Electronic editions of the OJ (e-OJ) published after 1 July 2013 are authentic (have legal force). See Regulation (EU) No 216/2013. The paper version no longer has any legal value - except when we are unable to publish an OJ online because of unforeseen disruption to our IT systems.

Find paper versions of the OJ with legal effect

The e-OJ has an advanced electronic signature which guarantees its authenticity, integrity and inalterability.

Verify the electronic signature and authentic character of the e-OJ:
- CheckLex verification application
- Help with using CheckLex.

Find out more about the signatures used for the e-OJ:
- signature policy – version 2
- Qualified certificates that the e-signatures are based on