MINUTES

PROCEEDINGS OF THE SITTING

IN THE CHAIR: Gérard ONESTA

Vice-President

1. Opening of sitting

The sitting opened at 09.05.

The following spoke:

- Bernard Poignant, who condemned the revisionist comments that Bruno Gollnisch had recently made and asked the President to refer the matter to the Bureau (the President replied that the Bureau had already looked into the matter and was of the same opinion as Mr Poignant);
- Martin Schulz, on behalf of the PSE Group, who expressed his disappointment at the attitude of José Manuel Barroso, President-elect of the Commission, who had commented on the results of the hearings of the Commissioners before receiving the letters containing the conclusions from the committees concerned (the President replied that his comments would be forwarded as appropriate).

2. Objection to waiver of immunity

The President announced that he had received from Marios Matsakis a letter and a legal opinion concerning the request from the public prosecutor of the Republic of Cyprus to waive his parliamentary immunity. Parliament had noted this request on 13 October 2004 (Minutes of 13.10.2004, Item 7). In his letter, Marios Matsakis challenged the public prosecutor's authority to make such a request.

Pursuant to Rule 6(3), the letter was forwarded to the committee responsible, the JURI Committee, in order to verify the public prosecutor's authority to make the request.

3. Membership of committees

At the request of the UEN Group, Parliament ratified the following appointments:

- AFET Committee:
Roberta Angelilli to replace Umberto Pirilli;
- ECON Committee:
Umberto Pirilli to replace Alessandro Foglietta;
- REGI Committee:
Umberto Pirilli to replace Roberta Angelilli.

4. Transfers of appropriations

The Committee on Budgets had considered proposal for transfer of appropriations DEC8/2004 by the Commission (C6-0101/2004 — SEC(2004)1034).

Thursday 14 October 2004

After noting the Council's opinion, it had authorised part of the transfer, pursuant to Article 24(3) of the Financial Regulation of 25 June 2002, in accordance with the following breakdown:

Ratification procedures of the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe and the communication strategy

European Parliament resolution on the procedures for ratification of the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe and a communication strategy for the said Treaty

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the draft Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe, to which the Heads of State or Government of the Member States of the European Union gave their agreement on 18 June 2004⁽¹⁾ at the Intergovernmental Conference, on the basis of the text drawn up by the European Convention, and which is due to be signed in Rome on 29 October 2004,
 - having regard to Rule 108(5) of the Rules of Procedure,
- A. whereas the agreement reached on 18 June 2004 is of historical significance and constitutes the first major political act of the enlarged European Union, laying the foundations for a renewed Union based on increased democracy, transparency and efficiency,
- B. whereas, in 2005, 60 years after the end of the Second World War and 16 years after the end of the division of Europe, our continent is reconciled in an order of peace and freedom, based on ever closer economic and political integration, of which the European Communities, and subsequently the Union and their successive enlargements, have been the driving force,
- C. whereas the Constitution should be presented to Europe's citizens in as clear, fair and understandable a way as possible, clearly emphasising the elements already in force and stressing the new provisions,
1. Will deliver its opinion on the constitutional Treaty as soon as possible after it has been signed;
 2. Calls on the Council to devise a coordinated approach to the timetabling of national ratification procedures and to share best practice in terms of parliamentary scrutiny and referendum campaigning;
 3. Suggests that the period from 5 to 8 May 2005 might be chosen as a suitable period for holding the planned referenda on the Constitution or the parliamentary ratification in the Member States, as this period would be of symbolic value, both for peace on our continent and for European integration;

Thursday 14 October 2004

4. Suggests that the ratification process in all Member States should be accomplished by June 2006;
 5. Deems it essential to emphasise the European dimension of the draft Constitution in the national ratification procedures in order to increase a shared sense of civic community across the Union;
 6. Calls on the Council and the Commission to draw up an appropriate campaign and communication strategy; declares its willingness to contribute to this strategy;
 7. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission and the governments and parliaments of the Member States.

- having regard to Rule 114(3) and Rule 94 of its Rules of Procedure,
- having regard to the report of the Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs (A6-0010/2004),
- A. having been informed that, on 5 November 2004, the European Council intends to lay down the priorities for the area of freedom, security and justice (AFSJ) for the next few years,
- B. having noted the significant progress that has been made, but also the many delays in the EU's efforts to implement the AFSJ referred to in Article 2 of the EU Treaty,
- C. regretting that progress in the field of asylum and immigration has been mainly devoted thus far to action to counter illegal immigration and has not been accompanied by sufficient efforts to promote the integration of legally resident aliens,
- D. whereas refugee camps outside the Union should not be envisaged since they entail a clear risk of fundamental rights being violated,
- E. convinced that any future development of the AFSJ must take into account:
 - the existence, since 11 September 2001, of the threat of international terrorism, which struck the European Union dramatically in the form of the Madrid attacks of 11 March 2004,
 - enlargement to include 10 new Member States, which turns the EU into a democracy with a population of over 450 million people,
 - the entry into force on 1 February 2003 of the Treaty of Nice, which, for the first time, provides for the extension of qualified majority voting and of the codecision procedure to certain important asylum and immigration policy measures as well as to measures on judicial cooperation in civil matters,
 - the signing on 29 October 2004 of the draft Constitutional Treaty⁽¹⁾, which incorporates the Charter of Fundamental Rights as Title II thereof, generalises the use of codecision for legislative procedures, extends the supervisory role of the Court of Justice to include the measures relating to the AFSJ from which it had hitherto been excluded and, finally, gives individual citizens the right to bring actions before European courts,

- the fact that terrorism is the main problem affecting the harmony and security of the people of Europe, now and above all in the future and that this is an essential motive for our conviction that the development of the AFSJ must become a genuine symbol and reference point for the significance of the added value provided by the Union in the fight against that evil,
 - the lack of a shared diagnosis on the means of dealing with the security problems affecting the people of Europe,
 - the fact that terrorism has not been seen as the priority problem affecting harmony and security for the people of Europe,
- F. alarmed at the shortcomings of the Member States and of the institutions in the implementation of the AFSJ which were criticised during the Convention's deliberations, in many European Council conclusions and in the Commission's periodic reports,
- G. whereas these shortcomings must be rectified immediately through appropriate reforms to be adopted in compliance with the Treaties in force and in the light of the policy objectives set out in the draft Constitutional Treaty, which is to be signed on the eve of the European Council,
- H. whereas, although Article 29 of the EU Treaty confers on the EU responsibility to 'provide citizens with a high level of safety within an area of freedom, security and justice', the EU's response has been more virtual than real, because of:
- the unanimity rule, which makes it very difficult to take binding decisions,
 - the excuse of sovereign powers, which often conceals corporate reflexes,
 - the absence of a clear division of roles between the EU and its Member States in terms of the various policies (immigration, judicial cooperation and data protection) as well as between Member States (involved in full or in part in cooperation under the Schengen Accord),
 - the absence of credible and properly structured follow-up procedures,
 - the absence of credible security provisions in the event of a crisis or of a refusal to cooperate,
- I. whereas it is impossible:
- to dissociate the implementation of the AFSJ from a policy of protection and promotion of fundamental rights and citizenship within the Union and
 - to dissociate the principle of mutual recognition from a minimum level of harmonisation aimed at creating mutual confidence,
- J. whereas it is necessary to anticipate all the new Constitution's provisions proposing wider application of codecision and of qualified majority voting every time that the treaty in force offers the legal possibility of so doing,
- K. regretting that, over the last five years, some Member States within the Council have opposed the establishment of standards of protection of citizens' rights and individual citizens and that the lack of such standards has often been cited (sometimes even by the same Member States) as a reason for blocking mutual recognition,
- L. convinced that the pragmatic solutions proposed by certain Member States will not succeed in solving the actual problems posed by the development of the AFSJ unless there is clear agreement on a common set of principles, as shown by the failure to make any serious progress on the question of data protection,
- M. alarmed at the lack of entirely appropriate measures to combat the threat of terrorism and to meet the challenges posed to citizens' freedoms, and convinced that 'the concept of national security and public order needs to be given a European dimension, so that Member States treat a threat to any other Member State's national security or public order as a threat to their own national security or public order' ⁽¹⁾,

N. aware of its overriding responsibility to protect European citizens' rights and their security, and deploring the lack of transparency and of democracy in the planning and decision-making procedures within the AFSJ, with the result that the European Parliament and national parliaments are often confronted with a fait accompli,

1. Recommends that, when defining the future of the AFSJ, the European Council and the Council base their actions on the following three general requirements:

(a) enhancing the legitimacy of the AFSJ:

- by determining, in keeping with the spirit of the Constitution and of the agreements already concluded on the implementation of the Treaty of Nice, to use the codecision procedure, to use qualified majority voting in the Council and to extend the jurisdiction of the Court to cover the AFSJ, initially for immigration measures (Article 67 of the EC Treaty) and, subsequently, for measures connected with combating terrorism and international crime (Article 42 of the EU Treaty),
- by ensuring that the institutions of the Union comply with the same standards of strictness as regards freedom, democracy and the rule of law as they expect from the Member States,
- by immediately applying the principle of transparency to legislative debates in the Council as well to the transposition into national law of the measures taken by the Union (adapting to this end Regulation (EC) No 1049/2001⁽¹⁾ and the rules of procedure of the Council and of the Commission),
- by providing for systematic consultation of Parliament on any international agreement concluded by the Union on judicial cooperation in criminal and police matters, as well as on any proposed common position with regard to the AFSJ, a particularly necessary step given that such documents are not subject to scrutiny by the national parliaments,
- by involving the European Parliament and national parliaments fully and in good time in the drafting and updating of the legislative and operational programme in the AFSJ (Article III-258 of the draft Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe);

(b) promoting fundamental rights and freedoms through policies linked to the AFSJ and therefore:

- taking into account in the next action plan not only the policy objectives defined at Tampere which fall within the remit of the Justice and Home Affairs Council but also all other policies associated in the current Treaties with fundamental rights, citizenship, the protection of minorities, the fight against discrimination, the promotion of transparency, and data protection,
- raising awareness of rights relating to European citizenship, in agreement with the Member States, so that no European citizens deem themselves foreigners in any country of the Union,
- ensuring systematic training in European law for judges, lawyers and police officers responsible for ensuring respect for the rule of law, since every national judge or national police officer is also a European judge or a European police officer,
- calling for the early establishment of a European fundamental rights agency to serve European and national institutions and to be responsible for a systematic evaluation of current fundamental rights policies throughout the EU, also with regard to Article 7 of the EU Treaty, this agency being subject to the principles, procedures and controls applicable to Community agencies,
- calling for the early establishment by the Commission of a European aid office for the victims of terrorism, as a point of reference and contact at European level for citizens suffering from the violation of their fundamental rights as a result of the terrorist threat menacing Europe and the rest of the world,
- restoring through new legislative proposals the balance between security imperatives and respect for fundamental rights,

Thursday 14 October 2004

- calling for prior monitoring for respect for fundamental rights (as laid down by the Charter of Fundamental Rights of the Union) of any legislative act of the Union or of the Community,
 - promoting, in order to enhance mutual trust, a culture of fundamental rights within the EU, allowing for permanent dialogue between the highest courts, public administrations and law professionals, as well as the development of information exchange and discussion networks between judges, administrations and research workers,
 - strengthening the concept of Union citizenship and including guarantees for the freedom of movement of Union citizens and their family members and registered partners of either gender,
 - guaranteeing a common level of fundamental rights protection throughout the Union, whilst promoting mutual recognition and better judicial cooperation between Member States, as well as the adoption of common minimum standards for certain aspects of procedural law;
- (c) credibility both at Union level and in terms of the Member States' response: This implies that the guidelines of 5 November 2004 will include a credible timescale for each objective, the setting up of a monitoring group (involving the European Parliament and the national parliaments) and the establishment of sufficiently ambitious objectives, such as:
- the commitment to carry out systematic research into internal security requirements within the Union (see the PASR-2004 project), particularly in order to prevent catastrophes caused either by natural disasters or by terrorist attacks,
 - the creation at European level of a nucleus of operational provisions with regard to judicial and police cooperation in the form of decisions and framework decisions, based on the substance of the relevant conventions signed but not ratified by a majority of the Member States by 31 December 2004,
 - the enhancement at Union level of the Commission's role in respect of operational activities, including those under the responsibility of the anti-terrorism coordinator, guaranteeing the conditions for an operational partnership between the anti-terrorism coordinator and the Commission, and effective parliamentary scrutiny of the coordinator's activities; at all events, the status of the coordinator, currently working with the High Representative for the CFSP, must be reviewed when the latter is replaced by the Union Minister for Foreign Affairs, a Vice-President of the Commission,
 - the development of a coherent body of computerised networks, subject to respect for the legislation on data protection, allowing permanent mutual accessibility to national administrations responsible for security checks (e.g. reformatting of SIS II), for judicial cooperation (e.g. mutual accessibility of national police records) or for the movement of persons, including third-country nationals (see the VIS project),
 - the conversion, by a decision based on Article 30 of the EU Treaty, of Europol into a European agency subject to the principles, procedures and controls applicable to Community agencies,
 - the incorporation in decisions and framework decisions of all the measures on judicial and police cooperation that appear in the conventions signed but not ratified by the Member States,
 - the definition of procedures for the acquisition, processing and monitoring, including parliamentary and judicial monitoring, of intelligence information,
 - the identification, in recognition of the fact that there are common internal problems and that an external policy might thus be possible, of the main areas which the EU must address in earnest, such as asylum, immigration and terrorism, such identification joining in common cause the Commission and the Justice and Home Affairs Council,
 - the adoption of data protection standards and the establishment of a joint data protection authority which would act as an umbrella organisation at European level for the national authorities responsible for this area,
 - the submission of the Union's executive authorities responsible for the collection and processing of confidential information to the democratic control of Parliament in ways similar to those exercised at national level in most of the Member States;

Thursday 14 October 2004

2. Recommends to the European Council and to the Council the following specific objectives to be attained over the next five years:

- (a) with regard to immigration policy, defining a coherent legislative framework with a view to the attainment of six objectives:
- establishing a coherent immigration policy in order to develop legal routes to migration, which might in particular reduce the incentives for illegal immigration,
 - meeting the new demographic and economic challenges currently faced by the Union, taking full account of the Member States' reception capacities,
 - recognising that migrants do not merely represent a source of temporary labour which can be used to remedy imbalances, and instead giving due consideration to the long-term contribution they can make to our societies,
 - supporting the social, cultural and political integration of migrants through appropriate measures and funding,
 - incorporating in decisions and framework decisions all the provisions of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, as adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 18 December 1990,
 - establishing a coherent framework of international cooperation with the countries of origin;
- (b) with regard to the policy on the fight against illegal immigration, creating an appropriate legislative framework with a view to the attainment of the following three objectives:
- harmonising among the Member States the concept of illegal immigration, vital to the forging of a common approach,
 - setting up a common policy on combating illegal immigration and preventing clandestine employment by punishing traffickers,
 - setting up a common policy on combating all forms of trafficking in human beings;
- (c) with regard to repatriation policy, defining, under the codecision procedure, in accordance with the commitments made pursuant to Declaration No 5 on Article 67 of the EC Treaty and on the basis of respect for the Geneva Convention, a repatriation policy, in agreement with the countries of origin or destination, aimed at ensuring common standards of protection for repatriated persons and obliging Member States to respect the dignity and physical integrity of persons expelled under repatriation operations;
- (d) with regard to asylum policy, defining a uniform status and a common asylum procedure, as provided for at Tampere and confirmed by the draft Constitutional Treaty, while strengthening the measures for the protection of refugees or persons requiring humanitarian aid and ensuring the full exercise of their individual and social rights, especially to health, education and employment; also points out that the legal framework that must be respected by the Union and its Member States to the benefit of such persons cannot be called into question by international agreements, whether they are negotiated by the Union and/or its Member States; with regard to that policy, drawing lessons from the experience gained with the Sangatte centre and taking account of the concerns expressed by organisations which defend the rights of migrants, in particular by the International Federation of Human Rights Leagues, which are calling on the Union not to shirk its responsibilities under the Geneva Convention and not to run the risk of creating a legal vacuum with regard to persons who are among the most deprived on the planet;
- (e) with regard to judicial cooperation, encouraging mutual recognition, which implies the adoption of measures favouring the development of mutual trust between judicial authorities and citizens as well as between judicial authorities themselves:
- with regard to judicial cooperation in civil matters, adopting measures bringing into line family law, the legal framework for inheritance and the other fields at present covered by the minimum rules established under the Hague Conference on Private International Law,

Thursday 14 October 2004

- with regard to judicial cooperation in criminal matters, adopting measures defining the essential elements of the offences set out in Article 2 of Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA⁽¹⁾ on the European arrest warrant and the surrender procedures between Member States and adopting measures defining the minimum guarantees to be provided for persons who are charged and persons held in custody; in the same field there is also a need to give a new impetus to Eurojust with the objective of creating a European Public Prosecutor's Office with powers extending beyond the protection of the Union's financial interests alone;
 - (f) carrying out, by the end of 2005, a precise, public assessment of the implementation of the counter-terrorism action plan and its relationship with the corresponding national and international plans, and its full compliance with respect for individual freedoms;
 - (g) carrying out a precise, public assessment of the practical effects of the existence of individual schemes specific to certain Member States and preparing the ground for their progressive integration into European law;
 - (h) setting up an integrated border management system allowing for cooperation between the European Agency, which is to be established, and the national bodies responsible for the control of individuals and goods;
3. Congratulates the Dutch Presidency on its commitment to adopt, by 1 April 2005 at the latest, the decision providing for all measures falling under Title IV of the Treaty establishing the European Community to be dealt with by qualified majority and in accordance with the codecision procedure; calls on the European Council to endorse this suggestion;
4. Instructs its President to forward this recommendation to the Council, to the European Council and, for information, to the Commission, as well as to the governments and parliaments of the Member States.

Situation in Georgia

European Parliament resolution on Georgia

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement between the European Communities and their Member States, of the one part, and Georgia, of the other part⁽¹⁾, which entered into force in 1999,
 - having regard to its previous resolutions on relations with the countries of the region, notably its recommendation of 26 February 2004 to the Council on EU policy towards the South Caucasus⁽²⁾,
 - having regard to the emerging Wider Europe — Neighbourhood policy of the European Union, in which the region is included, and the stated long-term objective of the countries in the region to play a full part in European integration and cooperation,
 - having regard to Rule 103(4) of its Rules of Procedure,
- A. welcoming the on-going political and economic reforms, the measures to establish solid and efficient democratic institutions, and the efforts made by the government to tackle large-scale corruption, thereby creating a peaceful and prosperous Georgia that can contribute to stability in the region and the rest of Europe,
- B. deploring the recent outbreaks of violence in the region of South Ossetia and the escalation of violence which have led to deaths, injury and serious material damage,

- C. whereas the lack of progress in conflict resolution in the regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia is an obstacle to the development of Georgia,
- D. whereas the European Union must increase its support for the on-going efforts to help resolve the conflicts in Georgia and the South Caucasus region, in cooperation with the Organisation for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) and other actors,
- E. whereas the 'presidential elections' which took place in Abkhazia on 3 October 2004 must be considered illegitimate and unacceptable in the absence of an agreement on the final status of Abkhazia, whereas these elections were based on an electorate of 115 000 persons and whereas more than 300 000 Georgians had previously been disenfranchised through expulsion from their homes in the region,
- F. deploring the recent statements of the Russian authorities about the use of pre-emptive strikes in the South Caucasus as part of Russia's security doctrine and stressing the indispensable role Russia should play in the solution of the existing conflicts,
1. Expresses its full support for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Georgia, and draws attention to the need to arrive at a solution for the conflicts in Abkhazia and South Ossetia through negotiations and confidence-building, exclusively by peaceful means, respecting the right of the peoples of Georgia to determine their own cultural, social, economic and political aims;
 2. Requests the Georgian Government to define its commitment, which appears to be a precondition for achieving a peaceful solution of conflicts and national unification based on consent, towards the autonomy of Abkhazia and South Ossetia;
 3. Insists that full demilitarisation, with the exception of the OSCE's Joint Peace-Keeping Force, of the South Ossetian conflict zone is a precondition for a lasting peaceful solution of the conflict in this region; asks the Council to give its support to a further enhancement of the effectiveness of the OSCE mission in this region;
 4. Rejects the 'presidential elections' in Abkhazia as illegitimate and calls on the Commission and Council to give their support to an intensification of the UN-led negotiation process in the Georgian-Abkhazian conflict;
 5. Welcomes the start of the ESDP Rule of Law Mission to Georgia; believes that the mission represents a step forward in relations between the EU and Georgia and in the latter's progress towards establishing deeper and more effective relations with the EU and sharing the objectives of the European Neighbourhood Policy;
 6. Calls on the European Union and the Presidency-in-Office to provide the EU Special Representative for the South Caucasus with all necessary resources to make his action effective and visible and to take further decisive action to secure the EU's policy goals in the region, including a willingness to mediate in the conflicts;
 7. Calls on the Council and Commission to fully involve the Russian Federation in this process of securing stability through political negotiations and calls on the Government of the Russian Federation to refrain from any action which might endanger this process; calls on the Council and Commission to include the issue of Georgia's territorial integrity in the agenda for the dialogue with Russia within the framework of the Partnership and Cooperation Agreement;
 8. Urges the Russian Federation to respect its commitments given at the 1999 OSCE Istanbul Summit on the reduction and withdrawal of Russian military forces from Georgia and supports Georgia's commitment as expressed by President Saakashvili at the UN that foreign troops would not move in once the Russian military withdrew;
 9. Calls for active EU involvement in the development of a series of initiatives to break the deadlocks in the region;

Thursday 14 October 2004

10. Welcomes, in this respect, the agreement reached on a future meeting between the Prime Minister of Georgia, Zurab Zhvania, and the separatist leader of South Ossetia, Eduard Kokoiti; calls on the Council to follow developments closely, making every effort to facilitate dialogue and prevent the tense situation from escalating;

11. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council, the Commission, the Presidency-in-Office, the Secretary General of the United Nations, the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe, the Secretary General of NATO, the President and Parliament of Georgia, and the de-facto authorities in South Ossetia and Abkhazia.

Generalised system of preferences

European Parliament resolution on the Communication from the Commission to the Council, the European Parliament and the European Economic and Social Committee 'Developing countries, international trade and sustainable development: the function of the Community's generalised system of preferences (GSP) for the ten-year period from 2006 to 2015' (COM(2004)0461)

The European Parliament,

- having regard to the Commission communication (COM(2004)0461),
- having regard to Council Regulation (EC) No 2501/2001 of 10 December 2001 applying a scheme of generalised tariff preferences for the period from 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2004 ⁽¹⁾,
- having regard to Council Regulation (EC) No 2211/2003 of 15 December 2003 amending Regulation (EC) No 2501/2001 and extending it to 31 December 2005 ⁽²⁾,
- having regard to its position of 29 November 2001 on a scheme of generalised tariff preferences for the period 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2004 ⁽³⁾,
- having regard to its position of 4 December 2003 on a scheme of generalised tariff preferences for the period from 1 January 2002 to 31 December 2004 and extending it to 31 December 2005 ⁽⁴⁾,
- having regard to the Communication from the Commission 'Towards a reinforced culture of consultation and dialogue — General principles and minimum standards for consultation of interested parties by the Commission' (COM(2002)0704),
- having regard to the Doha Declaration, adopted by the Fourth WTO Ministerial Conference, held from 9 to 14 November 2001,
- having regard to the outcome of the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD), held in Johannesburg (South Africa) from 26 August to 4 September 2002,
- having regard to the Monterrey Consensus adopted at the International Conference on Financing for Development, which was held in Monterrey (Mexico) from 18 to 22 March 2002,
- having regard to Rule 108(5) of the Rules of Procedure,

Thursday 14 October 2004

- A. whereas, since its creation in 1971, the Generalised System of Preferences (GSP) has been a key instrument of the EU's development policy as well as its trade policy,
- B. whereas the Commission's Communication sets out new ten-year guidelines for the GSP, on the basis of which a series of three-year regulations will ensue,
- C. whereas any change in the current GSP scheme will directly affect, positively and negatively, a wide variety of stakeholders,
- D. whereas the EU has committed itself to undertake meaningful Sustainability Impact Assessments of the major political initiatives ex ante, but still has to do so in the case of the proposed reformed GSP scheme,
- E. whereas the GSP utilisation rate, defined as the volume of imports actually benefiting from tariff preferences as a percentage of the total volume of trade eligible under the GSP, has increased in recent years to not more than 52,5 % in 2002, which has to be improved, particularly in the ACP countries,
- F. whereas the WTO India Appellate Body, in its ruling of 7 April 2004 on the Community's GSP scheme, stated that developed countries may grant different tariffs to products originating from different GSP beneficiaries, provided that such differential tariff treatment meets the remaining conditions in the Enabling Clause and thus ensures non-discrimination against countries with the same development, financial and trade needs which the benefits are intended to address,
- G. whereas the GSP is the broadest preferential system offered by the developed countries and whereas, moreover, this leading position will be consolidated over the coming years, following the accession of the ten new Member States,
 1. Welcomes the objectives set out by the Communication and endorses the Commission's resolve to improve the current GSP through the simplification, stabilisation and clarification of the arrangements, the concentration of preferences on those developing countries most in need, and the enhancement of the sustainable development component;
 2. Notes that, in order to achieve its declared objectives, the Commission proposes far-reaching reforms of the current GSP system, such as a reduction in the arrangements from five to three, a new graduation system based only on market share criteria and the simplification of rules of origin;
 3. Regrets that this important Communication, which sets out new ten-year guidelines for the GSP, does not refer to any prior thorough evaluation of the functioning and impact of the current GSP, and requests the Commission to provide decision-makers with solid elements of information on both the need for reform and the potential for improvement;
 4. Regrets that the Commission's Communication was not the result of a proper stakeholder consultation and does not come sufficiently in advance to allow for meaningful consultations in anticipation of the expected release of the proposal for the next regulation;
 5. Recalls that customs duties have steadily fallen to an all-time low and that further tariff reductions should be agreed upon as a result of WTO negotiations on the Doha Development Agenda, and notes that the effects of these reductions notably on the Least Developed Countries should be addressed by the new GSP system;
 6. Stresses that, in order to improve its impact on the special needs of developing countries, the next GSP Regulation should:
 - (a) grant preferences in conformity with the comparative advantage and export interests of developing countries themselves, especially taking account of the most vulnerable sectors of society,
 - (b) extend preferential access to a wide range of new products and transfer a significant number of products currently classified as 'sensitive' to the 'non-sensitive' category,

Thursday 14 October 2004

- (c) consider the importance of food sovereignty and the right of the countries concerned to protect their agriculture in the implementation of the GSP;
 - (d) ensure that the new graduation system applied does not have a significant negative impact on the developing countries concerned;
7. Calls on the Commission to explore the possibility of increasing the preferential margin for sensitive products;
8. Welcomes the overall objective of simplifying the graduation mechanism, but notes with concern that the new graduation system outlined by the Commission is based solely on market share criteria, disregarding development and poverty indicators, and believes that such a system could discriminate against large yet poor exporters;
9. Endorses the promotion of sustainable development as a key component of the GSP; insists on the fundamental importance of a single system of additional concessions (GSP plus) being a simple and predictable arrangement that is compatible with the WTO Enabling Clause and thus provides for objective criteria for the selection and evaluation of beneficiary countries;
10. Insists that it is crucial that, to qualify for 'GSP Plus', beneficiary countries must have both ratified and implemented the relevant international conventions, and that the forthcoming Regulation must specify credible procedures by which this can be assessed, involving the European Parliament and other stakeholders, e.g. social partners, and by which investigations can be initiated in case of evidence of inadequate implementation; stresses that the implementation level of human rights within the addressed countries must become a decision-making criterion;
11. Suggests that the Regulation should provide for the possibility of withdrawing 'GSP Plus' preferences in respect of specific sectors in the event of serious and persistent violations of the eligibility criteria;
12. Insists that the EU should commit itself to providing development assistance towards capacity building in order to help developing countries to qualify for 'GSP Plus', failing which the standards set could act as non-tariff barriers and a large number of countries could miss out on the potential benefits of the system;
13. Welcomes the Communication's emphasis on simplification, but draws attention to the complexity of implementing the proposed formula ('free-trade agreement (FTA) exclusion clause');
14. Notes that rules of origin and related administrative procedures have been demonstrated to be one of the main reasons for the under-utilisation of GSP trade preferences, particularly by Least Developed Countries;
15. Welcomes the Commission's determination to reform the system of origin rules in form, substance and procedures;
16. Calls on the Commission to explore the merits, particularly with regard to LDCs, of the expansion of partial regional cumulation of origin to cross-regional cumulation and full or global cumulation;
17. Calls on the Commission to make progress in the harmonisation of the different systems of origin rules applied by the existing trade agreements (i.e. GSP/EBA, FTAs, EPAs);
18. Requests that, as established in the WTO Doha Declaration, in the Monterrey Consensus and the conclusions of the World Summit on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg, developing countries be provided with adequate technical assistance, especially regarding the self-policing arrangements of the GSP plus, for the purpose of building the institutional and regulatory capacity required to capture the benefits from international trade and preferential arrangements;
19. Welcomes the proposal for a detailed GSP evaluation every three years, taking into consideration multilateral negotiations, and stresses that this must include an impact assessment on stakeholders, in particular LDCs and the populations of developing countries;

Thursday 14 October 2004

20. Concludes that, although full support is given to the objectives stated by the Commission, further clarification as to the exact details and implementation mechanisms of the different arrangements is required for Parliament to be able to carry out a more informed and definitive assessment;
 21. Calls on the Council and the Commission to start the consultation process on the new GSP first implementing regulation sufficiently in advance to allow for proper involvement and consultation of the European Parliament, partner countries and other interested parties;
 22. Instructs its President to forward this resolution to the Council and the Commission.
