intensify cooperation in particular with Members of the European Parliament and to support them in what is the most fundamental of their tasks, in maintaining a dialogue with the citizens, the relevant Commission departments making available all the information needed for this purpose, e.g. on progress with administrative procedures and upcoming deadlines, and in particular providing full and detailed information upon request;

44. Stresses that the directly elected Members of the European Parliament are the representatives of the citizens of the European Union;

Enlargement

45. Notes that the political dimension of enlargement is scarcely mentioned in the White Paper despite the fact that in its opinion on the convening of the last Intergovernmental Conference the Commission rightly pointed out that 'enlargement requires changes in the way in which the institutions operate to ensure their effectiveness in a Union whose membership is set to double'<sup>(1)</sup>; against the background of enlargement, the question of the costs of the reforms to involve citizens and civil society proposed by the Commission also takes on a completely different light<sup>(2)</sup>;

Convention and Intergovernmental Conference

46. Points out that it will examine the topics dealt with in the last chapter of the White Paper ('Debate on the future of Europe') on the basis of separate reports drawn up by the committees responsible and, consequently, these topics will not be discussed in this motion for a resolution in order to avoid overlapping and repetition;

Individual measures and proposals from the Commission

47. Intends to examine carefully as soon as they are submitted to it the numerous individual proposals and measures announced in the White Paper, such as:

- guidelines on collection and use of expert advice<sup>(3)</sup>,
- priority attached to treatment of possible breaches of Community law<sup>(4)</sup>,
- criteria for the creation of new regulatory agencies<sup>(5)</sup>,
- defining minimum standards for consultation and publishing them in a code of conduct<sup>(6)</sup>,
- developing an approach to working with key networks<sup>(6)</sup>,

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Social Policy Agenda adopted by the Nice European Council of 7 to 9 December 2000,
  - having regard to the conclusions of the European Councils of Lisbon (23/24 March 2000), Stockholm (23/24 March 2001) and Göteborg (15/16 June 2001),

  - B. whereas the Social Policy Agenda, adopted by the Nice European Council, reflects the need to focus on quality as a means to ensure a positive, mutually reinforcing interaction between economic, employment and social policies,
  - C. whereas the quality of jobs should always be a goal, regardless of the state of economic growth,
  - D. whereas the 2002 employment guidelines include 'quality of work' as a general objective,
  - E. whereas the Stockholm European Council asked the Council and Commission to develop indicators on quality in work, to be presented in time for the Laeken European Council,

Thursday 29 November 2001

- F. whereas the Commission recently presented a communication which sought to identify ways of reaching the policy goal of improving quality of work and to establish an initial set of indicators,
- G. whereas quality reflects the desire, not just to defend minimum standards, but to promote rising standards and ensure a fairer share of the fruits of progress,
- H. whereas it is necessary to define specific policy goals and identify priority fields for action in order to give life to the 'quality strategy' which otherwise would risk becoming merely a slogan without substance,
- I. whereas it is necessary to identify the policy instruments needed to implement such a strategy and to build the concept of quality also into these very instruments,

General assessment

1. Welcomes the launch of a debate on enhancing quality in social and employment policies as a decisive step in putting into practice the goals established by the Lisbon European Council and the Social Policy Agenda;
2. Considers that quality in social and employment policy is a key element for a thriving economy, more and better jobs and an inclusive society; calls upon the Commission to analyse in more detail the various effects of higher quality in work on employment levels;
3. Welcomes the decision to establish a set of indicators as a basis for measuring quality provided that no new statistical burden is put on businesses; but calls upon the Commission, building on these and as a second step, to develop a strategic approach linking the development of quality to concrete political goals, target standards and policy instruments, in the context of a regulatory climate conducive to investment, innovation and entrepreneurship, as agreed in the Lisbon Council;

On priorities

4. Takes the view that, in order to be effective, any approach to foster quality in social and employment policies needs – despite the general aim of quality – to focus on a limited number of priorities;
5. Notes that there is a positive correlation between investment in quality on the one hand, and job growth and competitiveness on the other, because, leaving aside productivity gains, quality in work provides incentives to enter the labour market;
6. Takes the view, therefore, that, in order to achieve the employment goals defined by the Lisbon European Council, strategies to improve quality in work must first target women and elderly workers; calls, therefore, in particular for:
  - the establishment of adequate guaranteed labour standards for new forms of 'atypical' employment, including social protection aspects,
  - the development of a comprehensive strategy to reconcile the demands made by professional and family life,
  - a comprehensive strategy to maintain elderly workers in the labour market;
7. Takes the view that high qualifications and skill levels are key elements to enhance productivity, increase job satisfaction and avoid exclusion from the labour market; stresses the need to develop the concept of 'active education and training policies' alongside active labour market policies;

Thursday 29 November 2001

8. Takes the view that health and safety at work should be another priority in any strategy to foster quality in work; expects to be consulted by the Commission on a draft action plan in this field as soon as possible;

9. Calls upon the Commission to conduct a cost-benefit analysis of the measures to improve quality in work so as to make the economic benefits of higher quality more visible;

On implementation

10. Acknowledges that benchmarking on the basis of commonly defined indicators and exchange of good practices may be the most appropriate policy for some aspects of social and employment policy at European level; stresses, however, that the open coordination method may complement other policy instruments, in particular legislation, but must not replace them; takes the view that a quality-oriented policy should in fact result in gradual improvements in guaranteed minimum standards; in this context, draws attention to the proposals for supplementary actions contained in its resolution of 25 October 2000 on the Social Policy Agenda;

11. Notes that, unless the majority voting in Council is considerably extended, the open co-ordination method may become the standard instrument in social and employment policy in an enlarged European Union;

12. Insists on the full involvement of the European Parliament as well as national parliaments in the various methods of open co-ordination; with regard to its own involvement, calls for a consultation procedure along the lines of those preceding the European Employment Strategy;

13. Takes the view that the Social Policy Agenda needs to be added to and adapted in the light of the new priority of fostering quality; stresses that the monitoring of policy implementation, including the control of full transposition of European legislation, needs to be reinforced;

22. Protection of the Communities' financial interests

A5-0393/2001

European Parliament resolution on the Commission annual report 2000 on the protection of the Communities' financial interests and the fight against fraud (COM(2001) 255 – C5-0469/2001 – 2001/2186(COS)) and on the Commission communication on protecting the Communities' financial interests, Fight against fraud, Action plan for 2001-2003 (COM(2001) 254 – C5-0470/2001 – 2001/2186(COS))

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Commission annual report (COM(2001) 255 – C5-0469/2001),
- having regard to the Commission communication (COM(2001) 254 – C5-0470/2001),
- having regard to Articles 276(3) and 280(5) of the EC Treaty,

Thursday 29 November 2001

- having regard to Rule 47(1) of its Rules of Procedure,
  - having regard to the report of the Committee on Budgetary Control (A5-0393/2001),
- A. whereas the scale of the fraud and irregularities established by the Member States and the European Anti-Fraud Office OLAF increased dramatically in the year 2000 to a record level of approximately € 2,03 billion, which is double the figure for previous years and whereas this amount can be broken down as follows:
- Revenue side:
Traditional own resources: € 1 143 million
  - Expenditure side:
Agricultural Guarantee Fund: € 576 million
Structural policy measures: € 139 million
Internal policies: € 13 million
External policies: € 156 million
- B. whereas detected fraud and irregularities on the revenue side (primarily from customs duties and other levies) now account for 7,5 % of total traditional own resources, but there was also a sharp increase in the figures on the expenditure side, in particular in the case of expenditure managed directly by the Commission,
- C. whereas the scale of the fraud and irregularities reported in the case of agricultural expenditure is far greater than in previous years at € 576 million,
- D. whereas although the increase is partly attributable to greater efforts to combat fraud, the figures are nonetheless alarming,
- E. whereas the undisclosed figure for fraud and irregularities not detected must be significantly higher,
- F. whereas underreporting must be significantly higher partly because, according to Court of Auditors Special Report No 10/2001 <sup>(1)</sup> concerning financial control of the Structural Funds, Member States fulfilled their obligation to report irregularities only to an extremely limited extent in the case of the Structural Funds, so that there are actually two types of underreporting, namely cases that are not detected at all and cases that are detected in the Member States but are not reported to OLAF,
- G. whereas, as in the past, only a small proportion of the amounts defrauded can be recovered and in the case of own resources the average rate of collection has fallen by more than 50 % since 1998 to only 13,85 %,
- H. whereas it is not the detection of fraud and irregularities in itself that undermines the confidence of citizens in the European Union and its institutions, but rather the fact that in most cases the lost funds cannot be retrieved and that those responsible are not punished,
1. Calls, in view of these worrying figures, for a real improvement in efforts to combat fraud, with the following priorities being included or given greater emphasis in the Commission Action plan:
- (a) creation of a European Public Prosecutor for financial matters by mid 2002,
  - (b) effective protection of the Communities' financial interests in the candidate countries,

Thursday 29 November 2001

- (c) better monitoring of the Member States' efforts by the Commission and rigorous disclosure of all shortcomings,
- (d) fraud-proofing of all new and amending legislative proposals which have budgetary implications;

Action plan for 2001-2003

2. Welcomes the four strategic objectives of the Commission 2001-2003 Action plan to combat fraud as well as the specific measures detailed therein which represent a major advance in a concerted and coordinated fight against fraud; asks to be kept regularly informed of progress in each of the measures outlined in the Action plan;

3. Underscores, in the light of past experience, the importance of objective 1.2.2 on improving financial follow-up and penalties; recalls that Parliament is still awaiting clarification on the application of the principle of proportionality as regards the imposition of fines; is of the opinion furthermore, that the proposal for a regulation for a 'blacklist' mechanism for the EAGGF Guarantee Section should be presented earlier than the 2003 deadline proposed in the action plan and should be complemented by a similar approach with regard to the Structural Funds;

4. Agrees that a comprehensive interinstitutional approach is important to prevent and combat corruption (objective 3.1) but considers that the proposed memoranda of understanding between OLAF and Commission departments should not take as long as two years to put together and should preferably contain a more formal mechanism for consultation and cooperation in suspected cases of irregularity;

Cooperation between the Commission and the Member States

5. Draws attention to the importance of the efforts made by the Member States to combat fraud and irregularities and recover amounts wrongly paid;

6. Draws attention, for example, to the backlog in recovery in Italy and the irregularities alleged by the European Court of Auditors in the United Kingdom in connection with the import of New Zealand butter, which have contributed significantly to the losses on the revenue side;

7. Notes with concern that the information compiled by the Commission in its annual report does not make it possible to establish to what extent more effective and uniform protection of the Community's financial interests has been achieved in all Member States;

8. Calls on the Commission in future not merely to list the steps taken by the Member States without comment, but to make a comparative analysis and assessment of those steps, to disclose the shortcomings found and thus spur the Member States on to greater efforts;

Financial control of the Structural Funds

9. Notes that the situation must be described as disastrous if the Court of Auditors, in paragraph 106 of its Special Report No 10/2001, concludes that, more than six years after entry into force of the Commission Regulation (EC) No 1681/94<sup>(1)</sup> on the reporting of irregularities, the data forwarded to OLAF by Member State authorities was in many cases incomplete, unreliable, misleading, out-of-date and therefore of little value;

Thursday 29 November 2001

10. Notes with incomprehension the Court of Auditors' observations in paragraphs 120 and 121 of its Special Report No 10/2001 that, both within the Structural Funds DGs and between OLAF and the relevant DGs, there is no agreed and documented system for the follow-up of irregularities communicated by the Member States, so that analysis or further processing of reported cases is delayed considerably or does not take place at all;

11. Points out to the Commission right now that Parliament will return to the issue of inadequate financial control of the Structural Funds in the context of the forthcoming discharge procedure and calls on the Commission to submit to it by 15 December 2001 at the latest a list of all irregularities reported since entry into force of Regulation (EC) No 1681/94 indicating for each case the size of the financial loss and whether it has been possible to recover any money, and, if so, how much;

Cooperation with the candidate countries

12. Notes that establishing effective protection of the Community's financial interests in the candidate countries will be one of the major challenges of the years ahead and, in view of the likely rapid increase in payments from the Community budget and the existing potential risk, it is necessary to adopt new approaches;

13. Highlights the case of corruption involving EU funds in Slovakia which emerged in Spring 2001 and the latest reports from Poland that serious irregularities took place when the system for the administration and control of agricultural expenditure was set up; stresses that these cases must be fully investigated and those responsible must be punished where appropriate; emphasises also that it views the treatment of such cases by the candidate countries as an important test for their membership of the European Union;

14. Calls on OLAF to set up similar units in all the candidate countries by mid 2002, in accordance with the principle of decentralisation<sup>(1)</sup> long advocated by Parliament;

15. Requests the European Court of Auditors to submit to it by the start of 2003 at the latest an opinion on each candidate country showing whether the system of financial control in place in these countries is able to work in a way that will allow the shift to decentralised management of Community funds on accession without jeopardising the Community's financial interests;

OLAF investigation activity

16. Notes that, at the end of May 2001, OLAF had recorded a total of 2343 cases in its Case Management System, but that, according to the OLAF Supervisory Committee (Chapter III, paragraph 3.2 of the most recent OLAF Supervisory Committee Progress Report), could not give any precise details as to the action taken by the competent national authorities in the individual cases or as to whether administrative or criminal penalties had been imposed and monies had been recovered;

17. Notes with concern the OLAF Supervisory Committee's observations (Chapter IV, paragraph 3.1.1) that only in very, very few of these cases has OLAF forwarded reports or information to the competent national judicial authorities, although a large number of the cases processed by OLAF include aspects that are covered by criminal law;

18. Notes with concern that, so far, only in two out of altogether 92 internal cases investigated have the accused been sentenced by national courts;

<sup>(1)</sup> Paragraph 3(n) of its resolution of 7 October 1998 on the independence, role and status of the Unit for the Coordination of Fraud Prevention (UCLAF) (Court of Auditors Special Report 8/98 concerning the Commission departments responsible for fighting fraud) (OJ C 328, 26.10.1998, p. 95).

Thursday 29 November 2001

19. Notes with concern the observation made by the OLAF Supervisory Committee (in Chapter V, paragraph 3, of its report) that EU bodies and institutions evidently inform OLAF of suspected cases more or less as they see fit and are thus in breach of Article 7 of European Parliament and Council Regulation (EC) No 1073/1999 of 25 May 1999 concerning investigations conducted by OLAF<sup>(1)</sup>, pursuant to which all information relating to possible cases of fraud or corruption or other illegal activity must be forwarded to OLAF without delay; expects that this rule will now be strictly complied with;

Suspected cases of fraud and favouritism in the Commission

20. Notes with incomprehension that the Commission, in spite of an announcement by Vice-President Kinnock on this matter in March 2001, has still not complied with the call Parliament made (in paragraph 14 of its resolution of 4 April 2001<sup>(2)</sup>) on implementation of the 1998 general budget) for the Commission to appear as joint plaintiff in the PerryLux affair so that it would be able to gain access to the files;

21. Recalls that a former Member of the Commission has been accused of misusing official vehicles for private purposes, and that another former Member of the Commission has been accused:

- (a) of irregular conduct as regards the award of several contracts to a firm with which she had connections, shortly before taking up office as a Commissioner;
- (b) of having an expensive apartment in Brussels made available free of charge to one of her advisers;
- (c) of having contracts for inconsequential studies and research awarded to a German lawyer as cover so that he could visit her office and possibly gain access to and influence sensitive cases (LEUNA affair) with which the Commission was dealing at that time;

22. Points out to the Commission that whilst it might not be possible to take action in respect of such conduct under Belgian criminal law, it can and must be punished as a breach of obligations within the meaning of Article 213 of the EC Treaty; reaffirms therefore the call<sup>(3)</sup> it made for the European Court of Justice to be invoked where appropriate if it were to be confirmed that Members of the previous Commission had breached the obligations of their office; calls explicitly on the Commission to abandon its wait-and-see approach and to initiate the relevant investigations;

European Public Prosecutor

23. Welcomes the latest progress in creating Eurojust; expects that the 15 members of Eurojust seconded by the Member States will by mid-2002 at the latest be joined by a European Public Prosecutor for financial matters, because Eurojust can contribute effectively to protecting the financial interests of the European Union only in cooperation with a public prosecutor with such a remit;

24. Welcomes the Commission's support for the idea of a European Public Prosecutor and expects the Commission in the Green Paper it has announced also to examine how, in accordance with paragraph 8 of its Resolution of 14 March 2001<sup>(4)</sup> on the 1999 report on the fight against fraud, a European Public Prosecutor's Office for financial matters can be set up on the basis of the EU Treaty whose jurisdiction would be limited initially to internal investigations and which would have a purely advisory and supporting role vis-à-vis the national judicial authorities without any authority to issue instructions; points out that the call to set up such an office, whose remit would initially be confined to internal investigations, is endorsed by the OLAF Supervisory Committee in its latest progress report and cited as one of the preconditions for ensuring the legality and legitimacy of OLAF's investigations;

25. Welcomes and supports as a necessary second step the Commission proposal to amend the EC Treaty at the earliest opportunity and thereafter to confer more extensive powers on the European Public Prosecutor for financial matters;

<sup>(3)</sup> Paragraph 18 of its abovementioned resolution of 4 April 2001.

Thursday 29 November 2001

26. Considers also that ultimately the demands it made back in 1998 <sup>(1)</sup> will have to be acted upon and that arrangements should be introduced, on the basis of Article 280 of the EC Treaty, for dealing with:

- (a) cooperation between Union bodies and the national judicial authorities,
- (b) OLAF's exercise of its powers which have not yet been explicitly regulated, in particular as regards the power to bring proceedings, protect files and adopt measures to restrict a person's freedom,
- (c) judicial scrutiny of the work of OLAF,
- (d) the requirement for officers of OLAF to take the oath;

Cigarette smuggling

27. Welcomes the fact that the Commission is maintaining its action against tobacco companies in the USA, without whose involvement the smuggling of cigarettes in Europe on a vast scale over recent years would not be possible; regrets that Denmark, Ireland, Luxembourg, Austria and the United Kingdom, unlike the other ten Member States, have not joined this action;

28. Believes that, regarding the objective of fighting cross-border smuggling of cigarettes in the EU, and into the EU from non-member countries, and tax fraud, greater convergence of tax rates is an insufficient approach in itself for tackling the problem and requests the Commission to put forward effective proposals as soon as possible;

29. Stresses that, in parallel with the continuing legal action in the USA, efforts must be stepped up within the European Union to combat cigarette smuggling with the aim not only of stemming the flow of consignments of smuggled goods by means of border checks but also of taking targeted action before such consignments are dispatched, i.e. by stepping up checks on manufacturers, warehouse keepers and firms that misuse the official transit procedure as a legal cover for fraud;

30. Calls on the Commission to ensure that the Italian authorities now report without delay on the steps they took after evidence, including precise details of those organising the smuggling of consignments, was forwarded to them following two UCLAF missions to Montenegro in 1996 and 1997;

Cooperation with Switzerland

31. Points out that European taxpayers are incurring losses amounting to billions because cooperation with Switzerland in combating international organised smuggling, particularly involving high-risk goods (cigarettes, alcohol, precious metals, electronic goods) is not operating properly; notes that Parliament cannot approve further agreements with Switzerland unless there is an improvement in cooperation in the area of organised crime;

32. Notes that the fight against organised crime also concerns the credibility of Member States and in this connection points by way of example to:

- (a) recent changes in the law in Italy, where the introduction of new formal procedural requirements has made cross-border legal assistance with Switzerland in the case of offences such as money laundering and arms, drug and cigarette smuggling more difficult or even impossible,
- (b) the recent report drawn up for the French National Assembly, according to which European public prosecutors and judges are complaining of serious difficulties encountered in cooperation with the UK in the fight against money laundering;

<sup>(1)</sup> Paragraph 4 of its abovementioned resolution of 7 October 1998.

Thursday 29 November 2001

Further development of OLAF

33. Reiterates its call<sup>(1)</sup> for OLAF, as an office with a horizontal and interinstitutional remit, also to set up units in Luxembourg and draws attention in this context to the importance of Luxembourg for the Community's financial operations and its institutions and services (almost 7000 officials);

34. Recalls that OLAF has the task of carrying out investigations in all Community institutions if necessary; stresses, in view of OLAF's interinstitutional remit, that it is in the interests of all Community institutions to make full use of the scope offered by the Staff Regulations and to second officials temporarily to OLAF or the secretariat of the OLAF Supervisory Committee;

35. Calls on the Italian government to stop blocking leave of absence for Italian public prosecutors to take up executive functions with OLAF;

36. Calls for those responsible to be identified and punished if it should be confirmed that OLAF's predecessor, UCLAF, misinformed or misled the Commission about the status of certain cases or that files were tampered with in order to impede or prevent investigations;

Information for the European Parliament

37. Welcomes the fact that, following its resolution of 14 March 2001<sup>(2)</sup> on fight against fraud (paragraph 22), OLAF is now forwarding reports on its internal and external investigations and has allowed them to be examined in full accordance with Annex VII of its Rules of Procedure (confidential access to reports for all committee members); invites OLAF to indicate the date when the allegation was received, the overall cost, the main problems identified and the recommendations to the Commission and/or other parties; calls on the Commission to follow this example and accordingly to open up access, on request from Parliament and according to the rules on confidentiality, to its internal audit and monitoring reports;

38. Reminds the Director of OLAF that Parliament and its competent committee regularly need meaningful information and statistics which indicate the results of OLAF's investigations, the criminal and disciplinary follow-up measures taken and the extent to which it has been possible in individual cases to recover undue payments;

39. Notes with great concern that the Director of OLAF is clearly being put under pressure to abandon his former practice and, in future, no longer to submit to Parliament a list of current internal investigations; recalls that, as things stand, internal OLAF investigations are not subject to scrutiny by judges or public prosecutors and that, for that very reason, effective parliamentary scrutiny is of particular significance; recalls, further, that such scrutiny is carried out in strict compliance with Annex VII to its Rules of Procedure (Procedure for the consideration of confidential documents communicated to the European Parliament); instructs its President, on the basis of Parliament's right to information laid down in Article 276 of the EC Treaty, to initiate the appropriate legal procedure, should the appropriate committee of the European Parliament not have received a complete list of current internal investigations by 1 January 2002;

40. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the Director of OLAF, the Court of Justice and the Court of Auditors.

<sup>(1)</sup> Paragraph 3(n) of its abovementioned resolution of 7 October 1998.

23. Association Agreement with Egypt

B5-0740/2001

European Parliament resolution on the conclusion of an Association Agreement with Egypt

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the proposal for a Council and Commission decision (COM(2001) 184) <sup>(1)</sup>,
  - having regard to the draft Euro-Mediterranean Association Agreement between the European Community and its Member States and the Arab Republic of Egypt,
  - having regard to its assent of 29 November 2001 to the proposal for a Council decision concerning the conclusion of a Euro-Mediterranean Association Agreement between the European Communities and their Member States, of the one part, and the Arab Republic of Egypt, of the other part (8220/2001 – COM(2001) 184 – C5-0381/2001 – 2001/0092(AVC)) <sup>(2)</sup>,
- A. having regard to the European Union's long-standing special political, economic and cultural relations with the Arab Republic of Egypt,
  - B. having regard to Egypt's crucial Middle East role in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict with regard to both the peace process and stabilisation of the region,
  - C. having regard to the agreement's potential effects, and in particular its role both as an instrument driving forward political partnership and closer relations between the European Union and the Arab Republic of Egypt, and as a force for social, economic and cultural development, in a climate of mutual respect,
  - D. whereas the reference made to political dialogue between the European Parliament and the People's Assembly of Egypt as a way of ensuring scrutiny of the implementation of the Association Agreement is inadequate,
  - E. whereas, despite substantial efforts, progress still needs to be made in the Arab Republic of Egypt with regard to human rights, freedom of expression and freedom of religious conscience, these being areas in which civil society has a major role to play,
  - F. Expresses its regret concerning certain paragraphs of the letter from the President of the People's Assembly of the Arab Republic of Egypt on this resolution;
  - G. whereas efforts should be made to develop and consolidate a strong civil society which, through its action, could play an effective role in the process of democratisation in Egypt and support the values upon which the Euro-Mediterranean partnership is based,
1. Welcomes the conclusion of a draft agreement by the Council and the beneficial consequences, both economic and political, that such an agreement must have for relations between the two parties;
  2. Points out that respect for human rights constitutes a vital component of the Association Agreement;
  3. Stresses the need to recognise the ability of the Arab Republic of Egypt to play a part in stabilising the Middle East region, and to involve it even more than in the past in the resolution of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict;
  4. Regrets the fact that the text of the agreement does not make a more explicit reference to relations between the European Parliament and the People's Assembly of Egypt;

Thursday 29 November 2001

5. Calls on the Egyptian authorities to continue and step up their efforts to ensure greater respect for fundamental rights and for the freedom of all faiths, and to enhance the ongoing dialogue with civil society;
  6. Expresses deep concern at the arrest, detention and trial of 52 men on grounds relating to their homosexuality and calls upon the authorities to free the 23 men given custodial sentences as a matter of urgency;
  7. Calls on the Egyptian Parliament to abolish the death penalty;
  8. Calls on the Council and the Commission to devise practical arrangements for regular assessments of compliance with Article 3 by all contracting parties to the Euro-Mediterranean Association Agreement, with a view to bringing about verifiable progress with regard, in particular, to regular and impartial monitoring of developments in the field of human rights and the extent to which human rights activists are free to act and speak out in defence of the rights of others;
  9. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Commission, the Council and the Government and People's Assembly of Egypt.
